Mrs. Kennedy leaves Look lawyer's office

★ ★ ★

Script of Book 'Too Painful' For Jacqueline

NEW YORK (AP) — A lawyer for Mrs. John Kennedy looked at the manuscript of the book Death of a President, for the first time Saturday. He said he took Mrs. Kennedy along with him, but she did not read it because she felt it would be too painful.

Simon H. Rifkind, who filed a suit Friday in Manhattan Supreme Court on behalf of Mrs. Kennedy to block publication of the book, said he viewed the manuscript at the Wall Street office of David Peck, a lawyer for Cowles Communications, one of the defendants.

"I asked him — Peck — to expose to my view the manuscript of the story which I had never seen before," said Rifkind. "He was glad to exhibit it to me.

"I wanted to have Mrs. Kennedy along to answer any questions that might come up. She did not want to read it because it would be too painful. From time to time, she answered questions."

Rifkind said he spent "many hours" looking at the manuscript, and that Mrs. Kennedy was with him a good portion of the time. She left, however, before he did.

Meanwhile, a lawyer for another defendant in the case said, "There's never been a case like this before."

Defence Plan

The lawyer, Edward S. Greenbaum, 76, representing Harper and Row, said Saturday he would file an answer to Mrs. Kennedy's suit next week, probably Thursday.

"You'll know what tack our defence will take when you see our answer," said Greenbaum, Harper's counsel for 40 years.

Mrs. Kennedy asked the Supreme Court in Manhattan Friday to bar publication by Harper and Row and Look magazine of William Manchester's account of the assassination of President Kennedy and the events surrounding it.

Little Time for Protests

Truck Rate Hike Sought

2 Per Cent Jump Forecast In Island Living Cost

Haddock

By BILL STAVDAL

A freight rate increase averaging 10 per cent is being sought by trucking firms which supply Vancouver Island.

The increase, if granted by the Public Utilities Commission, would raise the average cost of all goods imported from the mainland by an estimated two per cent, effective Jan. 16.

Rate increases on freight shipped between Island points and from the Island to the Gulf Islands are also being asked by the truckers.

Timing of the application drew criticism Saturday from chamber of commerce spokesmen up and down the Island. There are about 10 working days between Dec. 22, when the proposed rate revisions will be made public, and Jan. 6, deadline for submissions to the PUC.

"Holy cow!" he exclaimed. It was Mr. Haddock, who calculated a two-per-cent increase in the cost of living for Islanders on the basis of a 10-per-cent freight rate increase.

He said he would put the chamber's staff to work Monday investigating the matter.

There will be little time to register protests, he pointed out.

A public notice which will appear soon advises that details of the proposed revisions will be available on or after Dec. 22 at the offices of the freight companies applying for the increase.

★ ★ ★

Representations must be made to the superintendent of the motor carrier branch of the Public Utilities Commission by Jan. 6. If the PUC approves, rates will increase Jan. 16.

"I don't think that is right. I can't believe they would put this in so quickly," said Mr. Haddock.

Jordan Crisis

Israel Demands 'Other' Arabs Stay at Home

REHOVOT, Israel (UPI)—An Israeli government leader warned Saturday night Israel would not "tolerate" stationing of other Arab troops in Jordan.

Labor Minister Allon, tipped as probable defence minister in a forecast reshuffle of Premier Eshkol's cabinet, said "Israel could not suffer the entry of Egyptian, Syrian or Iraqi troops into Jordanian territory," especially on the west bank of the Jordan River on Israel's border.

ALONG BORDER

The Arab defence council in Cairo last week called for Jordan to allow troops of other Arab countries to be stationed along the Israeli border.

Allon said "We don't rattle sabres but we do explain our stand. Should new troops enter Jordan this would be a far-reaching breach of the armistice agreements and they should realize the alternative in Jordan is not only between Hussein and Nasser—there's a third one . . ."

Allon let the warning rest there.

Jordan's young King Hussein has opposed permanently basing troops from the left-leaning United Arab Republic, Syria or Iraq in Jordan. He is believed to consider they would pose a threat to his own throne as well as to peaceful relations with Israel.

"No Arab state would make war on Israel without Cairo's consent, while Syria would provide the main base of acts of terror against Israel," he said.

PEACE SOUGHT

Israel seeks peace and co-operation with every Arab state regardless of its type of regime, he said. Israel would agree to an interim arrangement which, although not a peace accord finally ending the state of war which has existed with the Arabs since 1949, would prevent the outbreak of new hostilities.

93,000 Railmen Settling Wages

MONTREAL (CP) — Representatives of about 93,000 railway workers have concluded a year of negotiations by reaching a proposed agreement with the CNR and the CPR on a new wage contract, spokesmen for both sides said Saturday night.

Terms of the proposed agreement will be submitted to members early next week for a vote.

It was understood the contract, if approved, would give the workers a wage boost of about 24 per cent over three years.

1,000 Flee Before Explosion

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (AP) — More than 1,000 persons were evacuated from Lambert-St. Louis Municipal Airport Saturday night, minutes before a time-bomb made of four sticks of dynamite exploded in the east dome area of the terminal.

The blast shattered seven large glass windows and caused other minor damages, but no one was reported injured, police said. Operations returned to normal within an hour.

James L. Williams, an airport custodian, said he found a shoebox containing the dynamite and an alarm clock on a row of chairs near the counters of Braniff, Ozark and Central airlines.

Lost in Space

Valuable Astrobugs Fail to Come Home

It carried 10,000,000 bug and plant specimens testing the effects man might experience on long-ranging flights in space.

The mission of Biosatellite I went wrong on its fourth day of orbit with failure of a retro-rocket to fire for a planned capsule recovery over the Pacific 400 miles north of Honolulu.

Instead of descending into the atmosphere with a parachute, the biology laboratory capsule only separated from its spacecraft, a National Aeronautics and Space Administration spokesman reported.

The capsule and its cargo continued in uncontrolled orbit. Its eventual fate will be to drift into the atmosphere and burn up with re-entry heat.

"We cannot now pinpoint the reason for the recovery failure," the NASA spokesman said.

The capsule was launched into perfect orbit Wednesday from Cape Kennedy, Fla., as the first mission in a $100,000,000 "bring-'em - back - alive" Biosatellite program. Five more launches are planned.

UNION CHIEF FREED

VANCOUVER (CP) — Jeffrey James Power, one of four union leaders jailed for contempt of court, is out of prison Saturday after a special amnesty was granted Friday by Solicitor-General Pennell.

There were no immediate reports from Ottawa explaining Power's release that came after Mr. Pennell told the Commons earlier Friday he would not decide the matter until Monday.

However, Power walked out of prison later in the day.

There was no word on a plea from the B.C. Federation of Labor for clemency for the three other men.

Power, president of the Boiler Makers Union, Paddy Neale, secretary of the Vancouver Labor Council, Tom Clarke, an International Woodworkers of America official and Art O'Keefe, former business agent of the Electrical Workers Union, were jailed for demonstrations at the Lenkurt Electric Co. plant in neighboring Burnaby last May.

More Asian Help To South Vietnam

WASHINGTON (AP) — More aid to South Vietnam, including more troops, will come from several countries, Secretary of State Dean Rusk predicted Saturday on his return from a globe-girdling trip. (See Page 6.)

He declined to give more details, and said it was up to the countries concerned to make any announcement. However, he indicated the troop addition would come from an Asian country.

"I think there will be more aid from a number of countries," Rusk said.

Asked if that would include more military personnel, he said: "I think there will be some more troops there, yes."

South Korea, the Philippines, Australia, New Zealand and Thailand are countries now listed as having military personnel in South Vietnam.

Delta Hard Hit

Flood Alert On Mainland

VANCOUVER (CP) — Greater Vancouver municipalities are on flood alert after the weatherman predicted no end in sight to one of the worst rainy seasons in the area's history.

Municipal works departments in most areas had crews on weekend standby in case drainage systems could not cope with the downpour and began to overflow. (See also Page 21.)

One of the hardest hit areas was Delta, a low-lying area south of Vancouver, where Reeve Clarence Taylor said about 4,000 acres of cropland were under water.

He said there could be heavy damage to strawberry plants and beet crops.

The Vancouver area has measured more than 16 inches of rain that has fallen 41 days and 41 nights since it began Nov. 7. The rainfall has ranged from a trace to a downpour during that time.

Defection Over

MALMO, Sweden (UPI)—Harold Koch, a former Chicago priest who defected to Russia three months ago, has left the Soviet Union and says he wants to return to the U.S. after hearing his father is seriously ill.

Shooters Defy Rain, Fog

★ ★ ★

There were about 80 prize-winners, but the biggest winner of all was the 500 Fund, which annually receives a boost from the two-day turkey shoot.

★ ★ ★

Using the new electric shooting trap, which was installed at the end of November, about 80 squads of five each shot their rounds, with a ham or turkey being given to the winner in each squad.

★ ★ ★

Trapshooting captain Sam McCleave reported that despite both fog and rain, the turnout was as good as last year's.

He expects even more to go to the shoot today, possibly as many as 175 squads, especially if the weather co-operates.

The second day has always been the time when more Victorians have turned out to shoot for a chance at a turkey, and at the same time know that win or lose they are helping the 500 Fund add a little joy to Christmas, for some of the city's neediest.

★ ★ ★

The club has already contributed $300 to the Colonist fund — to be divided among the 500 families chosen and thereby swell their cheques on Christmas Eve by 60 cents each.

Costly Joke Irks U.K.

Committee of the Hole Struck

LONDON (AP)—A high-level committee consisting of a government minister and 14 experts has been set up to get to the bottom of the hole problem.

Millions of pounds of taxpayers' money is spent every year, it seems, on adding holes and filling them up again.

★ ★ ★

All the nationalized public utilities are in the hole-digging business. And they all want to dig their own holes.

★ ★ ★

Then the men from the gas board come and dig it all up again, lay their gas pipes, fill in the holes and go away.

By this time, the water board men usually come back for a second time. It goes on and on.

It has become a sort of national joke. A movie company even made a slapstick silent film about it called A House of Your Own.

But with a big economy drive under way and the prime minister calling for greater productivity, it didn't seem so funny to the minister of public building and works, Reginald Prentice.

He wants all the people who dig holes to co-ordinate their work so that they can all use the same holes. That way, he contends, instead of having to dig the hole four or five times and fill it in each time, they need only one hole—with a considerable saving in money and manpower.

★ ★ ★

So, in the best civil service and government tradition, he has appointed a committee to investigate the problem of holes.

Appeal Fails

Ex-King, Nasser Make Up

In Cairo Today

CAIRO (UPI) — King Faisal of Saudi Arabia has appealed unsuccessfully to former king Saud, the brother he deposed two years ago, to reconsider his decision to move to Cairo, it was reported Saturday.

The ailing, 65-year-old Saud is scheduled to arrive here today from Athens with his family and entourage on two chartered United Arab Airways jetliners.

Saud and U.A.R. President Nasser were once better enemies. In 1958, Nasser accused Saud of financing a $5,600,000 assassination plot against him.

Faisal, who became king after a power struggle in November of 1964, also has been feuding with Nasser. For one thing, Nasser sent Egyptian troops to support the republican regime in Yemen while Faisal backed the royalists.

The weekly newspaper Akhbar El-Yom said Faisal dispatched a special envoy to Athens, where Saud has been living in exile, to plead with him to change his mind.

CERTAIN PROBLEMS

Saud's arrival in Cairo might "damage Faisal's prestige and international position, especially when the Arab area is exposed to certain problems due to policy," the newspaper said.

This was apparently a reference to the split between Saudi delegates supporting Jordan and U.A.R. delegates at the recent turbulent Arab League conference in Cairo on future strategy against Isreal.

U.A.R. is known to oppose the more moderate views of Jordan's King Hussein in the continuing conflict with Israel.

Representatives of the militant Palestine Liberation Organization, backed openly by Syria and tacitly by the U.A.R., attacked Hussein for "softness" on Israel and his unwillingness to allow PLO activities within his borders.

Saud's return to Cairo would end a long period of European exile for the former monarch, which began with the palace power showdown with Faisal.

LONG SERIES

Saud said he was returning at the invitation of "my brother" Nasser, after a long series of reconciliatory letters. Quarters were being prepared for him at one of Cairo's swankest hotels.

The Nile River side of Shepheard's Hotel resounded with hammer blows as workmen prepared for the arrival of Saud and his 45-member entourage.

Saud will occupy the hotel's eighth floor suite once used by Yugoslav President Tito, and he will have movie actress Anita Ekberg as a ninth-floor neighbor. The seventh floor also has been reserved for the entourage.

A new elevator marked "special King" is being installed. The doors to the regular elevators have been locked on the seventh and eighth floors.

Saud, who ordered a five-foot-wide bed instead of the hotel's normal bed of three-feet, will share the eighth floor with his harem.

The hotel installed a special door leading into its night club for Saud and a special area of the eastern dining room was reserved for him. One downstairs dinding room will be completely sealed from the public while Saud is staying in the hotel.

Truck Rate Hike Sought

"It's a bad time of year to bring it up," said Harold McKelg, president of the Campbell River Chamber of Commerce. "Maybe this is the reason for the timing."

Mr. McKelg forecast that a rate increase would curtail development of the Island.

Pat Frumento, president of the Associated Chambers of Commerce of Vancouver Island, reserved comment. There have been many increases in costs to freight haulers, he noted.

Norman C. Jackson, president of Saanich Freight Service Ltd. and Sidney Freight Service (1964) Ltd., gave cost rises as the reason for the rate hike request.

"Our major expense is labor," he said, and added that truck drivers had been getting a raise every six months.

Cost of repairs and tires had been spiralling too, he said.

MINIMUMS TOO

He said "quite an increase" is being sought on minimum shipments — under 100 pounds.

"The minimum rates haven't increased for years," he said.

Turkey Shoot for 500 Fund

These turkeys are ready for pan early to help Colonist 500 fund. Victoria Gun Club's annual two-day turkey shoot is being held at Metchosin Road grounds, this weekend. Glen Newman, 14, 1234 Palmer (left) and Rick Bate, 15, Thetis Lake Road, won bonanza Saturday. Shoot continues all day today, to help Colonist fund for the needy.

Alcoholic Psychopath Problem Needs More Than Home Care

Your Good Health

By JOSEPH MOLNER

Dear Dr. Molner: I am married to a psychopathic alcoholic. I had him put in jail for trying to kill me with a carving knife. Will he ever be normal? I am afraid that if I take him back the same thing will happen again. The doctors say he is a psychopath only when he drinks. How can this be? He has been in jail four times for attempted murder, but the charges were dropped. We have two children.—MRS. W.M.

There are plain alcoholics; there are psychopaths, and there are alcoholic psychopaths, who can control themselves when sober but not their dangerous urges when alcohol loosens their inhibitions.

We all have our individual faults and alcohol lets them take over. That is why some people are gay and happy when drinking, some morose, some fall asleep and some become belligerent and vicious.

And that is the extent to which I can answer you. It appears that if your husband avoids alcohol, he can live a decent life, but with his background of arrests, evidently he will not or cannot stop drinking.

So I think you will have to be guided by psychiatrists who study him very carefully. Changing a deep-rooted psychopathy is not easy, and keeping a person from drinking unless he deeply and sincerely wants to stop is likewise difficult.

The rest of your problem you had best put in the hands of an attorney and psychiatric consultants. Your life and that of your children may be at stake, and I strongly doubt that you have any chance of reforming this man by yourself.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have been told that a law was passed back in the 1920s that one doctor couldn't touch another doctor's patient, but I don't have much faith in my present doctor. — D.H.

There is no such law. You have a right to go to the doctor of your choice. However, it is not wise to consult two doctors at the same time without their knowledge, since they may then be working at cross purposes. But you always have the right to ask for another physician to act as consultant, or alternatively to leave your doctor and go to another instead. And every patient deserves to have a doctor in whom he or she has faith. (The doctor deserves it, too.)

* * *

Dear Dr. Molner: Is it harmful to sniff salt water in the nose? My husband is forever doing this. — MRS. W.H.

Sometimes it doesn't do any apparent harm. However, in some instances it may spread infection farther up into the nasal passages or the sinuses, which obviously is harmful. It is an old home remedy largely discarded now. It seldom if ever does any real good.

Rhodesians 'Can Cope' If Need Be

PARIS (UPI) — Rhodesian "rebel" Premier Ian Smith said in a television interview Saturday night that Rhodesians can cope with the sanctions imposed the United Nations."

"We don't welcome them," he said, "but we have been living with them for the past year and we can cope with them if we have to."

Smith said that the disagreement existing between Britain and his government was a "family matter that does not concern the United Nations."

He pointed out, however, that Rhodesia would become a republic should it leave the Commonwealth.

Smith also said he did not mind being called a "rebel."

He said British politicians were calling him this name because they were "losing."

"They call me a rebel but I don't think the British people think of me in this manner," he said.

Justice Saul S. Streit, ranking justice of the court, said he would "decide the matter shortly" after a Dec. 27 hearing.

Indirectly, the case also involves President Johnson, since it is widely reported that the book presents him in an unfavorable light.

The Manchester book was, in effect, commissioned by Mrs. Kennedy because she wanted an account assured of "accuracy, good taste and dignity."

In return for the co-operation of the Kennedys and others involved in the events surrounding the assassination, Manchester signed an agreement giving Mrs. Kennedy and Senator Kennedy the right to approve the work before publication, which was not to come before Nov. 22, 1968.

IT'S THE PLUMBER . . .
. . . WHO MAKE IT POSSIBLE

It wouldn't be an easy task, but then fighting fire never is.

But the department is geared for the eventuality they hope will never take place.

A fire in a high-rise would be fought from the inside where, when the apartment is being built, sprinkler systems and main stand-pipes are installed.

They didn't get there by chance. Each system was installed by a master craftsman, a union trained Journeyman Technician who knew his trades and was able to meet high fire insurance standards.

War Banned in Outer Space

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The General Assembly's main political committee approved unanimously Saturday night a treaty to ban outer space as an arena for nuclear war. This would be done by outlawing the orbiting of nuclear weapons, and use of the moon and other celestial bodies for military bases.

By its action the committee forwarded to the 122 - nation General Assembly a resolution commending the treaty for signature by all the nations of the world.

After the assembly acts on Monday, the treaty, reflecting a major U.S.-Soviet agreement in the over-all field of disarmament, will be open to signature and ratification in Washington, London and Moscow.

WIDE ADHERENCE

It will become effective with the ratification by five governments, including the United States, Britain and the Soviet Union.

The resolution asked the widest possible adherence to the treaty, already hailed by President Johnson as the most important development in arms control since the limited nuclear test ban treaty of 1963. Johnson announced U.S. - Soviet agreement to the outer space treaty nine days ago.

Prior to the vote the United States and the Soviet Union told the commitee the treaty represented a mfiestone in the quest for peace in the nuclear age, but both warned that major obstacles still remain.

The treaty is opn to all countries, including Communist China, East Germany, North Vietnam and North Korea, but a conference on peaceful uses of outer space to be held in Vienna in September of next year has been limited to UN member countries and members of its affiliated agencies.

In 17 articles, the treaty provides that outer space, including the moon and other celestial bodies, shall be free for peaceful use by all countries and subject to national appropriation by none.

It forbids the orbiting or stationing of nuclear weapons anywhere in outer space. It bars military bases, installations and fortifications and weapon testing on celestial bodies. It calls for aid to distressed astronauts as "envoys of mankind in outer space."

Tradition-Breaking Sicilian Case

Kidnapper for Love Imprisoned 11 Years

TRAPANI, Sicily (AP) — The son of a wealthy family was convicted Saturday of kidnapping and raping the reluctant girl he wanted to marry in a sensational case that rocked centuries-old Sicilian traditions.

MADE HISTORY

His act was part of an old Sicilian tradition of convincing a girl to marry. Had she said yes, the charges against Melodia would have been dropped. But she made Italian history and caused a nationwide sensation by saying: "I detest him. I'll never marry him."

Franca's act of refusal made her a heroine in the more modern cities of northern Italy — and a threatened outcast among the Mafia-minded elements of the south who insist tradition must be honored.

LOVE IMPORTANT

From the moment police found her captive in a hideaway a week after her kidnaping she insisted love was more important to her than custom. This virtually meant choosing spinsterhood, for in Sicily after a few hours in her abductor's company a girl is considered dishonored and no other Sicilian man would ever marry her.

So, even before the trial Franca entered the life of a shunned girl in her hometown of Alcamo in the Sicilian hills, and signs of Mafia threats against her family began to appear.

Her father's farm house was set afire, his vineyards were hacked down and the fields were ruined. He pleaded with Franca to wed Melodia to end the threats. She refused.

The three judges trying the case deliberated 7½ hours before returning the conviction. Twelve of Melodia's friends were accused of helping him abduct Franca. Five were acquitted. Seven received prison terms of four years and eight months each.

Heart-Shattering

Happy Bachelors Sang, Cooked — But No Girls Came

MONTALDEO, Italy (AP) — The women-starved bachelors of this tiny mountain village cooked an elaborate meal Saturday for the girls they hoped would answer their newspaper ads and come here to talk marriage. But by nightfall not a single girl had appeared.

All day long members of the Bachelors Club, wearing women's aprons and singing in happy anticipation, bustled about the large kitchen of the inn roasting chickens and turkeys and cooking spaghetti.

"What do you think?" they asked each other through the clouds of steam from the boiling pots. "Will the girls really come?"

* * *

Of the 480 residents of Montaldeo there are only 10 eligible girls for 110 bachelors. So the unmarried men placed newspaper ads inviting single girls from elsewhere to come to look them over, in a kind of marriage market.

As night fell without the sight of a girl, Stefano Pastorino, 33-year-old owner of the inn and a bachelor himself, sighed sadly and said:

"I am afraid the guys will have to dance with themselves if they want to dance, and take the food home."

* * *

Another bachelor, 38-year-old Recco Martino, said he couldn't understand why no one had shown up. He said the club had received nearly 500 letters from girls from all over Italy since the wives-wanted ad appeared in Italian papers Nov. 15. One letter came from Switzerland, another from England.

"We thought we'd sort of have a look at them and any other girls who might have wanted to come," he said. "But nobody came."

* * *

It was a heart-shattering blow for Montaldeo's lonely bachelors. None of them are getting any younger. Most are past 30.

"All we wanted to do," said one, "was to see a girl, talk to her and, if things looked okay, get married."

Some of the men wondered whether the village's remote location might have had something to do with the dismal showing. Montaldeo is 25 miles north of Genoa but so far off widely travelled roads it's hard to find.

Terror Abroad

VENEZUELA'S sadly hampered efforts to maintain and expand the democratic principles of government are hardly likely to succeed as long as Fidel Castro, the Cuban spider, weaves his cunning webs.

It is Castro's ambition, openly avowed, to bring communism to power in the Latin American states. If it seems like a paranoic sort of dream of a pistol-carrying, cigar-chewing dictator in an impoverished island state, it is nevertheless causing concern, particularly in Venezuela and Guatemala. In these two troubled countries in the past few days is to be seen alarming evidence of the strength of Castro-inspired terrorism.

In Guatemala there is a virtual state of civil war, with thousands of guerrillas fighting government forces in the hill country. There are indications, too, of American involvement. It would be nothing new. The United States is widely believed to have backed the coup against the Guatemalan government in 1963. Washington's concern is apparently due to the belief that the democratization of the country is moving too slowly.

Much the same state of affairs exists in Venezuela, where American investment provides a large part the foundation for the nation's economy.

Americans and American-owned businesses have been the targets of terrorists for years. In 1958 Vice-President Richard Nixon and Mrs. Nixon were attacked in Caracas by a Communist-led mob which tried to pull them from their car. Violent demonstrations were in progress during President John Kennedy's visit three years later.

The whole history of the country during the past 30 years and more has been one of violence, revolt and insurrection, and the cost in lives and to property has been astronomical.

What the ultimate outcome may be few would care to guess. But it seems likely that the violence of the past few days will hasten a determination to curb the Castro-trained terrorists, even with some sort of penalties directed against the Cuban regime which provides them with a breeding-ground. The Organization of American States, with or without United States encouragement, may be able to find economic weapons to use against that power which encourages lawlessness among its mainland neighbors and fosters rebellion wherever there is opportunity.

This is a problem of our hemisphere, and should be of more than usual concern to Canadians, as it certainly embarrasses our friends.

Damn Right

THE NAVY HAS LOST its flag, large numbers of its top ranking officers and technicians, its position as senior service and a multitude of its fighting ships. It now stands to lose its uniform, its identity and its traditions.

But if our new sea service is epitomized by its present operations commander it apparently still retains its ability to voice an opinion on certain subjects in short, sharp and colorful terms.

Rising to defend Canada's one and only aircraft carrier which was labelled "a pile of junk" by an NDP member of Parliament last week, Rear Admiral O'Brien quietly described the Bonaventure as "probably the most effective pound-for-pound man-for-man anti-submarine weapon in the world."

Then he warmed up. Referring to the MP's statement, he said: "I get so bloody mad at these sort of people" and added for good measure that the carrier's air unit was "the best damn squadron in the world."

The admiral's terse and salt-tanged approbation of the Bonaventure will certainly set most Canadians at ease on the matter. It might even have the salutary effect of persuading Defence Minister Hellyer that some naval practices are still worth keeping.

Troops Are Tenants

THE MOST recent release from the department of national defence concerning "the location and designation" of army units would appear to substantiate rumors that 1st Battalion Queen's Own Rifles would shortly vacate Work Point Barracks.

The battalion will assume a role in the ACE (Allied Command Europe) Mobile Force on Sept. 1, 1967, according to Mobile Command headquarters at St. Hubert, Quebec. Moreover, according to the same authority, "field units will no longer have garrison troops or platoons."

But the interpretation of these announcements bringing the conclusion that Work Point Barracks is to be abandoned is seemingly in error.

Military authority here contends there is no implication that the QORs are leaving or that Work Point will cease to function as what is known as "a swing station" for both the Queen's Own Rifles and the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry battalions. One or other of these regiments will continue to base a battalion here as each takes its turn at overseas service.

The explanation of the announcement that "field units will no longer have garrison troops" is simply that the housekeeping duties are being taken over by the newly-named Canadian Forces Bases.

The bases, as one military authority explains, should be considered in the role of "landlord" and the units they lodge as "tenants." The "tenants" at Work Point, in this case the Queen's Own Regiment's 1st Battalion, can get on with the more important jobs of military training rather than spending time on what is euphemistically known as "pot-walloping."

From all accounts, the troops and their families enjoy being based at Work Point as much as local residents like having them here. This is considered "a comfortable" station. Besides, there are plenty of military merits for its location, among them the proximity to naval and air force operations.

The Queen's Own, when it becomes a part of ACE Mobile Force next September, undoubtedly will be engaged in overseas operations, such as the exercises in Norway in which Canadian units participated last winter with such distinction. But Esquimalt will remain its official "location."

The 1st Battalion Black Watch is currently designated for the ACE Mobile Force role, and it is reassuring to know that its "location," as defence headquarters rather inadequately describes its base, continues to be in Gagetown, N.S. There is, at least at present, no reason to suppose that when 1st Battalion QOR takes over from the Black Watch in ACE it will not continue to call Work Point Barracks its home.

Thinking Aloud

". . . of shoes, and ships, and sealing wax . . ."

By TOM TAYLOR

IT is the custom of the Rotary Club at its annual Christmas luncheon meeting to call on one of its members, a man of the cloth, to voice a message in keeping with the season.

Last Thursday was no exception. Once again Dean Whitlow touched the core of the occasion by the simplicity of his words and their meaning at this time of the year.

He always begins, however, with a few well-chosen remarks in lighter vein, emphasising anew that Christmas has its joyful aspect as well as embracing the solemnity of the Nativity.

Men who wear what is inelegantly termed a dog-collar, you know, are not necessarily cast only in austere mold. My own minister can crack a joke with the best of them, and I always think of St. Patrick, for instance, as having the Irishman's turn of humorous phrase. It of precedent also that St. Nicholas, the original Santa Claus, is depicted as a roundly-shaped figure full of good cheer and hearty spirit.

* * *

And when I recall the late Pope John, also portly, who made an unparalleled impact on the world at large in his brief pontificate, I recall how he walked among the workers of the Vatican and chatted informally on mundane things.

There is room for gusto and gaiety in the celebration of the Christmas season.

Actually Christmas as it has come down to us is a dual celebration, both a spiritual and a secular one. And as such it has a long heritage. As a matter of fact the early Christian fathers superimposed the observance of Christ's birth on existing pagan festival rites.

Vide the Yule log and the boar's head and the feasting, merry-making, gift-giving, etc.

* * *

This was done to make headway with the Christian religion, in the hope, no doubt, that in time the spiritual theme would transcend the secular. If it has not managed this entirely, and today the Church is in the throes of re-examination that duality still exists.

And even those who decry Christianity are impelled to respect it, which they do simply by observing Christmas. For had their been no Christ there would be no Christmas.

Christ himself, in the years of His upbringing in the household of Joseph and Mary, undoubtedly absorbed the secularity of daily life before He began the spiritual ministry that changed the human scene. And while there is no record in the Gospels that Jesus smiled it seems appropriate to think He lifted a whimsical eyebrow at times when in concert with His disciples.

Humor is inherent in mankind and thus part of his being, which will be why Dean Whitlow combines in his brief Christmas Rotary message both the spiritual and secular legacies of this transcendant anniversary. Others of the clergymen in our midst probably do also.

* * *

There is warrant, then, for the bustle that marks the material aspect of the Christmas season. The commercialism, as we call it, may sometimes seem to be overdone but it is rooted in age-old custom.

Why do people buy gifts at Christmas time? Not for themselves but for others. That must betoken something; a sacrifice or a pleasing thought, an unselfish deed, a charitable act. Much of the milk of human kindness is wrapped around every parcel along with the tinsel and tape.

And, it is worth remembering, the Wise Men brought gifts in their greeting to the Christchild, without whom there would not have been the Christmas luncheon I mentioned last Thursday.

Parliament's Prospects for 1967

By GREG CONNOLLEY

IF Parliament Hill co-operates Canada may be a happy and jolly nation in the 1967 centennial year.

It will be difficult to enjoy that 100th birthday if the House of Commons engages in bitter struggles like those over the new flag and the so-called scandals.

But if the legislative program next year is not too controversial and the MPs keep their tempers in check, Ottawa could set a jovial tune for the rest of the country.

* * *

For one thing, the new session — the second of this 27th Parliament — should be a short one to give MPs a chance to participate in centenary observances.

Who can say though, with authority, when even the present session will end?

The government of course wanted approval this session of medicare and the supplementary old-age pensions. Passage is sought too for the new Transportation Act and the Bank Act.

There is also that rather thorny bill, the unification measure for the Canadian armed forces.

House leader McIlraith also has a number of other bills he would like to get through this session — things not so contentious but which could take considerable time.

* * *

It seems evident from this list of legislation that the Commons will still have plenty to do after the Christmas recess in this strung-out first session.

After their Christmas holiday the MPs will come back early in January and work on to wind up the first session of this Parliament.

Planning for the future could be a good deal more precise if it were known how the armed forces bill would fare. If the fight is prolonged, as the Conservatives have promised, it is difficult to forecast when this item would be disposed of.

The suggestion is though that the government would like to wind up the first session by the end of January. This would permit MPs to go home and do some political soundings. And the government would have time to prepare its program for the new session.

A guess would be that this second session would start in the last week of February, after the departmental estimates had been prepared.

MPs could look forward to about eight weeks on estimates and supply. There would be eight days for the Throne Speech discussion and another six sitting days for a budget debate.

That's about 11 weeks right there without coping with legislation. And what legislation would there be?

How about that item calling for a national anthem? Could anything be more appropriate for the centennial year? But would it be non-controversial?

A rather cynical observer of the parliamentary scene was suggesting that with this 100th anniversary of Canada it would not be inappropriate for the government to bring forward the somewhat forgotten Canada Development Corporation — an obviously patriotic piece of legislation.

* * *

In any event, the MPs assembled in Ottawa next year may sorrowfully see the months sliding by — March, April, May and June.

Perhaps, with co-operation and good will, the Commons might adjourn in June, leaving the members and senators free to engage in the centenary celebrations.

If there isn't that spirit of compromise, the Commons could be in session yet again in the hot summer weeks.

A Parliament in session is not one of the attractions the centennial planners have plotted for the summer of 1967.

However a government spokesman known for his optimism predicted that after the Commons rises in 1967 — June, July or what have you — there probably wouldn't be a fall session.

As for 1968 — well, they could always have another general election.

Woman Minister Needed

WHEN Mr. Bennett decides to re-arrange his cabinet again he might consider placing education under a separate minister, one who could give his whole time to it and not follow the pattern of the last 50 years. This would mean the minister would take direction of education instead of leaving it entirely in the hands of department officials.

To be most effective this department should be under the direction of a woman who would look at it from the human angle and have more concern for people — children and teachers — than the good of the system and needs of the gross national product in years to come.

Christmas is almost on us and however much we may feel that teachers do not need holidays there is no doubt mothers know that the children do. A woman minister would not for one minute agree with the present shortened holidays or with the arbitrary decisions of a soulless education department.

Compliments

Your Bill Stavdal is one of the finest reporters it has been my privilege to read in 40 years of world journalism. May he continue modest and efficient.

His "A Look At Learning" (Dec. 11) is a most sensitive, reasonable presentation of a risky precedent that apparently came off well for both sides: the School Board of Greater Victoria and the young people "in their charge."

Our Readers' Views

To be considered for publication in whole or in part, letters must be on subjects of general interest and if signed with pen-names, must be accompanied by writer's name and address. Preference will be given to those that are brief.

It says much for the school board that they dared stick their necks out. It says more for the students that they did not take advantage of the situation overly. It says much more for Stavdal that he wrote it straight.

Having recently had both a vocational and avocational interest in the functioning of Greater Victoria's primary and secondary education systems, I am in some position to congratulate you on your handling.

Grateful

A Kiwanis Porchlight Campaign is conducted each year about this time to raise funds for Kiwanis Village and Kiwanis Villa, where accommodations are provided for 167 deserving elderly citizens at minimum rentals. All funds raised go toward capital improvement or expansion, and operating expenses are borne entirely by rental income.

The citizens of Greater Victoria continue to give us wonderful support with their generous contributions and this year's campaign, on Dec. 5 last, was no exception. To all who contributed, to the many organizations and groups outside Kiwanis who provided canvassers, loaned equipment, made their homes available for collection centres, assisted with publicity and advertising, and to the canvassers themselves, the Kiwanis Village directors, campaign officials, and Kiwanis Club executive and members would like to express their sincere appreciation and gratitude.

Golden Lure

From Colonist Files

ALMOST all food prices have gone up since shoppers were laying in their Christmas supplies 25 years ago — but some much more than others.

Grade A turkeys were offered then at 39 cents a pound at one of the large food stores, and 45 cents a pound for local birds at a department store. For those who wanted cheaper fare, though, there were prime rib and wing rib roasts of beef for 28 cents a pound, roasting chickens at 30 cents a pound, lean pot roasts at 19 cents and boiling beef at 12 cents.

On the social page of the Colonist were pictures of the girl soldiers of Work Point Barracks newly clad in "the snappy khaki uniforms" of the Canadian Women's Army Corps, a shipment of which, eagerly awaited for several weeks, had just arrived.

* * *

Everything was ready for a cabaret show at the Empress Hotel to raise funds for Christmas cheer for the returned soldiers at the Military Convalescent Hospital in Esquimalt, 50 years ago, and the entertainment was expected to "appeal in striking manner to Victorians."

The ballroom was to be decorated with flowers, ferns, palms and flags, "making it an appropriate scene," and the songs to be sung by the performers were to include Dreamy China Lady (the latest New York song); The Broken Doll; Blighty; If You Were the Only Boy in the World; To Have, to Hold and to Love You; Here's to Love, and Little Pink Pettie.

* * *

The term-end public examination and closing exercises of the Victoria High School were held 75 years ago "in the presence of a large number and deeply interested body of citizens and friends of the pupils."

The first order of the afternoon was "a verbal examination of the scholars in the various subjects taught, Trustee McConnan questioning them in Latin and Rev. M. C. Browne in Euclid."

It was an encouraging sign, Inspector Wilson told the gathering, to see the large increase being made in attendance at high schools in the province: in this school the number of pupils registered during the term was 115 and the average attendance was 86.

Gold and silver were claimed to have been found in fair quantities on a ledge of rocks running through the centre of a subdivision of 80 lots, about to be auctioned, at the junction of Cook Street and Saanich Road.

And, the Colonist noted, "Victoria West does not propose to be out of the running — not if the residents of that district understand themselves. On a water lot, near Russell station, gold is reported to have been discovered, and the claim will be regularly recorded, today."

* * *

It was rumored that Governor Seymour would try to permanently locate the capital of the newly united colony of British Columbia at New Westminster, 100 years ago, a prospect that didn't go down well in Victoria.

Whether the report was true or false, said an editorial, "it is certain that every argument ingenuity can invent— every artifice experienced political tricksters can devise — will be employed to retain the seat of government at the Town of Stumps."

And New Westminster had many disadvantages as a capital, its "inaccessibility at all seasons of the year" being the principal one. As far as Victoria was concerned, the capital might as well be at Yale or Lytton; as far as the Cariboo was concerned, if outside that district, Victoria was best.

Besides, there were in Victoria buildings and properties worth $300,000 belonging to the colony, and all of these would have to be abandoned if New Westminster were to become the permanent capital.

New Slogan For Parents

From The Leader-Post, Regina

LOS Angeles has been having trouble with teen-agers and older youths who have virtually taken over the famed Sunset Strip, once the playground of celebrities and tourists. Attempts to crack down have led to recurring rioting.

A representative of this decidedly minority group, with the flowing long hair that represents the new conformity of "tuned in, turned on and dropped out" nonconformists, was interviewed by a reporter the other day.

Where did he live? Oh, around — with friends, was the reply from the nonworking, non-studying youth.

All of which led one observer to comment: "These people want the squares to keep the world going so they can non-conform to it."

It may also suggest a new slogan for parents who feel guilty about not having bequeathed an absolutely perfect world to their children — "No subsidization without participation."

Generals Triumph Over Intellectuals, Consumers

Soviet Budget Reflects Military Pressure

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
From Washington

The budget, reflecting for 1967 the highest rate of military spending for a decade, indicates a substantial hardening of attitude toward the United States and resumption of some of the more chilling tactics of the cold war.

There are several causes.

● According to information coming from Moscow, the Kremlin is uneasy about the U.S. government, as if fearing its past performances in Vietnam and the Dominican Republic means it is ready and willing to intervene anywhere in the world in a revolutionary situation.

★ ★ ★

● Official Russians, the same sources say, have concluded that underdeveloped areas of Asia, Africa and Latin America — independent all too soon — are so unstable that there may be a succession of small wars. The USSR itself may be involved in one, just as the Americans now are involved in Vietnam.

★ ★ ★

● The U.S. is far ahead in experience with guerrilla war, as well as in experimenting with new weapons, new tactics and strategy, new deployment and logistics techniques and the like learned from such developments as Vietnam and the Dominican Republic. The Soviet military has had none of this.

Russia's military men are believed demanding more preparation for what might come. To attempt to deflect this pressure might lead to a situation which could endanger the rule of Party Chief Leonid Brezhnev and Premier Alexei Kosygin.

Perhaps, then, it is expedient to bow to military-conservative pressure rather than listen too attentively to demands of a younger generation and a public hungry for more consumer goods.

There have been growing signs of a burgeoning debate between Soviet intellectuals representing a new generation, and conservative Communist party people who are the backbone of the government bureaucracy and who, to a large extent, are responsible for drawing up policy guidelines.

Indications are that the conservatives, resisting political and economic charges which might endanger their standings, would like a strong party reassertion of control over all aspects of Soviet life and less stress on a promise of abundance.

★ ★ ★

The government, producing a budget which predicted defence spending at eight per cent above 1966, pointedly emphasized it would also permit a "further increase" in living standards and that attention still would be given to consumer production. But the influence of military men is evident in the figures as are official Soviet worries about what the tumult of war in Vietnam and anti-Sovietism in China might bring.

★ ★ ★

With a public whose hopes had been raised by a decade of stress on a future flourishing economy, refreezing the cold war will be unpopular. This is all the more true in the light of events in China, upon which many younger-generation Russians look as the real future threat.

BACKGROUND

New Vietnam Policy

Army Triumphs Over Idealists

By JOHN RANDOLPH
From Saigon

After seven years of trying one military and political device after another to defeat the Viet Cong, the U.S. government apparently has come back to the most basic notion of all.

★ ★ ★

The idea is that only a guarantee of physical security from the Communists, underwritten by troops in the field, will win the loyalty and support of South Vietnam's 12,000,000 peasants — and thereby win the war.

★ ★ ★

This approach, not new but newly revived, is a major policy shift in the overall U.S. strategy in Vietnam. As such, it is a triumph for the "practical" thinkers in the military and the state department, as opposed to those who have sought victory by more idealistic, theoretical or experimental means.

The price, however, is the straightforward one that the U.S. and Vietnamese armies must provide security on a 24-hour basis in every area formally proclaimed as liberated from the Viet Cong.

★ ★ ★

This is a commitment never before undertaken so explicitly by the United States. Even now, it is not being presented here or in Washington as radically new, nor as the really major decision that it is.

★ ★ ★

Rather, moves to implement the new policy are being taken step-by-step, without fanfare, and are being allowed more or less to speak for themselves.

Young Adults Worth Listening To Youth Speaks Its Mind

What's on the minds of our young people? Quite a lot, and much of it worth listening to.

Last week I reported with enthusiasm on an unusual meeting between school trustees and senior high school students. Both groups spoke frankly about the education system and the discussion was a productive one.

Subsequently I had an informal chat with the same group of teen-agers. The intention was to get some idea of the things that concern young adults these days.

The seven are members of the newly-created B.C. Assembly of Students, an organization founded largely by university students but which takes in Grades 11 and 12. I found the teen-agers articulate, questioning, somewhat cynical, anxious for freedom to speak their views and at the same time hungering for wise adult guidance.

They didn't claim to be typical students. The great majority of their fellows are apathetic to events around them, they said. But the same situation applies in the adult world, so I accept these youngsters as fairly reliable spokesmen for the older teens.

★ ★ ★

Freedom of expression is a recurring theme in teen-agers' talk. Censorship of high school papers is an especially sore point. Again and again, it appears, apprehensive teacher-sponsors and principals delete outspoken material. Anything touching on controversy is taboo.

Decency and good taste should be the only regulators, the students felt.

My group agreed that the voice of students should at least be heard by the people who decide school curriculum. Nobody suggested that students should choose the courses.

★ ★ ★

But senior secondary students ought to be polled for their opinion after they have completed a course, it was suggested.

Cynicism bobbed up here.

"There are so many filters that by the time it reaches the people who make the decisions, not much real information gets through," one student said.

They had plenty of ideas on what ought to be taught and heard in the high school. Current events, for example. A course on modern history ends at 1948, one student pointed out.

Logic and decision-making is another need, it was advocated.

The students I talked to would like to have non-partisan political clubs in which alternate party platforms could be debated.

The whole education system retreats hastily every time this subject is mentioned. The average teacher, principal and school trustee is scared.

And yet most of our high school students are old enough to vote provincially within a year after graduation. By what miracle are they supposed to acquire a knowledge of politics in the interval?

While they were at it, the students said they also wished they could have non-partisan discussions on religion. The good sense and ingenuousness of this proposal left me touched with sympathy and wonder at youthful idealism.

★ ★ ★

"They're listening too much to youth. Youth sets the trends," he said. "That's wrong. We don't have the experience.

"I don't think we're after complete freedom," he said later. "We want guidance too."

Okanagan To Vote On College

Agreement has been reached here on a new area-wide referendum for an $8,000,000 capital spending program for the Okanagan Regional College.

Education Minister Peterson, who met an Okanagan delegation on the question, said no date has been set for the area vote, but it will follow a local referendum on the question of bringing Penticton into the program.

Mr. Peterson will meet next Tuesday with the mayors of Penticton, Kelowna and Vernon to discuss the question.

B.C.'s Part-Time Health Minister

Is This False Economy?

Three charming women ministers without portfolio for the price of one full-time minister of health — what could be better than that — the premier asks in this period of restraint.

The three together will be getting only $500 more than the $17,500 which was paid annually to former health minister Eric Martin (apart from the $8,000 each would have received anyway for sessional indemnities).

But for this so-called economy, what are the people of B.C. really getting?

They are getting a part-time minister of health in a period when Premier Bennett said the government intends to place full emphasis on services to the people, particularly in the field of health.

And the three women without portfolios have been told they can stay home if they wish so their family routines will not be interrupted.

How can the government expand its services to the public if it is cutting its leadership in half at the level where policy decisions have to be made?

Premier Bennett made a wise decision in handing Provincial Secretary Wesley Black's welfare portfolio to energetic Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell, a go-getter who can be expected to whip the welfare department into order in jig time.

But the only thing good that can be said of the premier's decision to hand Mr. Martin's portfolio over to the provincial secretary is that there will be an empty office in the Legislative Buildings for the three women to use during the two-month legislative session ahead.

Women members traditionally have an office of their own in the buildings, and Burnaby North NDP MLA Mrs. Eileen Dailly is expected to move into the cubicle which became vacant through the defeat of Mr. Lois Haggen in Boundary-Similkameen in the September general election.

But there was not one single spare room there big enough to accommodate the three Socred women who came into office in the election.

I can't believe the premier of a province which operates on a $657,000,000 annual budget would base his cabinet alignment on the questions of salary savings by doubling up and availability of space for the women members.

Maybe Mr. Bennett will have another look at the situation after he's seen his new team in action during the forthcoming session, and make another cabinet change in the spring of 1967.

Election Helpers Paid $1 an Hour

How Stingy Can You Get?

It's no credit to the city that the unsung heroes of the municipal election, the people who tend the polling subdivisions and count the votes, work for a starvation rate of pay — $1 an hour.

This is less than half the rate paid the humblest laborer on the civic payroll and just a little more than the stingy rate paid for occasional female help. It is not as much as you would pay a boy to come and clean up your garden.

And it's straight time. No overtime after eight hours or any of that Communist nonsense.

City Clerk Morran Waller made a bid for $1.25 an hour for election workers last spring when estimates were being prepared for the 1966 budget but he was turned down. The matter will come up again next spring and let's hope that aldermen take a little more enlightened attitude.

CITY HALL COMMENT

By A. H. MURPHY

★ ★ ★

Mayor Stephen took over and with a minimum of fuss and bother, picked up the reins. He has, wisely I think, decided not to set guidelines for anybody. He prefers to "let things happen to me" for awhile until he can get the feel of the office after which he will, no doubt, establish his own pattern of administration.

But not all is serene at the civic hub. There are underground mutterings about the recent edict that all employees must remain within the building for coffee breaks.

This followed completion of the small cafeteria for employees which is being operated in city hall by the management of the McPherson Restaurant. It offers coffee during morning and afternoon breaks at 10 cents rather than the prevailing 15 cents elsewhere.

Some employees feel that the order is a curtailment of their liberties. They forget, perhaps, that coffee breaks are a privilege rather than a right.

The directive didn't make it clear whether or not the regulation applied to department heads. One would assume of course, that it did.

Intense Jungle Fight

U.S. Troops Jockey To Trap Battalion

SAIGON (UPI) — Bloody jungle fighting erupted in the central highlands today as U.S. air cavalrymen jockeyed to trap and destroy an estimated Communist battalion trying to escape.

The battalion was trying to flee soldiers of the First Air Cavalry Division moving in on three sides toward the South China Sea coast.

The multi-company force of cavalrymen had suffered moderate casualties in the fighting Saturday 285 miles northeast of Saigon and 38 miles northwest of Qui Nhon.

The death toll for the Communists was expected to be much higher as the cavalrymen squeezed in on the Red battalion — possibly between 400 and 600 men.

Firefights

The troops were supported by heavy air strikes and artillery bombardments.

Fighting broke off at nightfall Saturday and it was feared the Communists managed to flit away in the jungle.

But shortly after daybreak, the cavalrymen triggered two more firefights and drove into a force entrenched in concealed bunkers.

There was bitter fighting as the soldiers blasted bunkers with artillery and called in aircraft to hammer the Red positions with bombs and napalm.

Further north, U.S. marines chasing guerrillas in hit-and-run bands killed 23 Viet Cong in a series of sweeps in the northern provinces. B52 bombers smashed Communist positions inside the demilitarized border zone for the third straight day.

The fighting, among the most intense in recent weeks, erupted as the cavalrymen swept the guerrilla-controlled section of Binh Dinh province in Operation Thayer II, a search and destroy project that began Oct. 25 and has resulted in a reported 625 Communists killed.

Late in the afternoon, the Americans came under heavy automatic weapons and mortar fire. At some points, the two sides closed to within hand-grenade range.

After nightfall, the guerrillas managed to pull back and, by all indications, leave the area along jungle trails.

Explosions

In air raids Saturday, three U.S. air force F4C Phantoms attacked coastal defences at Dong Duong in North Vietnam, spokesmen said, and set off 12 secondary explosions. The defences have often taken pot-shots at 7th fleet ships operating offshore.

Other planes concentrated on highways and waterways in North Vietnam's southern panhandle where the Communists are reportedly pouring men and supplies southward toward a continuing buildup.

Monsoon weather limited raids Friday, but a handful of U.S. planes unloaded 2,250,000 propaganda leaflets over Hanoi. Some of the leaflets urged North Vietnamese troops to surrender if they were sent into the south.

Cropduster

In the Mekong Delta south of Saigon, a U.S. special forces team was attacked by guerrillas but was saved without a casualty when an air force AC47 plane with Gatling-type guns routed the enemy with bursts from the 6,000 bullets-a-minute weapons.

The Green Beret advisers held off guerrillas small arms and mortar fire for more than 90 minutes before the plane dropped in like a cropduster and saturated the area with machine-gun fire.

The converted cargo planes are rigged throughout the lower fuselage with .30-caliber machine-guns. The weapons automatically spray about four bullets into every square foot of an area bigger than a football field.

Romania Claims Damage

SAIGON (UPI)—Broadcasts from Hanoi today said Romania has become the second country to charge U.S. bombs damaged its embassy in the North Vietnamese capital during raids last Tuesday and Wednesday.

China was the first nation to make such a charge, Hanoi reporting Saturday bomb and rocket fragments with U.S. markings were found in the Chinese embassy. But U.S. spokesmen in Saigon and Washington denied any raids on residential areas of Hanoi.

Dum-Dum Effect

Captured Rifles Provide Brutal Proof

By WILLIAM MORRIS

An army doctor and veteran of Vietnam described Friday the "dum-dum" effect of the M16's bullet which, he said, shatters on impact, causing "massive tissue destruction."

* * *

The doctor, Maj. Norman Rich, served with the Second Surgical Hospital and described the effect of the bullet during a symposium on the care given casualties of the war.

In one case Dr. Rich cited, a GI wounded by an M16 bullet received an entry wound about the size of the eraser of a lead pencil. The exit wound was about the size of a regular cigarette pack, or 125 times larger.

* * *

This occurs, Dr. Rich said, because the M16 bullet breaks into small lead fragments after its hard casing opens on impact.

In other bullet designs, the bullet remains whole and passes through a target nearly intact. Exit wounds from bullets of this type are closer to the size of an entry wound.

Dr. Rich's description came in a discussion of "comparative missile wounds in Vietnam" and a study of 750 surgical cases at his hospital between January and October, 1966.

* * *

Of that number, 434 had been hit by shell fragments, mostly from artillery and mortar fire, and another 316 were wounded by small arms fire, primarily from 30-calibre weapons.

A few, he said, had been hit by the 5.56-millimetre bullet from captured M16 rifles which are replacing the larger 7.62 calibre M14 rifle as the army's basic weapon.

Dr. Rich said that of the 750 cases, 61 per cent were returned to duty within 16 days and 1.2 per cent of the cases ended in the death of the wounded man.

* * *

This death rate of wounded men who died in hospitals was lower than the 2.4 per cent average for the Vietnam war.

In the Second World War, this hospital death figure was 4.5 per cent, and in Korea, it was 2.5 per cent.

The lower death rate, he said, was attributable to the use of the helicopter and the more rapid transfer of a wounded man from the battlefield to the hospital.

Reckless Climbers Fined

TOKYO (Reuters) — Mountaineers in Gumma, central Japan, now have to watch their step—they can be fined for reckless climbing.

The Gumma prefectural government has decided to impose a penalty of up to 10,000 yen ($28) for the offence.

Travel Rule Still Same

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. state department has extended until March 15 its review of present restrictions on travel by Americans to certain Communist countries.

Present regulations requiring specially validated passports for trips to Albania, Cuba, Communist China, North Korea and North Vietnam will remain in effect until then unless modified sooner, the department said Friday.

More Bombs for Cong

Weather Halts U.S. Women On Hanoi Trip

MOSCOW (AP) — Four American women had a talk here today with a representative of South Vietnam's Viet Cong guerrillas and then went to the airport for a trip to Hanoi, North Vietnam, but bad weather blocked the flight.

The women, expressing some apprehension that U.S. bombs might kill them in the North Vietnamese capital, now are scheduled to take off today for a flight to Hanoi via Peking, China.

TELL THE PEOPLE

American planes bombed the Hanoi area Tuesday and Wednesday.

Three of the four said they were going to see for themselves what they called "an immoral, illegal war" and then tell the American people about it. They contended the American people are not getting a true picture.

The fourth woman, Diane Bevel, 24, of Chicago, declined to talk about the trip for publication. Mrs. Bevel just listened as her companions were interviewed.

The four, who scarcely knew each other before leaving New York Wednesday, are going to Hanoi at the invitation of the North Vietnamese Women's Union. They expect to be there 10 to 14 days.

They said they were chosen by a group of about 25 women two weeks ago to represent the U.S. peace movement.

They met for almost two hours Saturday with a secretary of the Vietnam Liberation Front's Moscow office, Do Huu Chi. The front is the political arm of the Viet Cong.

Christmas Long, Cold Bus Ride With Husband Left in Hospital

By DOUG MARTIN

VANCOUVER (CP) Christmas will be a long, cold bus ride for Jean Chabot, a 23-year-old mother whose two children have just reached an age where they enjoy hanging up stockings for Santa.

Her husband Al is lying in a Vancouver hospital with undetermined head injuries suffered in a car accident three months ago. Three-year-old Sean and two-year-old Terra Lynn are back home at Prince George, with Jean's parents.

Jean will give Al — semi-conscious now after two months in a coma — a few small gifts and then board an overnight bus for Prince George 500 miles north in British Columbia's snow-bound northern interior.

No Chess Yet

She has a sweater, chocolates, playing cards and checkers for her husband. Al was a chess player before the accident, but Jean is afraid the game would be too difficult for him now.

Someone undoubtedly will give Chabot a boxing magazine. He worked as a machine operator for a railroad, but boxing was his life. He was twice Canadian amateur bantamweight champion and a promising young professional.

"The kids are going to get all kinds of things this year — more than they ever did before," said Jean.

"Ever since the accident, people have been calling and asking where the children are staying. They all want to send them something for Christmas."

It will be a sad Christmas for Jean Chabot, but Al's friends in boxing have tried to make it bright.

One has promised to purchase lumber and hire a carpenter to finish the home the Chabots were building in Prince George when the accident happened. Another gave Jean $200 and a third gave $100.

The city donated the use of the 1,000-seat Civic Centre. Boxers and coaches from Vancouver made the 500-mile drive to attend. One former boxer paid meal expenses for visiting coaches and boxers for three days.

Friends of Boxer Helping Family

One amateur who had been away from boxing for six years returned to the sweat and pain of training and dropped 25 pounds in six weeks preparing for the card.

'Jean the One'

He belittled his own effort.

"Jean is the one who is really helping Al," he said. "She just won't let him quit. She's a strong woman — if I was in her position, I'd just go to pieces."

Many of the coaches and boxers were merely paying back Al for past favors.

He was one of the most popular athletes in Prince George. He was always available for benefits for others and he was a happy-go-lucky little guy who spent a good deal of his time in the gym helping youngsters.

The money made on the benefit will ease his family's problems.

Jean now is able to return to Vancouver after Christmas without immediate financial worries and continue visiting her husband. Nurses say that without her encouragement, Chabot would not have advanced so far.

She has been living with friends in a tiny apartment in Vancouver since the accident in late September, but is anxious to return to work and reunite her family.

"The unemployment insurance is going to send me to vocational school and when the secretarial course is completed, I'll be able to get a good-paying job and bring the kids down and get a house," she says.

Master of the Rapier

Bailey New Breed of Criminal Lawyer

By ART EVERETT

NEW YORK (AP) — F. Lee Bailey of Boston is a new breed of criminal lawyer, master of the rapier, where many of the oldtime greats used a cudgel.

"There's no disgrace in criminal law and there's plenty of money in it," Bailey says. "The criminal law is so barren that anybody with some ability and a willingness to work hard can't help but succeed."

MERE PRESENCE

Bailey, at 33, takes over a courtroom by his mere presence and he appears before many judges who are old enough to be his father. Intimates claim to live in dread of the day when he addresses some jurist as "Daddy-o."

Bailey, however, tempers his brashness to the judicial climate of the court. In Judge Francis Talty's no-nonsense courtroom in Cleveland during the Samuel Sheppard trial, Bailey was a model of restraint.

COPPOLINO TRIAL

In the somewhat less rigid atmosphere of the just-completed Dr. Carl Coppolino trial in Freehold, N.J., Bailey was questioning a man who eventually became the jury foreman. The lawyer conceded his client might be classed as "a swinger — somebody who steps out of line on occasion."

Bailey

"We're all human beings," replied the prospective juror, "and I've stepped out of line myself."

"You can talk if you like," quipped Bailey, "I'm taking the fifth amendment."

Bailey has a number of cases in which pretrial news coverage has been heavy. He may attack newspapers as prejudicial to his cause — but while doing so he also may offer a slight bow or a wink to reporters in the court.

It may include his beautiful blonde wife Vicki, once his secretary; Andrew Tuney, a ruddy-faced Boston Irishman who is his chief investigator, and another investigative aide, Teri Plaut, a tall, leggy brunette.

A former marine jet pilot, Bailey flies his own plane.

There is little bombast in his courtroom manner. Instead, he may let his voice dwindle down to an almost whispering intimacy with the jury on cross-examination.

PIERCING VOICE

He may crouch as though to pounce at the witness, and his voice pierces rather than thunders.

Bailey was admitted to the Massachusetts bar in 1960. The next year, being in the right place in just the right time, he took over the appeal of Sheppard, then serving life in the 1954 murder of his first wife.

Last June, the U.S. Supreme Court granted Sheppard a new trial. Nov. 16 Bailey "walked him out" a free man after a retrial jury acquitted him.

Mothball Past Forgotten

Back in full service after nine years in mothballs is RCN's gate vessel HMCS Porte de la Reine. Ship is used by reserve sailors of HMCS Malahat during winter weekends and Saturday was out off Brotchie Ledge on training cruise. Sea Scouts and Sea Cadets also were aboard.

Gas Line Blast Kills Two

THOMPSON, Man. (CP) — Two men were killed and two others injured Saturday night when a natural gas line explosion rocked a residential area of Thompson.

A bulldozer caused a leak in the line and a repair crew was sent out from Thompson Gas Ltd. Houses in the area were evacuated, and the line exploded while the men were working on it.

For Aging, Ailing Virginia There's Still Santa Claus

NORTH CHATHAM, N.Y. (AP) — Weakened by months of illness but smiling at the glow of children's faces, Virginia O'Hanlon Douglas relived Friday night the happiness she knew 69 years ago in reading, "Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus."

Mrs. Douglas, 77 and a great-grandmother, read the famed New York Sun editorial at a community Christmas party for the children of North Chatham, her home for the last seven years.

★ ★ ★

"This is a season of gratitude," she said, explaining why she wanted to read to the children despite a series of mild strokes that briefly took her speech. She read:

"Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus. He exists as certainly as love and generosity and devotion exist . . .

"How dreary would be the world if there were no Santa Claus. It would be as dreary as if there were no Virginias."

★ ★ ★

The editorial, written in 1897 by assistant editor Francis Church, was published in answer to a letter from Mrs. Douglas who, as a girl of 8, wrote:

"Some of my little friends say there is no Santa Claus . . . please tell me the truth, is there a Santa Claus?"

A widow, Mrs. Douglas has lived in North Chatham since her retirement in 1959 as a Brooklyn school principal.

Live Entertainment

What's Next

Christmas concerts are planned by almost every school and church in Greater Victoria, but otherwise, live entertainment quiets down during the holiday season.

The details for the next two weeks:

* * *

Today — Victoria Symphony Orchestra and Victoria Choral Society, Bach's Christmas Oratorio, Royal Theatre, 3 p.m.

Today — Red Eye of Love, last performance, Bastion Theatre Studio, 1322A Government, 8:30 p.m.

Today — University of Victoria foreign film, A Jester's Tale, from Czechoslovakia, Oak Bay Theatre, 8 p.m.

* * *

Wednesday — Silver Threads Christmas concert, McPherson Playhouse, 1 p.m.

Monday, Dec. 26 — Oliver, Bastion Theatre, McPherson Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:30 p.m. Also Dec. 27 through 30 and Jan. 2 through 7 at 8:30, Dec. 31 and Jan. 7 at 2:30.

Tell the Symphony What's Wrong

What is wrong with the Victoria Symphony Society? Why have there been cancellations by regular subscribers? Why are the houses dwindling?

The society claims about 200 season ticket holders have failed to renew their memberships or cancelled out.

If there had been a drop in growth it might be assumed adverse publicity was a contributing factor, but this would not account for the cancellations by people who have been regular attenders.

What's wrong? Society president John Meredith would like to know because he is determined to work toward correction of the situation.

This column has taken a crack at the society more than once, but in fairness, this time I want to help.

In order to conduct a confidential survey of the symphony's ills, anyone who has anything on his mind concerning the organization or the music or the type of programming is invited to let his views be known.

Address your letters to this column at The Daily Colonist but please sign them and give your address. All names will be held in confidence.

If those who have cancelled out say why they have done so, it may be the first step to getting vitality back into the orchestra.

Should anyone feel too busy to write, phone and give your views. It's time this matter was cleared up and this is one way of finding out just what the public wants.

There is no danger of this survey degenerating into an "I said . . . You said" battle because this is in confidence. Only the opinions and views will be made public, not the names or addresses.

If music lovers want this orchestra to survive and improve this is their chance to say what they want. Let's hear from you.

ON MUSIC

* * *

In addition to puffing up a storm on their instruments the players and guests will be into the wassail bowl. Singing of carols and playing of baroque music are expected to follow.

The destruction of the Dominion Theatre on Yates has brought waves of nostalgia to Fred Usher and his sidemen.

Fred and his country music group, the Hometowners, played there between films in the late 40s and early 50s.

At the time they were heard live on the air. Sports announcer Ted Reynolds was pushed out in front of the house as warmup man while Fred and the Hometowners got ready.

The country music was offered by Geoff Venables, Bill Botten, Ernie Fullerton, Al Smith and Bob McGill. Vocals were handled by the late Pat Berry.

Five of the originals are still with the Usher band and will play for the Empress Hotel's family dance Dec. 28.

That program will also feature Carl and Lottie Hemeon, the town's best magicians.

This is the only time of year Fred Usher uses non-union players. He invites youngsters up from the floor to join the band while he provides rhythm instruments to all volunteers.

* * *

Chef Peter Beck and impresario Tony Else have combined their talents to offer something special in the way of New Year's Eve parties.

The Old Forge room at the Strathcona will feature a return visit of Don Crawford and the Right People. To fire up the dancers Peter Beck is planning a gourmet buffet.

The celebrated chef will offer a buffet in the French style featuring baron of beef, duckling, ham, caviar, lobster, curried sea foods, French pastries and a host of other specialties.

For his centrepiece Mr. Beck will carve a 600-pound block of ice but has so far not decided on a subject.

Don Crawford is at present working on a production for the National Film Board and also in a play at the Queen Elizabeth Playhouse in Vancouver. He recently completed a half-hour for CBC TV that will be used on Parade.

City Production Different

Dickens of a Musical Twists Evil Into Fun

FIRST EXPERIENCE

McManus is conducting the Bastion production, and must translate the Bart musical into a hit show in the McPherson. This is his first experience as a conductor.

His long career includes opera, parts like Jud in Oklahoma and straight acting like Henry in last season's Royal Gambit in Victoria.

McManus said that in the musical version of the story, even gruesome scenes like the workhouse have moments that delight the audience.

"The situation by itself is pretty terrible," the conductor said, "but on stage it's funny."

He pointed out "Fagan is totally evil in what he's doing to these little boys . . . training them to be criminals. But the way it's done, it's hysterically funny."

The Bastion show opens Boxing Day.

Leads in the show are Peter Mannering as Mr. Bumble, Marg Bridgeman as Nancy, Glenn MacDonald as the Artful Dodger, Larry Eastick as Bill Sykes and Bill Hosie as Fagin.

In the film of Oliver Twist, Alec Guinness was sharply criticized by many Jewish leaders for his portrayal of Fagan as the caricature of a Jewish miser.

McManus commented, "I have seen three productions of Oliver, and Fagan was always played as a cockney Jew. You were conscious of his Yiddishness.

COMPOSITE ACCENT

"If people equate miserliness with Jewishness, then they will certainly think of him as a Jew."

He said Hosie will not play the part with a Jewish accent.

"He's got sort of a composite of his own Scottish and other things. He could be sort of a central European south Asiatic Yugoslav."

STRANGE MUSIC

McManus said that, at one point when Fagan is singing, there are pauses when strange violin music comes in as a bridge to his thoughts.

"It could be Yiddish chants or it could be Gypsy music. It all depends on how you think."

VOLUME NEEDED

"He's coming along very well. He and all the actors will have to give it all possible volume to carry the show."

McManus said he has seen the London, Australian and Calgary productions of the musical, and "the boy playing Oliver wasn't much good in any of them."

He said Oliver "isn't so much character as he is plot." —

ONE OF EACH

The left-handed conductor tried out his two newly-purchased batons (one expensive, and one to break).

He will wave the batons before a nine-piece orchestra.

By arrangement with the musicians' union, composer-pianist Marg Adelburg will play piano. She is also assisting the conductor.

Marg Bridgeman and McManus

* * *

Other musicians will be Maurice Crawford, flute; Ian Franklyn, oboe; Roy Denny, trumpet; Dave Townsend, bass; Alan Denike, bassoon; Fergus Heywood, percussion, and Howard Denike, clarinet and saxophone.

"This will be a much different Oliver than any I have seen, and in fact much different than Lional Bart intended," McManus said.

"Bart was thinking of it as a definite commercial vehicle. Peter Mannering's approach is toward more serious development of character. I think this will make it a strong production."

He said the only real musical training in the cast is represented in the nine young boys who play both workhouse waifs and Fagan's pickpockets.

"Most of them sang in church choirs," he said.

"That was a problem. They were singing too nicely. I've had to keep reminding them they are urchins, not Victoria boys.

"They have to belt it out."

Quintet Finds Home

Honey Sweetened St. Claire Scene

"Since performing in A Taste of Honey, everything has been up!" says Darren St. Claire.

Darren's quintet has become one of the most popular musical groups in Victoria.

It has broken three house records at Tony Else's A-Go-Go club on Wharf Street, and was chosen to play at the opening of the Old Forge ballroom.

STOPPED COMMUTING

Seattle singer St. Claire has been so encouraged by the group's progress he has stopped a temporay commuting system to the U.S. city and is making Victoria his home.

The group was formed as a jazz company but found too little interest in jazz forms to provide a good regular audience. So the quintet began working on its present, driving rhythm and blues sound.

EIGHT NIGHTS

It replaced Don Crawford at the A-Go-Go, and appeared onstage at the McPherson for eight nights providing background for the Bastion production A Taste of Honey.

The group is looking ahead to a spot on an hour CBC show, already partly filmed, and a six-month engagement in Switzerland.

Money Ills Cancel Road Met

NEW YORK (AP) — The 1967-68 season of the Metropolitan Opera national company has been cancelled due to financial trouble.

The company is in its second season and a third tour next year has already been booked 90 per cent but the Metropolitan says its unavoidable deficits were too much of a drain on the Met's resources.

The Met recently called its financial situation the worst in 35 years, due partly to the move into its new home at the Lincoln Centre for the Performing Arts.

Ships Aglow For Holiday

Plans are in progress once again to allow the public to visit HMC Dockyard during the Christmas holidays to see ships of the Maritime Command decorated for the Christmas season. Dates and times are to be announced later.

Several of the ships plan to take part in the annual Junior Chamber of Commerce's lighting contest.

Guitar Premieres In City Festival

By BERT BINNY

The guitar next year will make its first formal appearance at the Greater Victoria music festival.

Until now, it has slipped into the festival by the service entrance — as an accompaniment. But the new syllabus lists one class for guitar alone.

It's No. 161 for classical guitar, and the interpretation of the world classical could provide interest.

Festival officials have also announced publication of a list of 12 syllabus changes — 11 omissions and one error.

All of the 12 are actually restorations and they include four folk song competitions. Another is the open lieder class.

DOMINION FINAL

As usual, vocal and piano classes are the most numerous, with more than 60 of each. Next come speech arts with 47 and dance with 44.

There are five recorder classes where the entire section drew only one entry this year.

As reported previously, the 1967 Victoria festival can lead directly to greater triumphs.

There will be quarter- and semi-final competitions in 15 vocal and instrumental classes, leading eventually to the Dominion final scheduled for St. John, N.B., in July — to say nothing of $12,000 in added financial awards up for centennial grabs.

NORTH BREEZES
"You're wife has ordered for you," said our Maitre d' Leslie as the man in the brown suit arrived.
"My wife?" said Brown Suit. He and Blue Suit, his companion, are our favorite protagonists.
"By phone," said Les. "Her exact words were, 'Before they sart arguing, give them a beef fondue.' It's almost on the table."
Then he gave each of them a long fork and he put a spirit lamp under a copper bowl of melted butter before them.
And each of them was given a dish of chopped tenderloin. And they dipped the bite-sized pieces in the boiling butter until they were done as they liked them, and then they dipped them in the gourmet sauces, and ate them.
And for once they didn't argue. They didn't say a word in fact. Just an occasional moan of pleasure. And Les was as happy as they were.

Music Beats Money

Hear the Duke Floor the Hip

By LEONARD FEATHER

Listen to Duke Ellington, who delights in flooring the hip:

"Jazz, and the theory that says it's a musical idiom you can define, may belong among history's legends with sea serpents, Shangri-La and Santa Claus.

* * *

"If jazz means anything at all, which is questionable, it means the same thing in the music of today that it meant to musicians of 50 years ago — freedom of expression.

* * *

"There's no such thing as improvisation. Two bars before a man starts playing, he must know what he's going to play. It has to be in the mind before it comes out of the horn.

"When they say the Negro has more jazz in him than the white man, I don't call along with that race nonsense.

* * *

"George Gershwin had such good taste. And as for Paul Whiteman, who would have known about Bix Beiderbecke and all those other great soloists if it hadn't been for him? How would the Dorsey brothers have survived?

"The whole history of jazz has nothing to do with categories. It's a story of great individuals with strong personal styles. It's Louis, it's Sidney Bechet, it's Coleman Hawkins, Dizzy, Django, Art Tatum. These are all men beyond category.

* * *

That's what the Duke said — and, if history does him justice, his contribution will endure at least as long as the memory of George Gershwin.

Expo Look: Now, Not Later

U.S. Changes Fair Policy

MONTREAL (UPI) — The U.S. has decided not to make its pavilion at the 1967 Montreal world's fair a showplace of the future as has been the practice in past exhibitions.

Jack Masey, chief of design and operations for the U.S. pavilion, says the interior of the pavilion will be aimed at presenting a uniform display of U.S. culture.

Masey said: "Fairs are designed for experimentation and that's what we're doing, experimenting. We are creating our own problems and then trying to solve them."

Ivan Chermayeff, 34, who will design the interior, said the pavilion's shape will be an example of U.S. technology but the inside should show its past.

Platforms on various levels—as high as 90 feet off the ground—will demonstrate U.S. culture and science. Two platforms will be allotted to space achievements.

Beneath these platforms, another set of levels will show visitors examples of contemporary U.S. paintings. Two dozen artists have been commissioned to create modernistic paintings for display in the $9,000,000 pavilion.

GIANT PORTRAITS

The American Cinema is the title of another platform that will show giant portraits of Hollywood figures of yesterday and today.

A 300-seat movie theatre will also be enclosed in the steel-webbed geodestic dome structure. It will show short clips from many of the most famous U.S. movies.

Artifacts, such as Indian dolls, early U.S. inventions, quilts and the like, will be on display for the 2,500 visitors expected to tour the pavilion each hour.

The display will be at the entrance to the dome, to keep visitors interested in case of a delay in getting up to the platforms, which will be accessible by means of a chain of escalators.

Stratford Boss Returned

STRATFORD, Ont. (CP) — Floyd Chalmers of Toronto has been re-elected president of the Stratford Shakespearean Festival Foundation of Canada.

A member of the board of governors since 1954, Mr. Chalmers was first elected president last year. Kenneth H. J. Clarke of Toronto was re-elected vice-president.

NEW GOVERNORS

Mrs. A. M. Bell and Waldo Monteith, Conservative MP for Perth, both of Stratford, were elected new governors on the 25-member board.

They succeed Senator Wallace McCutcheon of Toronto and Mrs. G. C. Jarrott of Stratford, who will join the festival senate.

Drygulched

LAS CRUCES, N.M. (UPI) — Everything was in readiness for the filming of a pilot television western series but one of the "actors" wouldn't co-operate. The scenes called for water in a nearby river, but the Rio Grande was dry.

New Stage In London

LONDON (Reuters) — A £1,000,000 theatre to be built here for the Royal Shakespeare Company will have a triangular stage jutting into the audience and a semi-circular auditorium recalling a Greek amphitheatre.

None of the 1,300 seats on the ground floor and in three regular plus side balconies will be more than 60 feet from the stage. The players will face an audience ranged before them in a 135-degree arc.

Glenlyon Smiles At B.C. History

A look at B.C.'s colorful past, designed with humor in mind, will be shown during the annual Christmas concert of Glenlyon Preparatory School in performances Monday and Tuesday evenings.

Pupils from Grades 3 through 9 will end the present term with a glimpse of history seldom seen in textbooks — a production designed by the school staff with the assistance of Dougal Fraser and free musical adaptions by Donald Woodworth.

Reading from the lower grades up, Grade 3 youngsters will portray West Coast Indians, while Grade 4 and part of Grade 6 will re-enact the founding of Fort Victoria and Captain Vancouver's passage through the straits.

Grade 5 and the rest of Grade 6 will show the great deeds of exploration of Fraser and Mackenzie, while Grade 7 will present the glories of Barkerville.

Grades 8 and 9 will trace the history of B.C.'s transport and give the picture today — and the show will end with the traditional carols by the school choir.

Interim Statement Last August

What Aetna Report Said

By HARRY YOUNG
Business Editor

Last August, only a month before Aetna Investments Ltd. decided it would no longer operate the Sunro Mine of Cowichan Copper at Jordan River, Ossie McDonald, president of Cowichan, declined to circulate an interim report to shareholders of his company.

Several thousand copies of this report were delivered to Mr. McDonald in his Vancouver office. It came from Aetna Investments of Toronto, which had a three-year management contract on the Sunro property.

The report said:

"Cowichan Copper Maintains Shipping Schedule.

"The third shipment of copper concentrates this year from Cowichan's Sunro Mine in Jordan River was made on Monday, Aug. 1. 1,220 tons of copper concentrates (25.32 per cent) were loaded aboard the Aghios Nicolaos (14,000 tons) at the company's own dock at Hatch Point.

"The cargo was bound for Port Kembla, Australia, under a contract with C. Tennant Sons and Company of New York, through British Metals Corporation (Canada) Limited, and had a value of $350,000 approximately.

"Total value of shipments so far this year now approximate $1,123,000.

KEPT IN OFFICE

When Mr. McDonald received the report he was far from satisfied with the performance of the mine at Jordan River and he felt that, by mailing the report to Cowichan shareholders, a much too optimistic view would be given.

"I just kept them in my office," said Mr. McDonald.

It was only a month later that Aetna came out with the news it was losing money on Sunro, the ore reserve situation looked to advance no more money and the mine would cease to operate.

Outside of the Aetna group few realized the matter had become so serious. Not even Mr. McDonald, who had certainly had his doubts.

The attempt by Aetna to have the interim report circulated to Cowichan shareholders came at a time when Aetna was in the process of selling out the last of its common shares in Cowichan.

NOT PREDICTABLE

To what degree the interim report might have altered the market value of Cowichan stock had it been circulated by Mr. McDonald is not predictable, but the fact remains it was sent out by Aetna to indicate all was well at Sunro, when in effect the mine was at that time losing money and Aetna was indeed on the point of pulling out.

The matter is one which should receive the attention of the securities departments of the provinces affected.

Sharp Semi-Scrooge Monday

Favorite Tax Bet: More from All

By HARRY YOUNG

This weekend's harmless speculation as to what Finance Minister Sharp may have in store for us in his Monday evening mini-budget is that it will not contain much Christmas cheer for the taxpayer.

We may get a pleasant surprise — for even a finance minister can hardly fancy the idea of being the 1966 Scrooge.

But the odds are Mr. Sharp, with his conservative financial ideology, will be going through the motions of collecting the extra revenue required to meet at least some of the government's new welfare spending.

ACROSS BOARD

The favorite bet, I gather, is that Mr. Sharp will increase the personal income tax rate "across the board" so everyone will pay a little more and there will be just that much less spending money.

On the other hand, with a recession already going in a number of industries, it is not felt Mr. Sharp may want to increase the corporation tax rate, although he might collect a few more dollars from industry in other ways.

LIQUOR VISITS

For instance, some people have been making earlier than usual visits to the liquor stores, for their Christmas cheer in the fear that there could be an increase in spirits tax.

This has not been moved for some time, but it is an old and favored method of raising the national income when other remedies are not so apparent.

However, the general feeling is that, if the excise duty on whisky et al does go up, there will be no change in the beer duty.

GROWING COSTS

The Canadian brewers have not been doing so well in recent years and they have been agitating either for lower excise duty or higher beer prices to meet their ever-growing costs of production.

The Canadian Brewers Association has already been publicking the fact that its tax burden is already oppressive enough, presumably to catch the ear of the finance minister if he is indeed thinking about that industry.

What Mr. Sharp must obviously avoid is the imposition of any new tax that will cripple the competitiveness of Canadian industry.

COULD BE HARMFUL

The economy, which has been running in an overheated condition for more than two years, now is cooling off under the tight money and high interest rate policy, and further braking at this time could be hurtful.

Some financial firms believe that, if the government was going to have put on new taxes, it should have done so two years ago when the pressures were building up, and not now when the thermometer is dropping.

It has been significant in the past few days that bond prices have improved, which rather indicates Mr. Sharp may have some incentives in mind to provide less costly money for vital purposes such as new housing in areas where home shortage is a problem.

E for Effort

Improved Image Tax Men's Goal

By HARRY YOUNG

An attempt by that rapacious body of men in the national taxation department to humanize itself is worthy of capital E for effort if nothing else.

They have produced a booklet entitled $21,000,000 a Day, which not only tells the story of how and why taxes are collected, but also shows the factual amount of the daily take.

The local tax man who brought me along a copy of the bright orange production was just as friendly as the book itself.

He explained this was something new, and he felt it was likely to improve the image of the collector among its readers.

"We are sorry we cannot send one to every taxpayer," he said. "But obviously that would be too costly."

This $21,000,000 a day effort tells us in a piece headed the Good Old Days, that July, 1917, was a sad month for Canada. It was not only the date of the Vimy Ridge tragedy but it was also the month in which income tax was introduced to Canada.

STILL TRYING

It is also interesting to note that in 1809 a report Suggestions for a Simpler Tax System was pulished. In 1966, the Carter Commission is sweating over the completion of a report on exactly the same subject.

My new income tax friend said: "We have no idea, of course, what it will contain, but presumably it will contain suggestions to simplify the current complexities of the revenue department and the taxpayers."

He did not comment upon the general rumor that Carter will suggest corporation tax should be abolished as such to avoid double taxation.

But even if such was the case, the funds would still be raised by income tax in one form or other and, although Confederation in Canada was 50 years old before income tax was applied, there are few people today who do not agree that in the long run this is the fairest and most equitable method of filling the national treasury.

Conspiracy Conviction

Box Makers Pay Big Fines

TORONTO (CP) — Twenty Canadian container manufacturers have been fined a total of $391,500 for conspiring to prevent or lessen competition in manufacturing and sale of paper and corrugated boxes from 1947 to 1954.

Largest fines, $75,000 each, were levied against Bathurst Power and Paper Co. Ltd. of Bathurst, N.B.; St. Lawrence Corp. Ltd. of Montreal; and Hinde and Dauch Ltd. of Toronto.

Other companies and their penalties were:

Gair Co. Canada Ltd. of Toronto, $45,000; Crown Zellerbach Canada Ltd. of Vancouver, $35,000; Corrugated Paper Box Ltd., Toronto, Bathurst Containers Ltd., Toronto, Canadian Wirebound Boxes and Shipping Containers Ltd., St. Laurent, Que., Kraft Containers Ltd., Hamilton, and Canadian Boxes Ltd. of British Columbia, $10,000 each; Acme Paper Products Co. Ltd., Toronto, $7,000; Hygrade Containers Ltd., London, Ont., and Martin Paper Products Holdings Ltd., Winnipeg, $5,000 each.

Maritime Paper Products Ltd., Halifax and Bathurst Containers Maritimes Ltd., Lancaster, N.B., $4,000 each; Hinde and Dauch Boxes Ltd., Toronto, Hendershot Paper Products Ltd., Hamilton, and Superior Box Co. Ltd., Kitchener, Ont., $3,000 each; Standard Paper Box Mfg. Ltd., Montreal, $1,500; Sherbrooke Paper Products Ltd., Sherbrooke, Que., $1,000.

READ JUDGMENT

Chief Justice G. A. Gale of the Ontario Supreme Court read the judgment in the absence of Mr. Justice Norman Schatz, who found the firms guilty.

The judgment said the size of the fines needed to be "a real deterrent", to such practices. It noted that several companies had previous convictions under the Combines Investigation Act.

Factors considered in arriving at the size of fines included the size of the firms, their share of the market, their position or influence in the conspiracy, the length of time they participated in the conspiracy and previous convictions.

Sharp Negligent Accountant Says

TORONTO (CP)—Accountant William Gruber said Saturday in a statement that Finance Minister Sharp showed negligence in not investigating the affairs of the Prudential Finance group of companies after having been told last January that something was amiss.

Mr. Sharp told the House of Commons Friday that Mr. Gruber had advised federal government officials in January that he had significant information about Prudential Finance and its subsidiaries. But the finance minister pinned chief responsibility on the Ontario government for failing to take action before Prudential Finance collapsed.

Mr. Sharp said he understood Mr. Gruber, a former employee of Prudential Finance's auditor, also told his story to the Ontario government "which was primarily responsible in the matter."

Mr. Gruber denied he had informed provincial government officials of the company's affairs.

Mr. Gruber said he gave federal officials specific names, dates and transactions, requesting co-operation "of the various government departments for legal protection should any of the third parties bring action against me as a result."

So Who's in a Hurry?

If an investor is offered a fixed return on a debenture or preferred share investment, he's often said on the soundness of the investment by the "increased earnings" or the "rapid expansion" of the company concerned—some of which provide little with any security at all! As a matter of fact, the fund an expansion has been perhaps the largest single reason for bankruptcies over the years . . . and so far as increased earnings are concerned, no benefit accrues to the debenture holders' credit, but only to the Common Shareholders.

Victoria Mortgage is growing too, the almost every company these days, but our director is not "a man in a hurry." Low-risk mortgages are selected that will stand on their own in the event of recession; many mortgages are as low as 25% in 25% of prime real estate security. OVER 25% OF OUR MORTGAGES ARE AGAINST SECURITY THAT INCLUDES WATERFRONT PROPERTY. In addition, the company has substantial share capital and bonds guaranteed by the B.C. Government.

Make sure your money is as soundly invested as Victoria Mortgage Debentures. There's no need to take greater risk . . . unless you're in a hurry.

Large-Scale Effort Needed in Flooding

By KLAUS MUENTER

DUNCAN — While the raging Cowichan and Koksilah rivers play havoc with settled communities, Cowichan Indians and local government officials wonder how abstract a government can become.

The failure to realize a proposed flood control scheme, which would have eased and perhaps completely alleviated the annual floods threat to people and property, resulted in three major setbacks.

According to C. A. P. Murison, chairman of the now-dormant Cowichan-Koksilah Rivers Flood Control Committee, the execution of the scheme would now cost close to $1,000,000, an engineering survey would have to be repeated because conditions have changed, and the flooding still threatens lives and valuable farm land.

COST JUMP

Mr. Murison said the disastrous flood of 1961 inundated not only large acres of farmland but also parts of the city of Duncan and the North Cowichan municipality.

To realize the plan outlined by federal engineers in 1958 would have cost $450,000.

Saturday Mr. Murison remarked the cost now would be approaching $1,000,000.

"It is the price of neglect and delay," he said.

MANY SIDES

He said the flood commitee formed several years ago consisted of local government representatives, officials from the Indian Affairs Branch, the federal fisheries department, two large companies and senior government observers.

COMMON MATTER

Saturday he noted, "The flood problem is no longer a problem of local governments but has become a matter for the federal and the provincial governments."

Mr. Murison said the detailed report was submitted to the provincial government in May 1961, but no action was taken.

He said the city of Duncan and the North Cowichan municipality were forced to carry out flood control work to protect their residents.

"The situation today has been caused by the failure of the two senior governments to get together to solve the problem," he said.

"Local governments have been compelled to do the wrong thing.

"Flood control work on a local level is unsound and yet they had no other choice."

INVESTIGATING

He referred to an earlier proposal to allow the lake to discharge high water towards the west coast via Nitinat Lake.

Mr. Murison said earlier this solution would be possible but it was found too expensive.

The mayor, who was born in Duncan, said he can remember annual floods in Cowichan Valley since he was a small boy.

He said following the severe flood here almost six years ago the city council amended the building bylaw and floor levels in houses in the low-lying areas of Duncan had to be raised.

He said, "Every year we have allotted money to carry out river flood control work but we never did any work in the river without notifying the other two parties," (North Cowichan and Indian department).

Chief of the Cowichan Indian Band Dennis Alphouse also suggested the resubmission of the flood control committee brief to the senior governments.

He said the urgent problem can only be solved on a large scale.

Safety Means Seven Inches Of Lake Level

LAKE COWICHAN — If the lake level rises another seven inches, 36 homes along the old Youbou Road at Lake Cowichan will be surrounded by water and Cedar's Resort operator Peter Edwards will supply a free ferry service by rowboat.

Mr. Edwards said Saturday, "Our parking lot is now under seven feet of water and the pumphouse, which in normal winters is 40 feet from the lakeshore, stands now in four feet of water.

"The situation for the houses along the Cowichan River in the village is quite serious and people wanting to reach dry land either have to use a boat or they have built walkways on stilts."

* * *

He said in order to get the mail from the post office in the village centre one has to wear rubber boots because the building is surrounded by water.

However, river generally began going down Saturday.

At some parts the road through the village is flooded by Cowichan River at depth ranging from four to 10 inches.

Conservation officer Jack Fox of Duncan said it is too early to tell whether there will be much damage to salmon.

He said, "We shall lose some fish."

He explained some of the salmon have gone into side streams and into flooded bush areas but many will return to the river bed when the river goes down.

He said if salmon deposit their spawn in flooded areas then the eggs will be lost when the river goes down. Some eggs may be swept away by the swift current.

* * *

Mr. Fox stressed all salmon who have spawned will die, as is the case every year regardless of flood conditions.

He said, "I don't know about any alarming losses of fish and we check the river every day."

Referring to a large log jam a few miles east of Lake Cowichan, Mr. Fox noted the jam has been there for a number of years and it is unlikely it will be washed out.

President of the Cowichan Fish and Game Association Arnie Williams confirmed Mr. Fox's statement about the log jam.

He said, "The jam has been there for many years."

Sunshine Looks Like This

You better believe that Nanaimo, at times, looks like this, with bright sunshine shining bright on shining bright cars . . . and so on. But things are not bright now at all, as rain keeps pelting down on Nanaimo and Vancouver Island. This picture, compressing several blocks into one via telephoto lens, is just reminder that things are never as bad as they seem.—(William E. John.)

Shakedown Cruise

New Weathership Returns Silently

The transport department's new weathership Vancouver came back to Victoria Saturday after a shakedown cruise to Hawaii but the only official available declined comment as to the success of the voyage.

The ship has been plagued with breakdowns and other troubles ever since she was launched. While still in the hands of the builders, Burrard Dry Dock Co. of North Vancouver, it was found necessary to pour tons of concrete into lower holds to correct a fault in the stability.

Since then there has been a series of breakdowns which plagued almost every trip she took. She left Victoria for Hawaii Nov. 3.

The beautiful but unlucky ship was supposed to take up her position on weather station Papa in the latter part of January but no announcement has been made as to whether she can keep to this date.

Cycle Push Too Much

John Hess, 51, of 20 Gorge Road West, was pronounced dead on arrival at St. Joseph's Hospital about 7:45 Saturday.

He was pushing his bicycle uphill near his home when he apparently suffered a heart attack.

All Warships Decorate For Season

All warships of Pacific Command will be decorated and illuminated for the Christmas season. The Victoria Junior Chamber of Commerce has invited the ships to participate in the annual lighting contest.

Judging of the ships will take place Tuesday night. Plans are being made to allow bus tours and private cars to enter HMC Dockyard to enable Victorians to get a close look at the decorated ships. Dates and times will be announced.

Centennial Book Best Seller

Hotcakes should sell as well as B.C.'s centennial book: "Challenge in Abundance."

The first printing of 50,000 is sold out a month after publication, the B.C. centennial committee announced Saturday. A second printing of the $2.95 volume has been ordered.

Normally a Canadian book which sells more than 5,000 is considered a best-seller.

Only 1,500 copies of a specially-bound edition selling for $10 now are available, the committee said.

Dockyarders Honored

Six people who work for HMC Dockyard have been honored for completion of 25 years' service with the defence department.

Commodore R. M. Battles, commander of the dockyard, presented 25-year buttons to Fred Hassell, 2766 Murray Drive; Edwin Meads, 4024 Metchosin; D. N. Stephenson, 1436 Stroud; Jim McVie, 2171 Bartlett; Mrs. Florence Bone, 95 Logan, and George Petch, 851 Tillicum.

Airliner Safe After Blast

EDMONTON (CP) — A turboprop Air Canada Viscount aircraft returned safely to the airport here Saturday when an explosion blew off the propellor and part of the right inboard engine shortly after take-off.

There were no injuries among the crew or the 37 passengers.

Only One Rink Eliminated

Esquimalt Rinks Unbeaten

Only the two Esquimalt rinks were unbeaten after two draws in the South Vancouver Island women's curling playdowns yesterday.

Marg Brillinger of the evening group won twice and Cora Treby of the afternoon group drew a bye and won once to reach the finals of the "A" event in the double knockout competition which will send two rinks to the Island zone final in Duncan next month.

Still in the running for one of the berths in the Island final along with Mrs. Brillinger and Mrs. Treby were Dorothy Fukuyama and Lee Jameson of the Victoria Curling Club and Verla Evans of Duncan.

SOPER RINK OUT

Mrs. Brillinger's hard-sweeping crew started rather slowly but finally caught the ice and broom to outscore Mrs. Soper, 13-9, in her first game. Then the Esquimalt rink, taking a 7-1 lead with a four on the fifth end, moved ahead with a 10-5 win over Mrs. Sexton.

EXTRA END

Mrs. Sexton had moved into the "A" semi-finals with a 10-9 extra-end decision over Mrs. Jameson, who chose to hit instead of draw with her last rock and missed a biter.

Mrs. Treby almost lost a game she shou'd have won handily before taking a 10-9 extra-end win over Mrs. Fukuyama in the other "A" semi.

BIG END

It took the winners longer than it should have to pull ahead against a Victoria rink that was having a bad game but the Esquimalt quartet cracked down for four on the fifth end coming home.

It looked safe enough for most of the last end but Mrs. Fukuyama had the game tied with last rock in her hand. She was about a foot light with her draw and it went to an extra end.

Mrs. Fukuyama and her rink had opened with an 18-6 win over Mrs. Evans on the morning draw.

In the sixth game yesterday, Mrs. Jameson jumped off to an 11-0 lead for a 17-5 win over Mrs. Soper to reach the fours of "B" event.

Three draws today will decide the two South Island winners.

One will come out when Mrs. Brillinger and Mrs. Treby meet this morning at 8. This morning's other game will be a rematch between Mrs. Evans and Mrs. Fukuyama.

On the noon draw, Mrs. Jameson will play the Evans-Fukuyama winner in one "B" semi-final and Mrs. Sexton will play the Brillinger-Treby loser in the other. The "B" final is at 4 p.m.

Boosting Fan Appeal Davey's Objective

TORONTO (CP) — Senator Keith Davey, commissioner-elect of the Canadian Football League, says he will promote the game by upgrading its fan appeal.

Dick Beddoes, writing in the Globe Magazine, a weekend supplement of The Globe and Mail, says Davey advocates wrapping up defensive football with the garbage, paying officials more money, making the teams help the have-nots, giving the game back to the fans.

Davey replaces Sydney Halter of Winnipeg as commissioner Jan. 1. Beddoes, in an interview with Davey, deduces that the commissioner-elect will leave no stone unturned in his bid to promote football, with everything from better stadiums to pretty girls.

The story quotes Davey:

"I first have to affect one league. I've got to implement the C.O.O.L. report to bring East and West into a genuine football confederation."

C.O.O.L. is the Committee On One League, comprising the presidents of the nine CFL clubs. The committee, formed last winter, has failed to agree on the controversial areas of gate equalization and sharing television revenues.

ARGOS GIVING TROUBLE

"In gate equalization, the haves give to the have-nots. We are having trouble getting Toronto Argonauts to give all the way.

"I can understand the reluctance of the eastern clubs to give up money. They're all privately owned, and contributions are bound to belt somebody in the private wallet.

"But the CFL will remain balkanized until the eastern cities, with their bigger revenues, realize they must share equally.

EMPTY SEATS

"It's ridiculous that there were 4,000 empty seats for the Grey Cup. It's also disconcerting that in six playoff games, three in the East and three in the West, we weren't even close to a single sellout.

It's no baffling secret why our attendance is off. We're hit by the availability of the U.S. product on Canadian television, so easy to get on the CBC market.

"It's incredible to me that a network that is predicated on establishing a national identity, can be piping in NFL games, directly harming a Canadian game. I look on this as ludicrous.

"... We've got to get more of our product on the CBC, and we've also got to improve that product. We need more scoring and more stars. I put the onus on the teams to produce more offence.

"We need more consistency in officiating, especially as it relates to the two divisions (Eastern Football Conference and Western Football Conference.) Plays are called more closely in the West than in the East.

"I have some ways the officiating can be improved, but I'm not prepared to reveal them now. Mr. Halter's public attitude was that officials could do no wrong and he stood behind them 100 per cent. I can say I will stand behind them, but I hope we can improve their public relations."

Davey has already announced hiring CBC television personality Fred Sgambati of Toronto to run the league's service bureau. He has also hired Trudy Hanson of Winnipeg, daughter of Fritzie Hanson, one of the celebrated characters in Western football 30 years ago.

"We'll also hire two other girls," Davey is quoted as saying.

"Right off I'm costing the league $50,000 more a year than Halter did. I'd guess he ran his office for about $150,000, but we'll hit close to $200,000.

"Sgambati is set to gear up the PR as my liaison between TV, radio and sponsors. I'm also hoping he can produce weekly press releases, not just for the papers, but something on the order of films and tapes for radio and TV stations across the country."

FAVORS HAMILTON SITE

The story says Halter did not issue a single press release in 10 years.

It also quotes Davey as saying something must be done about the Football Hall of Fame.

"I'm for having it in Hamilton, providing Hamilton confirms its interest in the project, but failing that, we might have to consider Toronto as a site.

Did Bower Bring On Retirement?

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Star columnist Jim Proudfoot says Carl Brewer's retirement from professional hockey 14 months ago was brought on by a "violent argument" with teammate Johnny Bower.

Proudfoot says the incident occurred during a pre-season exhibition game Oct. 14, 1965, in Peterborough.

Brewer was already "downcast and upset" by the pressures of professional hockey and his desire to attend university when he reported to camp that year, the column says.

The blowup with Bower, veteran National Hockey League goalie, came in a game against Boston Bruins when Bower "spoke sternly" to Brewer on the ice for sloppy puck clearing. The exchange was continued in the dressing room after the first period, Proudfoot says.

"The tirade cost Leafs a superb hockey player because it was the last straw for Brewer," says Proudfoot.

Brewer in Nats Lineup

Defenceman Carl Brewer is expected to be in the Canadian national team's line up for its game Monday night against the touring Moscow Selects. A limited number of tickets will be on sale for the game Monday night.

Leafs Move Up Ladder With Shutout Over Gulls

VICTORIA 2, SAN DIEGO 0

SAN DIEGO — Victoria Maple Leafs eased into a fifth place tie in the Western Hockey League standings with a 2-0 win over last-place San Diego Gulls here Saturday night.

It was the Leafs' fourth win in five games, giving them 24 points — just one back of Oakland and two behind idle Los Angeles.

Next games: Today — Oakland at Portland; Vancouver at Seattle.

The win gave rookie Al Smith his fourth shut-out of the season, tops in the league. Closest to him is Don Simmons of the Vancouver Canucks who has three.

The win came on a pair of third-period goals by Milan Marcetta and it was the Leafs third win against the Gulls this year.

Marcetta broke a scoreless tie at 14:48 of the third period with a 10-foot shot after receiving assisting passes from Bruce Carmichael and Andy Hebenton.

Marcetta put the clincher into an empty net with 26 seconds to play as San Diego pulled goalie Les Binkley in a bid to tie the game.

Binkley starred for the Gulls with 34 saves, including eight when San Diego's Jim Eagle was serving the only penalty of the game early in the first period.

Victoria played without injured Bill Shvetz and Bob Barlow but had a new defenceman combining with Sandy Hucul, Tom Polanic.

It was a balanced team effort in front of Smith's alert tending that brought the Leafs the victory.

The Leafs now have a two-day lay-off before meeting the Blades in Los Angeles Tuesday night. By then the Leafs expect to have Barlow and probably Shvetz back in action.

Victoria then has league-leading Portland Wednesday before returning home for Saturday's game against the Vancouver Canucks.

Totems' Late-Game Rally Earns Tie with Oakland

The Seattle Totems rallied with four goals in the third period Saturday night for a 5-5 overtime tie with the California Seals, putting them ahead of the Seals into fourth place in the Western Hockey League.

Seattle's last two goals were scored in the final one minute and six seconds. The tying goal was a 30-foot shot from the right side by Howie Hughes after Tom Thurlby had been sent to the penalty box.

Forbes Kennedy scored the first two California goals, poking in a close rebound of a shot by Keith Wright nearly 10 minutes into the game and another rebound of a long shot by Mo Mantha with the Totems one man short. George Swarbrick added two before the first period ended.

Cliff Schmautz and Arlo Goodwin pushed in two goals in the third period Saturday night, breaking up a tie and giving Portland a 4-3 Western Hockey League victory.

Don Head of Portland made 37 saves for the league leaders.

After Schmautz and Goodwin scored in the last period, Larry Cahan of Vancouver made the score 4-3.

VIEWS of SPORT

By Red Smith

There is an apocryhpal story about a time when George Edward Arcaro was getting fed up with the boos that assaulted his ears whenever he finished a race less than five lengths in front at old Jamaica. A friend delivered a small sermon about the lot of a public figure, the importance of taking the bitter with the sweet, etc.

"After all," he said, "you know at Yankee Stadium they boo Joe DiMaggio."

"They do?" Eddie said aghast. "But he's always trying."

Well, the devoted followers of the football Giants will hold choir rehearsal every evening this week, aiming to shine up their chordal structure and dominant overtones for the season's final rendition of "Goodbye, Allie," at Sunday's game with Dallas.

Allie Sherman heard the familiar cantata last Sunday, but it was not sung well. The choristers were too dispirited watching the Giants make their floundering way into the record book as the sorriest defensive force in all National League history. Now the carolers have only one more chance, and the coach of a team that can disgorge 484 points to the opposition in 13 games deserves their best effort.

* * *

Except when a slight reediness in the tenor section offends his ear for harmony, Allie listens to the serenade as equably as La Dona Juanita Tenorio de Sevilla on a moon-washed balcony. Across the river in Shea Stadium, Joe Namath responded differently the first time the clientele gave him the treatment.

Hearing the time-honored "bra-a-a-u-kkk" from a home crowd, he was puzzled, then dismayed, then angry. The newspapers overplayed it childishly, as though the Jets' gilded youth were some kind of deity properly immune from the disrespect shown so often to DiMaggio, Mickey Mantle, Roger Maris, Ted Williams, Arcaro, Charley Conerly, Y. A. Tittle, and, indeed, just about all the most popular figures who have entertained New York fans.

It is easy to understand Namath's reaction. Life on the Alabama campus hadn't prepared him for this. In college, the brave old team is always right, even when it is defending the honor of the school by taking pratfalls for Sunnybrook Poly. An infidel who questioned the divinity of Bear Bryant would be deported.

In professional sports, the spectator is a bird of other plumage. When he walks up to the box office he buys not only a place to plant his britches, but also a forum where he can state his views. And his critical faculties, as Namath has found out, are not cramped by narrow loyalties.

* * *

In all our big spectator sports, New York probably has the most knowledgeable fans in America, for they have been exposed to the best in every field of entertainment from the ball park to ballet.

In pro football, for example, New York was the first to canonize the anonymous mine mules on the defensive unit. Ultimately other towns learned to appreciate operatives like Doug Atkins and Bil George, Gino Marchetti and Big Daddy Lipscomb, Roger Brown and Joe Schmidt, but when the barricades in many cities were still manned by nameless silhouettes, Andy Robustelli and Jim Katcavage, Rosey Grier, Mo Modzelewski, and Sam Huff were headlines the big town.

Knowledgeable or not, however, the sports fan remains a strange critter. If he attends the theater, he doesn't hiss Mary Martin when she makes her appearance, yet in the ball park he greets the star of the piece with maledictions and opprobrium.

Sports are supposed to bring out the best in people, not only the players who benefit physically from being trampled into the frozen earth by Ernie Ladd, but also the spectators whose spirits they uplift. Sometimes a guy has to wonder, though.

* * *

There is, to be sure, one group that stands as a notable exception to the rule that professional sports fans drink blood and beat their mothers. Sugar and spice and all things nice — that's what ever-loving Mets fans are made of.

The rest demand perfection at all times, and woe betide the hero who stumbles. Once in a while, though, an athlete may be warmed by the discovery that there's really nothing personal in the abuse heaped on him.

In the 1959 Belmont Stakes, Arcaro's mount, Black Hills, fell on the stretch turn and a chill silenced the crowd when the rider lay still, a tiny, crumpled figure in the mud. Not seriously hurt, Eddie took a few days off and during his convalescence good wishes poured in by the thousands.

One Month Big Difference To New York Rangers

On the morning of Nov. 9, National Hockey League standings showed them with six points from their first nine games. They had two wins, five defeats and two ties and it didn't look much different than any other recent season.

That night, they played to a 3-3 tie with Boston Bruins, then they routed Montreal Canadiens, 6-3, on Nov. 12.

They haven't looked back since, the last six weeks bringing them an 11-2-4 record in 17 games in a long stretch of fine hockey which appears to be getting even better.

Last night in Toronto, they ran their latest win streak to five games by handing the Maple Leafs their first defeat in 13 games on Toronto ice this season, 3-1.

With Chicago Black Hawks held to a 4-4 tie in Montreal, the win moved the Rangers two points ahead of the Hawks and three ahead of the Leafs.

Solid defensive hockey and steady goalkeeping produced the points again last night. The Rangers, with their forwards coming back to help, presented a solid defence which seldom let the Leafs get anything resembling a sustained attack underway.

When the Leafs did get in, Ed Giacomin, who leads NHL goalkeepers with three shutouts and a 2.27 goals-against average, kept up the play which has been so important in the New York drive.

Giacomin yielded only to a blazing slap shot by Frank Mahovlich in the second period.

It tied the score at 1-1 but an alert move by Rod Gilbert, who came from one side the Toronto goal to the other to get a loose puck, broke the tie in the third period. Then Bernie Geoffrion made no mistake when he was put in front of Bruce Gamble late in the period.

Since they started their move, the Rangers have lost only to Montreal Canadians. They have been tied once by the Hawks and three times by the Bruins while defeating Detroit Red Wings three times and the other four clubs twice each.

Canadiens had to come from behind four times to get their point against the Hawks as Chicago's Glenn Hall came up with a sparkling display of goaltending.

BELIVEAU HURT

It may prove to be a costly point for Canadiens, whose comeback started when Jean Beliveau finally became healthy after starting the season with a bad wrist and then acquiring a pulled muscle.

Beliveau was hit with a stick in the first period and was taken to hospital with a contusion of the right eye. He will miss tonight's game in Boston and could be out of action for some time.

DUFF A HERO

Dick Duff was the Montreal hero, tying the score at 3-3 in the second period and then getting the last goal of the game in the 12th minute of the third period.

Play was wide open from the start with both clubs skating hard to provide the best action of the season here. Chicago's Hull brothers each scored in the first period with Gilles Tremblay and John Ferguson answering for Canadiens. Duff's goals equalized for the scoring shots made by Ken Wharram in the first period and Lou Angotti in the second.

O'Keefes PCSL Record Unblemished After Draw

By ROBIN JEFFREY

NEW WESTMINSTER 2, VICTORIA 2

Only the splosh-splosh-splosh of footsteps in the mud were to be heard as Victoria O'Keefes and New Westminster Royals engaged in a game of stalemate and attrition. The clubs played to a 2-2 Pacific Coast Soccer League draw on a pitch that looked like pictures of Passchendaele Ridge in 1917.

Indeed, if a couple of stretcher-bearers had materialized in the muddy wastes of either penalty area, or if the Red Baron had come swooping out of the sky, few of the 336 hardy fans (including Lieutenant-Governor Pearkes) would have been surprised.

From the start, the game had an aura of unreality about it, and all that was needed to complete the picture of the Western Front was the odd exploding shell.

The Royals nearly dropped one bombshell: they came close to beating the undefeated O'Keefes, who, despite a good first half, were lucky to escape with a draw.

O'Keefes made the mistake of trying to play short-passing soccer, instead of kick-and-hope, a more sensible system under the conditions. For the first 40 minutes while the field was only moderately muddy, O'Keefes held the play and took a 2-0 lead.

ROYALS TOOK OVER

But the Royals were in control the rest of the way.

Jim Menzies scored his seventh goal of the season at 22 minutes from about eight yards, like MacKay had nodded a high ball to Menzies' feet.

Then MacKay scored 13 minutes later. Dane McCaig carried the ball into the middle, drawing the defence. MacKay cut to the wing to take McCaig's pass and went in alone to score.

And Gerela, who floundered with more skill than most, tied the game nine minutes into the second half. After a free kick on the right wing, Errol Crossan beat one man, carried to the goal line, and cut the ball back for Gerela to slam home.

Gerela missed another great chance earlier in the first half. He beat Don McIntosh and goalie Barry Sadler and drove a shot at the open net from about 14 yards. But fullback Dave Stothard came from nowhere to head off the line.

Royals outshot Victoria, 13-7, in the second half, although the teams were even, 18-18, on the match. O'Keefes, however, had 11 corners on the game to Royals' four. Referee Keith Bickmore gave 17 fouls against the Royals and 11 against Victoria.

OVER THE BAR

New Westminster's best chance to win came with 15 minutes left when Jim Nicol's shot was cleared off the Victoria line and Crossan volleyed the rebound over the bar.

O'Keefes nearly pulled it out in the last three minutes. Royals' centre half Ernie Koverchuk fell on the ball in the penalty area. Many fans thought he had raked it under him with his hand, but Bickmore gave an indirect kick for smothering the ball.

DIVING SAVE

Bert Soutar, who, with Peter Brett, was O'Keefes' best man, slammed the ball for a low corner, but goalie Robin Davies made a brilliant diving save. Davies had a fine game for Royals and robbed Soutar twice in the first half.

NEW WESTMINSTER—Robin Davies; Sandy Beveridge, Ken Wood; Jack James, Ernie Koverchuk, Bob Denham; Errol Crossan, Robbie Goodheart, Metro Gerela, Bob Hunter, Jim Nicol. Reserves: Jim Goodheart, Fred Hildreth.

North Shore Takes Runnerup Position

VANCOUVER (CP) — North Shore moved into sole possession of second place in Pacific Coast Soccer League standings Saturday by playing to a scoreless tie with St. Andrews here Saturday.

St. Andrews remains in last place in the eight-team league. Both sides played good soccer but neither could mount a sustained attack in the heavy rain and mud.

Olympian End With Records

During the events, coach Trevor Cole's squad set 19 meet, three team and two national records.

Grant Treloar and Arlene Henderson churned out Canadian 15-16 age group records in the 50-yard freestyle races. Miss Henderson finished in 28.6 seconds and Treloar in 24.4

The most valuable swimmer award was presented to Jim Golimer, 13, who broke six Canadian records during the year and represented the country against U.S.A. at London, Ont.

Merit awards for outstanding swimming and spirit were won by Mary Pat Humphries, 13, and Ross Bruce, 15. Retiring president Jim Forsythe who is leaving Victoria through an RCMP transfer was presented a desk set for his excellent guidance.

Trophy winners in other events were Miss Henderson, Treloar, Jay Ranson, Cherri Sutherland, Rick Davidge, Brenda Meredith, Bruce Mockford, Bruce Dennis-ton, Peter Cruise and Lorrie Cosby.

Oak Bay Tops Badminton

Oak Bay will take a four-point lead into the second half of the Inter-High School Badminton League when play resumes after the Christmas holidays.

Oak Bay has 25 points followed by Claremont (21), Victoria High (18), Norfolk House-University School (11) and Esquimalt (5).

Cricket Test To Indies

BOMBAY, India (Reuters)—The West Indies, chasing a winning target of 167 runs with eight second-innings wickets intact, was poised today to beat India in the first cricket test after the fourth day's play.

* * *

Standing between the West Indies and victory is 21-year-old B. S. Chandrasekhar. Chandrasekhar, who bowls medium-paced googlies, grabbed two West Indies wickets in the last 35 minutes. His figures today were 2 for 14 and he took 7 for 157 in the first innings.

* * *

India, 44 for no wicket overnight, fought a gallant rearguard action after offspinner Lance Gibbs (4 for 67) and legspinner David Holford (3 for 94) had reduced them to 217 for 8. But they were all out for 316 leaving the West Indies needing 192 for victory.

Alf Pike Returns On Junior Level

CALGARY (CP) — Western hockey fans are watching with interest as Alf Pike, former coach of New York Rangers of the National Hockey League, attempts to build Calgary Buffaloes of the Canadian Major Junior Hockey League into a solid operation.

Pike, who took over as manager-coach about a month ago, said in an interview recently he is determined to pull the Buffaloes together.

The club, in last place in the seven-team circuit, carries a record of two wins, 21 losses and two ties. The problem is compounded by lack of finances, poor attendance and lack of players. The club also is beginning to hurt attendance in the other six CMJHL rinks.

The CMJHL was formed this season after a dispute with the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, which suspended the teams, all players and officials. The CMJHL has been subsidizing the Buffaloes. Many claim success of the Calgary franchise will dictate the league's future.

Pike said he was aware of rumors the Buffaloes might be trying to move to Lethbridge. "But I want to make it quite clear we have no such idea.

"We're going to be here next year, in Calgary, and that's where we're going to stay. If Lethbridge gets a franchise, that's up to them."

"I'd like to see a group of Calgary people come forward and go on the executive, put up some money and run the club. I'll do the managing and coaching . . . I haven't even got an executive now. It's impossible.

"We need players" said Pike, who has brought in several already. The latest is 210-pound defenceman Cary Wilson from Brandon Wheat Kings of the Manitoba Junior League.

Six Ex-Titlists In Colonist Golf

Japanese Athletes Top Asian Games

BANGKOK (AP)—Japan put the finishing touches on a sweep of all 28 swimming gold medals at the Asian Games Saturday and then added medals in cycling, shooting and lawn tennis.

But the Japanese had to share some of the glory with a Thai cyclist, who won two golds in one day, and with a South Korean army sergeant, who outclassed an Israeli marksman in a record setting rifle duel.

Altogether, 12 more gold medals were handed out and the Japanese bagged seven to raise their over-all count in eight days of competition to 68. Their closest rival, South Korea, added two for a total of nine. Host Thailand won three Saturday to move into third in the gold medal race with eight.

A Japanese university student, Masanori Tsuji, won a gold medal in the 10,000 metres massed start track cycling event.

However, the star of the day's cycling was a Thai bank clerk, Preeda Chullamondhol, who won the 1,000-metre individual time trial track test in the morning and the 800-metre massed start race in the afternoon.

In the small bore rifle prone shooting contest for individuals, South Korean army sergeant Cho Wha-il and Israeli Nehemia Sikra made identical scores of 585 out of a possible 600, both breaking the old Asian Games record of 584.

Choo won the gold medal because he had the best score—98 out of 100—in the last series. Sikra had 96.

Japan's other gold medal Saturday was won in the mixed doubles lawn tennis by Miss Reiko Miyagi and Koji Watanabe.

Wilson Feted

Petty Officer Russell Wilson has been chosen as this year's winner of the Charles McDonald Memorial Trophy for the person who contributes the most to sports in the Pacific Maritime Command.

In addition to his participation and arranging of various activities, PO Wilson coached the Navy soccer team, a local minor soccer Gorge team and umpired Little League Baseball this year.

Wild Rioting Erupts After Punch Thrown

BANGKOK (UPI) — Wild, rioting erupted Saturday night at an Asian games basketball contest between South Korea and Thailand. Players, fans and officials slugged it out while soft drink bottles filled the air.

The melee began when a Korean player slugged a Thai player during a scramble under the basket with less than five minutes to play. Korea, the favorite, was trailing 65-53 at the time.

* * *

Korean Kim Chaluakap slugged Thai Charmaronk Seriwat and both benches charged into each other and began throwing fists. A Korean official dashed onto the court and slugged the Filipino referee, Feliciano Mamiuki.

* * *

Enraged, Thai fans rushed out from the stands and within seconds the court looked like a boxing gymnasium.

It took a contingent of 50 police more than 15 minutes to clear the floor.

Carter Pleads Not Guilty

PATERSON, N.J. (AP)—Rubin Hurricane Carter, 29, a middleweight boxer, and John Artis, 21, a truck driver and sparring partner, pleaded not guilty Friday to charges of killing three people in a bar June 17 during an apparent holdup.

Two of the victims, George Oliver, the 52-year-old bar tender, and George Nauyoks, 60, of Cedar Grove, N.J., were killed outright. A third, Hazel Tanis, 51, died of wounds a month later.

No date has been set for the trial.

Dallas Cowboys Back Into Division Title

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Cleveland spotted St. Louis a 10-point lead, then roared back on the passing of Frank Ryan to thrash the Cardinals 38-10 Saturday and give Dallas the National Football League's Eastern Conference championship.

MEETS GIANTS

Dallas, which plays the Giants at New York today, has a 9-3-1 record while Cleveland, now in second place in the Eastern Conference, has a 9-5 record. Dallas will play Western Conference champion Green Bay at Dallas Jan. 1 for the NFL championship.

The loss, the fourth in the last five games for St. Louis, gives the Cardinals an 8-5-1 season record. St. Louis, which had been no lower than second in the conference before Saturday, could finish as low as fourth, depending on the outcome of the Philadelphia - Washington game today. Philadelphia takes an 8-5 record into that game.

Cleveland, now in second place, can gain a spot in the NFL's Playoff Bowl if Washington beats Philadelphia. The second place team gets the Playoff Bowl bid.

St. Louis jumped to a 10-point lead in the second quarter on Jim Bakken's 10-yard field goal and Terry Nofsinger's one-yard quarterback sneak.

UNLIMBERED ARM

But Ryan unlimbered his passing arm and hit flanker Gary Collins for a 42-yard scoring play. Minutes later, Lou Groza's 37-yard field goal tied the score.

Ryan put the Browns into the lead for good early in the third quarter when he hit Collins on a 44-yard scoring play. Leroy Kelly next scored from the one.

In the fourth quarter, Ryan passed to Ernie Green for 19 yards and to Clifton McNeil for 50 yards for touchdowns as the vaunted St. Louis defence collapsed.

Joe Namath Sends Jets To Victory

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Jets, making the most of Joe Namath's passes and Boston's errors, upended the Patriots 38-28 Saturday and prevented them from clinching the Eastern Division title in the American Football League.

The loss dropped Boston's record to 8-4-2 and left Buffalo with an opportunity to clinch its third straight crown by beating Denver today.

The Bills, 8-4-1, and Patriots also could wind up in a tie, necessitating a playoff, if Buffalo and Denver tie.

David Herd Fires Three Goals As Manchester Edges West Brom

LONDON (Reuters) — Three goals by inside left David Herd helped Manchester United gain an exciting 4-3 away victory over West Bromwich Albion today to consolidate its position at the top of the English First Division soccer league.

Chelsea, its nearest rival, figured in another match of many goals, from which it could gain only one point. Chelsea drew 5-5 at home with West Ham United.

With Stoke City losing 2-1 at home to Nottingham Forest, Liverpool retained third place with 26 points, though its game against Leicester was postponed because the ground was unfit after rain.

West Bromwich Albion, second from the bottom of the standing, gave Manchester United a tremendous fight, twice battling back to equalize after being a goal down.

All the goals came in the first half. Herd scored in the fifth, 13th and 41st minutes and Denis Law got United's other goal after 33 minutes.

Bobby Tambling rammed in an equalizer for Chelsea 30 seconds from the end of its match against West Ham, setting an individual goal - scoring record for his club.

This goal and one he scored from the penalty spot 10 minutes from the end gave him a total of 129 for Chelsea—one more than the record set by Roy Bentley in 1956.

The biggest crowd of the day, 47,805, was rewarded by a match of never-to-be-forgotten thrills. West Ham, throwing everything into the attack, twice led by two goals—2-5 and 5-3—but Chelsea pulled out brilliant form in battling back to equalize.

Five goals were scored in 10 minutes in the second half. Scorers were Tambling (2), Tommy Baldwin, Tony Hateley and Charles Cooke for Chelsea, John Sissions (2), Peter Brabrook, Martin Peters and John for West ham.

SCORES TWO

Joe Baker, former England and Arsenal centre forward, rammed in two second half goals which Nottingham Forest a victory over Stoke—Forest's second win in 10 away league games.

Burnley took fifth place in the league, just behind Stoke, with a 1-1 tie on Sheffield United's ground. Bill Irvine scored a 62nd minute equalizer after United led 1-0 at halftime.

In the Second Division, Millwall registered its 58th home game without defeat with a 2-0 win over Rotherham United.

Three second-half goals gave Birmingham a 3-2 win over Wolverhampton Wanderers which toppled the losers from the Second Division leadership. Wolves scored in the 65th second and were later two goals up, but were outplayed in the closing stages.

GLASGOW EASY WINNERS

The two Glasgow clubs which are in the quarterfinals of European soccer competitions both won easily in the Scottish First Division. Celtic, through to the last eight in the European Cup, defeated Partick Thistle 6-2, and Rangers beat Airdrieonians 3-0.

Willie Wallace, playing only his second game for Celtic, helped the club score its 13th win in 15 league games with goals in the second and 24th Minutes.

Moscow Gets That Feeling, Too

By PETER WORTHINGTON

There are decorated fir trees, winking colored lights, scenes showing children getting presents, and pictures and models of a saintly looking Santa Claus figure in a gold-tassled bathrobe.

Kids swathed in fur parkas with faces hidden behind coils of colored woolen scarves, bounce furiously up and down as they gaze at the displays in Detsky Mir — Children's World — the largest toy store on earth.

Mothers smile tolerantly, while fathers are inclined to look mournful and grumble about the season becoming "too commercial."

But for certain differences in degree and styles, it could be Toronto, Calgary, Detroit or Snake Elbow early in December.

But this is Moscow — and officially there is no Christmas. Christmas went out with the czars nearly 50 years ago, and Dec. 25 is just another working day (except this year which will be a day of more-or-less rest — but only because it's Sunday).

CASUALTY

After the 1917 revolution the Bolsheviks went on an orgy of destroying everything that was mindful of the czarist past, and Christmas was one of the first casualties.

A decorated tree in a house then could be dangerous: A one-way ticket to Siberia, or worse. Today a tree in the apartment is "Leiturnia" — the cultured thing to do.

On Moscow's streets you now see Christmas trees . . . whoops. New Year's trees being sold. And you can even buy pink, blue and silver nylon trees for fancy prices ranging up to $15.

CARDS, CLOTHES

In honor of New Year's the authorities allow citizens to purchase 4½ pounds of flour — a big deal in a country where flour is not for sale, although bread and cakes are plentiful.

Flour is a sort of Soveit Christmas present to the people.

Every year in Russia is getting more buoyant and gay — and more un-Soviet. Churches are filling up around Christmas, and not only with old people.

SHELVES FULL

Store shelves are filled with goods.

The Russian people have never had it so good as they are having it this Christmas.

Christmas in Moscow — though there isn't such a thing — has a familiar atmosphere.

In a way it's just like being back home.

It makes you think that maybe the Chinese complaints about Russia have some validity — that Russians and Westerners are becoming more and more alike.

Crimean War Over at Last!

Yes, the Crimean War, which for everyone but the 12,000 inhabitants of this sleepy market town ended 100 years ago.

By a quirk of history, Berwick remained officially at war with Russia after the rest of Britain and its allies — France, Turkey and Sardinia — made their peace in 1856.

But a Soviet journalist and Berwick's mayor finally ended the non-violent conflict, which became one of the classic jokes of British history.

The ownership of Berwick changed 13 times in centuries — long wars between England and Scotland. It last became part of England in 1482 with rights to special mention in state ceremonies and documents.

So when England declared war on Russia in 1854, it was announced "in the name of Victoria, Queen of Great Britain, Ireland, the British Dominions beyond the seas . . . and Berwick-on-Tweed."

The Light Brigade made their historic charge, the guns of Sevastopol fell silent, and the treaty was drawn up — but the citizens of Berwick were somehow forgotten, and not mentioned in the treaty.

Mayor R. H. Know of Berwick, however, now has told the London correspondent of the Soviet newspaper Pravda, Oleg Orestov, "please tell the Russian people they can sleep peacefully in their beds."

To which Orestov replied:

"The Soviet nation is a peace-loving nation and will do everything to live peaceably with all the nations of the world — including the inhabitants of Berwick-on-Tweed."

Mice Fearless

These mice have found the key to co-existence. Mixed-up cat fiercely protects her ward, Squeaky. Both are pets of Patry household of St. James, Man. Other mouse lives with his friend the crocodile in Transvaal Snake Park in South Africa. It's not in spirit of Christmas—this bonhomie goes all the time.

Prisons Admit Need for Love

Swindlers, thieves, even murderers are allowed to entertain their wives or lovers periodically in private rooms set aside by prison authorities for that purpose.

Male prisoners can receive their wives once a week. In most prisons, they are permited four to six hours together. Other prisons permit overnight visits.

* * *

Bachelors can receive their girl friends. If they have none they are permitted private interludes with prostitutes.

Female prisoners also are permited private visits by husbands —or lovers, if they are single.

This means that many children are born in Mexican prisons and spend the first years of their lives behind bars.

* * *

The most extreme case recently involved the daughter born to an unwed mother in a prison in Mexico City. The woman refused to let the child out of her sight until she finished her sentence. By that time the girl was eight years old.

The mother had no relatives outside and she was afraid if the girl went outside, she'd never see her again.

* * *

The custom of permitting conjugal visis is solidly rooted in the Mexican prison system. It was brought over from Spain by the conquistadores in the 16th century, and no one has even considered abolishing it.

Often, visits lead to marriage. Many marriages are performed on prison grounds. In some prisons, the newlyweds are permited three days of privacy for a honeymoon.

* * *

In the maximum security prison on the Tres Marias islands, off the west coast state of Nayarit, prisoners are isolated by miles of treacherous waters from other humans.

But even they are permitted conjugal visits. As a result families and mistresses of prisoners live right on the islands, which may help explain why only three major escape atempts have been made there since 1900.

Colwood's First Office Block Started

By JIM BRAHAN

Construction on Colwood's first specifically designed office building started Tuesday at Colwood Corners and is expected to be completed in early spring.

More than 5,000 square feet of office space is being added above and to the rear of the Colwood Pharmacy building which was built about 18 months ago.

$80,000 COST

Roger Spurling, president of Canland Holdings Ltd., owners of the building, says the additional offices will cost about $80,000.

He hopes to attract professional men into the area to serve the Glen Lake, Langford, Metchosin and Happy Valley districts.

OVERLAP

He noted that while the population of the area has made rapid advances in recent years, very little has been attempted in the commercial field.

Of cantilever construction the second floor will extend sideways beyond the exterior walls of the ground floor area.

Its designer, Victoria architect John Di Castri, said one of the building's strong points will be an imposing entranceway leading to the offices from the west side of the building.

He also noted that to get to the parking area at the rear of the building cars will drive under the arms of the extended second floor.

FINE VIEW

The offices have been designed to take advantage of the view provided by the greens of the Colwood golf course. Each will have electric heating governed by individual thermostat controls.

Provision had been made in the foyer design for the installation of an automatic elevator if the demand warrants.

Mr. Spurling said the original building was designed with the addition of the second floor in mind.

"This just completes our project."

OUTDONE

The pharmacy, with its 6,400 square feet of floor area, was until recently the largest in the province. But a few months ago an even larger drugstore was opened in a B.C. Interior town.

The Stamp Packet

Knights Win Joust

By FAITH ANGUS

The Sovereign and Military Order of Malta has won at least a partial victory in its campaign for a commemorative issue. Previously announced designs appeared on Nov. 15, printed by De La Rue and Co. and engraved by C. V. Staderini. Only 200,000 complete sets were run off but lower values range up to 2,000,000 copies.

Designs are inscribed "Poste Magistrali" and postal validity at this time seems to be limited to correspondence between the various international offices of the knights themselves. The entire set of nine adhesives will be matched with an issue of coins in the near future.

* * *

Canada's 5c centennial stamp (Jan. 11), unlike the average commemorative, will remain on sale and in production throughout the whole year. The design by Brigdons Ltd. is that of the national flag flying over Canada.

Adhesive used will be the same as that employed on the 1966 Highway Safety stamp and a percentage of the issue will be treated with a special coating for mail-handling equipment in the Winnipeg area.

Printing will be by the stell-line intaglio process by the Canadian Bank Note Co., Ottawa.

* * *

A finely specialized collection of Falkland Islands which had been offered intact for $7,500, realized a total of $9,640 when it was auctioned in 119 lots by Harmer, Rooke and Co. several weeks ago. The Falkland Centenary set in imprint blocks of four with original gum, sold for $3,300 against a catalogue figure of $1,983.

The "Black Frank" on a neat registered cover to England postmarked Jan. 3, 1876, achieved $800, close to Gibbons' figure of $840. A bid of $300 took a rare South Georgia cover of 1912 bearing two of the Edward VII ½p green with straight-line "South Georgia" hand-stamp partly obscured by the adhesives.

Imperforate proofs of the 1898 2sh6p green and 5sh. brown, perforated "Specimen," brought $170 (estimated price, $125). The Centenary set perforated "Specimen," $185.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE!

What a Colonist Newspaper Route Means to KEN WILSON

Of all the Colonist carrier boys, surely none have won more prizes, awards, trophies and trips than future engineer Ken Wilson, 13, of 107 Bushby.

Ken, a grade nine honor student at Central Junior Secondary School, has slightly less than two year's service as a carrier.

Yet he has won two model car kits, a sheath knife and case, a hatchet and case, bicycle lock and hand grips, two Port Angeles trips, a Vancouver trip, $20 in "Back to School" contests, " a large bag of chocolate bars," and free tickets for hamburgers, bowling, movies, skating, swimming and a football game.

In addition, for excellent delivery service, he has been awarded 21 monthly certificates, two crests, two wallets, two pen and pencil sets and a briefcase.

And his carrier profits—about $47 per month on his 94-customer Fairfield route—have purchased for him a three-speed bike, wrist watch, clothes, two years of Summer Band School, a membership in the YMCA, and his own bank account.

A Boy Scout, he also collects stamps and model cars, sings in his church boys' choir and participates in the youth study group following the services, is a member of his school's band, projectionist and badminton clubs, and participates in chess, swimming and basketball at the YMCA.

Interested in mathematics and science, Ken hopes to attend university for studies in engineering. Last year he was one of 10 students who earned a place on his school's honor roll. There were 300 grade eight students eligible for a place on the roll.

Kidnap Case

Mother Arrested Detectives, Too

ROME (Reuters)—Tear gas, a wild car chase, and a spectacular crash ended early Saturday with a French woman and four private detectives from Paris under arrest on kidnapping charges.

TEAR GAS

The four private detectives—one of them a woman—threw tear gas in Marini's face outside his apartment and tried to snatch the girl from his arms and push her into a waiting car, police said.

But Marini reacted quickly and jumped into the car as they tried to move off. After a violent struggle he managed to wind down the window and shout "help, help, they are kidnapping me."

INTO BUS

Warned by passers-by, police set up roadblocks. When the car approached one on the Via Cassia, it swung round in a u-turn and crashed into a bus.

Injunction Crusade 'Misguided'

His association represents 620 companies.

Mr. Saunders issued his statement following presentation of a brief by the 126,000-member B.C. Federation of Labor to cabinet ministers, asking for injunctions to be outlawed.

Garden Notes

Wait for Spring

By M. V. CHESNUT

MOVING RHODODENDRON — (V.M., Metchosin) Rhododendrons are not too difficult to transplant, but, with a valuable bush the size of yours, I dont' think it would be prudent to attempt the move at this time of the year while the soil is cold and wet. Ideal time is during a period of warm, showery weather in early May.

Take up with a good ball of soil around the roots and replant the same depth as before, as indicated by the soil marks on the stems. Use a mixture of good rich topsoil and peat moss for filling in, and put a little Transplantone or Dixon's Vitamin B-1 in the water used for settling the soil around the roots. Finish up with loose, dry soil on top. A thorough spraying of the leaves and buds with Wilt-Pruf liquid plastic will help retain moisture in the plant's tissues while the roots are recovering from the shock of transplanting.

BERRYLESS FIRETHORN — (H.E.J., Victoria) The failure of your pyracantha to produce any berries after blossoming so freely may be due to bad weather or high winds at flowering time, causing the insects to stage a sitdown strike and thereby preventing pollination.

Another possible cause is a shortage of phosphates in the soil. I suggest you dress the whole rooting area early next spring with superphosphate, three-quarters of a cupful per square yard, remembering the roots extend quite a distance out from the wall. Also, the next time the plant is in bloom, you might dry spraying the open blossoms with one of the tomato-setting hormone sprays.

ROSES FOR A HEDGE — (L.S., Saanichton) I have never been overly enthusiastic over the much-advertised multiflora rose hedge. I'll grant you it is a most efficient barrier, stopping dogs, children, cattle and almost anything short of a bulldozer; in fact, it is being used along high-speed highways in the U.S. as a sort of shock-absorbing safety barrier for careening cars that leave the road.

I find it rather unattractive. Moreover, Multiflora throws up suckers at the drop of a hat, becoming four or five feet thick, encroaching too much on precious garden space. I think that, if I were planning an informal, unclipped rose hedge — not at all a bad idea, I would plump for either Queen Elizabeth, pink, or Frensham, scarlet. Plant in two rows with the plants 30 inches apart and staggered. No pruning would be needed beyond cutting out dead wood and shortening overly tall shoots to a uniform height.

MULBERRY LEAVES — (W.L.McL., Esquimalt). There is nothing wrong with your tree and it is not "reverting to the wild form" as suggested by your neighbor. It is a natural characteristic of the mulberry to produce leaves of different shapes, some lobed and some unlobed, all on the one tree. It is quite common to find three different kinds of leaves on one single branch. The larger unlobed leaves will usually be found on the shaded side of the tree.

★ ★ ★

BEAUTY BUSH — (A.G., Ladysmith) The shrub you bought as Beauty Bush is Kolkwitzia amabilis, a very fine Chinese shrub related to the honeysuckle. It grows six to 10 feet tall, blooming in May into June with arching sprays of pink blossoms shaded yellow in the throat, and it takes kindly to almost any ordinary garden soil but needs good drainage and full sun for best results.

ERMA BOMBECK Advises Husbands

Shop for Hidden Woman

That clicking sound you're hearing is the result of millions of husbands pushing the panic button. They are pushing it because they are hours away from Christmas and still have no gifts for whats-her-name, mother of four.

One of the more conscientious husbands can always be counted upon to come up with the item mentioned last July when his wife snarled, "What I need around this house is a decent plunger." Inspired by his power of retention, he will sprint out and have a plunger wrapped as a gift. No one will be more surprised than he when his wife cups it over his mouth!

★ ★ ★

Others will seek out the advice of young secretaries who have read all the magazines and know that happiness is an immoral nightgown. Depending upon the type of wife, she will either return the nightgown and buy a sandwich grill; smile gratefully and wear it to bed under a coat; check out the secretary.

★ ★ ★

For the most part husbands are cast adrift in a sea of confusion and bewilderment, sniffing perfumes, fingering sequins and being ever on the lookout for a woman who looks like his wife's size.

★ ★ ★

Don't ask me why my heart goes out to these desperate men. Maybe it's that time of year. Maybe it's the den mother in me. Maybe I have really forgotten the rotten gift I found in my stocking last year: a gift certificate for flu shots. At any rate, some of my women friends have asked me to pass on to men some guideposts to shopping.

First, women are never what they seem to be. There is the woman you see and there is the woman who is hidden. But the gift for the woman who is hidden.

★ ★ ★

They're conservative souls who catch rainwater in a saucepan, and take their own popcorn to the drive-in.

Hidden is the woman who sings duets with Barbra Streisand and pretends Robert Goulet is singing to her.

Who thinks about making ceramics, writing a play, earning a pay cheque, and telling the neighbors she's been hiding "The Fugitive" in her broom closet for over a week.

That's all the help I'm going to give you birds. You've got just a few hours to get to know your wife. If you still think she rates a monogrammed chain

ART BUCHWALD Taps J. E. Hoover

Father of the Bug

WASHINGTON — Just when things were getting dull in Washington, Robert Kennedy, the former attorney general, and J. Edgar Hoover, the head of the FBI, plunged headlong into a bitter brouhaha over who gave permission to bug certain elements of society whilst violating their constitutional rights.

It is not general knowledge, but the bugging of telephones has been going on in the United States for almost a 100 years.

The first known case of the government bugging someone took place on March 10, 1876, in the laboratories of Alexander Graham Bell in Boston, Massachusetts.

Bell had been working for some time on a new speaking device which he called the telephone. In the next room was his assistant, Tom Watson. One day Bell said into his mouthpiece, "Watson, come here, I want you."

Watson rushed into the next room, threw his arms around Bell, and the telephone was born.

But unbeknownst to both Watson and Bell, a third person was listening in on their conversation. It was a young government investigator named J. E. Hoover, who was out to make a name for himself in the Justice Department.

J. E. took the next train for Washington. Breathlessly he rushed in to see President Grant's attorney general who happened to be a man named Edward Pierrepont. In the presence of department officials he played the primitive, crackling tape for them.

★ ★ ★

Attorney General Pierrepont couldn't believe his ears. "What hath God wreught?" he said.

J. E. said, "You have heard a tape of the first conversation ever bugged on a telephone."

"What the hell's a telephone?" the Attorney General wanted to know.

"It's a new invention by some Scotsman named Alexander Graham Bell. He wasn't a citizen, so I was very curious as to what he was up to. I think "Watson, come in here, I want you," is some sort of code, but I haven't had time to break it down yet."

"But what good is bugging a telephone?" the Attorney General demanded.

"I'd rather put it another way, sir. What good is a telephone if it isn't bugged? Don't you see what this invention means? If there are going to be telephones, we can listen in on them, and we can catch spies, and crooks and Communists, and bookies, and juvenile delinquents and even lawyers."

"I don't know, J. E. The whole thing smells unconstitutional to me," the Attorney General said.

"But how else are we going to get the rats if we don't bug them on the telephone?" J. E. demanded.

★ ★ ★

"I'm the Attorney General of the United States, J. E., and I can't condone wiretapping of any kind unless it's in the national interest. On the other hand, if I didn't know about it, then I wouldn't be condoning it, would I?"

"Exactly my thoghts, sir. Just sign this letter saying you don't know anything about me tapping telephones and it will be all the authority I need."

★ ★ ★

Little did Edwards Pierrepont know when he signed the letter that every other attorney general after him would sign a similar letter until this year, when the Supreme Court wanted to know what was going on.

Alexander Graham Bell may have invented the telephone, but it was young J. E. Hoover who really made the invention pay off for law-abiding Americans everywhere.

'Where Men Are Men'

American Girl Heading Home From England

★ ★ ★

LEEDS, England (AP)—An Austrian-born American girl has decided to give up her studies in England and return to the United States, "where men are men, not daisies."

This decision was made public Saturday by Ann Klym, 20, of Sioux City, Iowa. She aired her views in the university news paper after spending one full term at Leeds.

English boys?

CUTE BUT DRAB

"They're cute but drab beyond belief," wrote Ann. "They have no sex appeal. I don't go for the beefy truck driver type but I like a good masculine presence. In the international sex appeal league, Englishmen are rock bottom. Back home girls say a silent prayer — 'Please may I never marry an Englishman.'"

Ann broke off her studies at the University of Iowa intending to spend at least several years at Leeds. But now she says she will return to the Iowa campus early next summer.

NO ACCEPTANCE

Miss Klym's candid criticisms in the university paper stirred up a row in the student body. To her written question, "Will the real men please step forward and identify themselves?"

—AP

Anna Klym

★ ★ ★

she received two dozen requests for dates.

After screening these, Ann said "I shan't accept any of them."

"To study, I need a gay, alive time," she said. "That's why I can't wait to escape from these 'daisies' and cross the Atlantic where men are men."

HITS BACK

"Miss Klym needs her eyes tested," he said. "Leeds students are among the most handsome in the country. We tend to be artistic, rather than crew-cut he-men."

"A cheque book with my name in it - what a nice welcome! But it's not the only reason I switched to North West Trust"

It's extremely nice, mind you. What they call a "Personalized" cheque book, printed with my name and complete with a deposit record book. In a very smart wallet, too. But, believe me, I hardly needed any encouragement to switch to North West Trust. Heavens! When I heard they pay 4½% interest on savings - well, that's half as much again as I used to get. And they pay the same interest on current accounts, too - without any charge for cheques. I should have switched to North West Trust long ago!

Even in Toronto

Federal Area In Ottawa Gains Favor

OTTAWA (CP)—The idea of setting up a bilingual federal district in the Ottawa area appears to be steadily gaining favor in political circles—even in Toronto.

With little publicity, the Ontario government has commissioned and obtained a detailed report on the pros and cons of a federal district in the national capital area.

The report, expected to be made public shortly, is understood to endorse the proposal, so long as some form of home rule is retained for local taxpayers. Premier John Roberts is taking a personal interest in the question, informants say.

Prof. Donald C. Rowat of Carleton University's political science department confirmed in an interview that he completed the 100-page report some time ago, but declined to comment on his findings.

Jockey for Position

The existing national capital commission is largely limited to the development and maintenance of scenic parkways and parks, while scores of municipal councils and administrative boards jockey for position.

The capital region has a population exceeding 500,000, with a French-speaking element of roughly 40 per cent.

French - speaking legislators and civil servants often complain that Ottawa is largely an English-speaking Ontario town rather than a truly bilingual national capital. They particularly object to the lack of French high schools and to the fact that French is not an official language in Ottawa's municipal affairs and courts.

The main argument against the federal district idea here is that in Washington it deprives local residents of any democratic representation in local government. The District of Columbia has a Negro majority but is governed by a congressional committee dominated by southerners who oppose racial integration.

Russia Pushing Japan –But for Fifth Place

LONDON (AP) — Jane's Fighting Ships was quoted by The Associated Press in a story Dec. 13 as saying the Soviet Union was pressing Japan for leadership in the merchant marine field.

Actually, Jane's said the Soviet Union was pressing Japan in the merchant field without specifying it was for fifth place. The leaders are Britain, 21,530,364 tons; the United States, 21,527,349; Liberia, 17,539,562; Norway, 15,641,486; Japan, 11,971,157, and the Soviet Union, 9,500,000.

Given Life Sentence Negro Doesn't Know Why He Killed Six

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — A 19-year-old Richmond Negro, who testified he would give no reason for shooting the six persons he admitted he killed, was convicted Saturday of first degree murder.

The jury of 11 men and one woman, which included two Negroes, recommended that Thomas Lee Penn be sentenced to life in prison with no recommendation for mercy.

Penn would be eligible for parole in 15 years under the sentence, but he still faces trial on five other murder charges.

Penn was convicted of the fatal shooting last May 9 of Cynthia Johnson, 16. Penn said he met the girl, also a Negro, on a Richmond street that night, took her into a nearby wooded area at gunpoint and shot her nine times.

'CAN'T GIVE REASON'

Asked by Richard R. Ryder, his lawyer, why he shot the girl, Penn replied: "I don't know."

Questioned about his reasons for the other killings, he answered: "I can't give the jury any reason."

The five other victims, both Negro and white, were shot to death between February and May of this year.

Draw Winners

Stall Proves Worth

Record Supply of Food Helps Needy Families

By BARNEY McKINLEY

If any proof was needed that Victoria's free food stall is serving a need, it was provided Saturday.

More than 300 families, whose members bucked heavy rain to take advantage of the food distirbution, filed through the stall in its present quarters behind the Elks Home on Cormorant to pick up a record contribution of goods.

Generous donors provided the stall, now under the charge of Mrs. Joan Price, with a bumper supply of canned goods, fresh vegetables, fruit, meat, sacks of potatoes, bread, sugar and other staples and a hardworking crew of volunteers was able to make up generous allotments to serve many families in the Christmas season.

The stockpile included Christmas cake and decorations, candy and toys for the children and turkey for old age pensioners to help add a little extra flavor to the Yuletide season.

Mrs. Price said donors, both businesses and private individuals, responded generously. There were more than 1,000 cans of food from businesses in the 700-block Yates and another 1,000 from two Victoria Optimists' bingo nights.

She said the free food distribution, interrupted for five months after the retirement of veteran stall operator Mrs. Alice Harper, this year, would continue on a once-a-month basis in 1967 with next food distribution scheduled for Jan. 26.

Example of Victoria's free food stall, believed the only one of its kind in North America, may soon be followed in Vancouver.

Founded 17 years ago by former Victoria resident Mrs. Barbara Green, who is now living in West Vancouver, the stall has aided hundreds of families over the rough spots.

Some Vancouverites would like to see the same thing in their city.

Mrs. Price said she was asked about the possibilities of a similar food distribution in Vancouver and she is considering a study of the situation there early next year.

Originated by Mrs. Green on the simple principle that surplus food should be given to those in need, the free food stall, operating with volunteer help, has distributed tons of foodstuffs since its inception.

The principle was exemplified Saturday by an unidentified donor who came to the stall. He said he had been aided by food from the stall when he was out of work and now that he was back at work he wanted to donate a turkey with all the trimmings to some family now in need.

For Back Money

Claims First Then Miners

Former miners of the Cowichan Copper Company's Sunro operation at Jordan River may have to wait many months for a final settlement of back pay, owed to them since the mine shut down Sept. 16.

The miners, many of whom resorted to social welfare to support their families in the interim, received about 38 per cent of the $40,000 in back wages owed to them, a few weeks ago.

This money came through intervention of the labor department, resulting in a $15,000 payment being made through the British Metal Corporation (Canada) Ltd. on behalf of the purchaser of some copper concentrate which was stored at Hatch Point.

TURNED OVER

The active operation of the Sunro mine had been turned over to the Aetna Investment Corporation in 1963, after it had financed a rehabilitation program made necessary by flood and landslides. Aetna managed the mine until the shutdown.

The problem now is whether the Cowichan Copper or Aetna is the rightful owner of the concentrate and other fixed assets of the mining company.

MAY BE SOON

Should the labor department be permitted to get its hands on more of the concentrate money through quasi-judicial proceedings, similar to the manner in which it obtained the first payment, the 120 miners may receive their pay soon.

If the attorney-general's office rules the matter must be decided in court, it would result in a lengthy wait for the miners.

81st Gift Of Blood

HMC Dockyard employee Cyril Reeve gave his 81st pint of blood at mobile Red Cross clinic last week. Mr. Reeve, who lives at 425 Culduthel, has given blood in Britain, France, Africa, the U.S. and Canada, about eight gallons since 1939.

'Toone' School Opposed

The replacement for the aged North Ward elementary school should be named Blanshard and not Toone, says a recommendation to go before the Greater Victoria school board Monday.

The North Ward PTA recently suggested the school, to be built in the Rose-Blanshard urban renewal area, be named after Alfred Toone, Victoria's late mayor.

Joseph Chell, district school superintendent has made the counter-suggestion of Blanshard.

It conforms with board policy of naming schools after the street they are built on, he says. The name has historical connotations, recalling Richard Blanshard, first governor of Vancouver Island.

Shipyard Workers Discussing Contract

By GEORGE INGLIS

Members of the Joint Shipyard Conference in Victoria rushed into action Saturday, scheduling meetings to determine the reception of union members to a proposed contract formula.

The unions in the joint conference, which must give individual approval for any contract settlement, called meetings to sample the feelings of the membership before Christmas.

Conciliation officer Jack Sherlock suggested a 50-cent-an-hour increase for journeymen and 44 cents an hour more for others, retroactive to Oct. 15 and effective for two years. He did not recommend a reduction in the work week, but did recommend double pay for overtime after the first two hours.

Present shipyard wages range between $2.50 and $3.10 an hour.

The International Brotherhood of Boilermakers, largest union in the shipyards in Victoria, will hold two votes — afternoon and graveyard shifts at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday and day shift at 8 p.m.

About 800 men are eligible to vote, at the Boilermakers Hall, 802 Esquimalt.

OTHER MEETINGS

Victoria Shipyard Riggers' Union, 8 p.m., Monday, Union Centre, 2750 Quadra;

Machinists, Engine Fitters and Helpers, 7:30 p.m., Monday, 715 Johnson;

Brotherhood of Painters, 8 p.m., Tuesday, Union Centre.

Shipyard Industrial Union, Local 9, afternoon and graveyard, 1:30 p.m., and day shift, 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, at 715 Johnson.

NO WORD YET

Late Saturday, no word was available on times for moulders, operating engineers, office workers, dock and ship workers or carpenters, all of which will be voting during the week.

The votes of the 2,000 workers at Victoria Machinery Depot, Yarrows and Burrard Dry Dock will be counted at 10 p.m. Thursday in Vancouver and Victoria.

The unions had asked for increases of 65 and 70 cents an hour, plus a 35-hour work week.

Blooming Easter Lily Christmas Surprise

Mrs. Wina Hepburn of 450 Dallas Road doesn't quite know what to expect next Easter, but for Christmas she will have an Easter lily in full bloom.

The lily, which she moved indoors a month ago, put out one bloom Thursday and has two more about to pop. Last Easter it had seven flowers.

Salaries Jump 18 Per Cent

Bus Men Awarded Two-Year Boost

B.C. Hydro bus drivers and maintenance men have been granted an 18-per-cent increase in salary over the next two years, it was announced Saturday, and it may mean a costlier package for B.C. cities when the Hydro's transit facilities are handed over.

News of the agreement between the Hydro and the Amalgamated Transit Union, affecting 1,800 drivers and maintenance staff in Vancouver, Victoria and New Westminster, came on the heels of an announcement by Hydro co-chairman Dr. Hugh Keenleyside Friday, that the Hydro would continue to operate the present transit systems through 1967.

THREE RELIEVED

The news of the continued operation of the buses by Hydro came as a relief to the province's big three, all of whom feared they would have the transit systems dumped in their laps earlier. Victoria's Hydro franchise ran longer than the others, expiring in September, 1967.

Dr. Keenleyside said the extension would grant the communities more time to work out solutions for the eventual operation of the systems by the individual communities.

OVER $3

The pay raise means the cities will take over systems with drivers drawing $3.01 an hour and have to raise them to $3.26 an hour after a few months. Present drivers' pay is $2.76.

Maintenance men will be earning $3.27 and will be raised to $3.56. They now earn $3.

Gorge

Bridge Bids Soon

The long-awaited new Gorge bridge will most likely be built in 1967.

Deputy highways minister H. T. Miard said Saturday that tenders will be called shortly. Estimated cost of the new four-lane bridge is $200,000.

It will be borne jointly by the provincial government and the municipalities of Esquimalt and Saanich.

The municipalities' share of $50,000 each has been put aside for some time.

NOT SO

"We were afraid that we would have to wait a long time for the bridge, with the government's tight money policy," said Saanich Reeve Hugh Curtis, "We are glad to find this isn't so."

He said the building of the bridge has been an integral part of Saanich's Gorge improvements.

Plans have already been drawn up for a four-lane intersection at Gorge and Tillicum.

'ONE CHALLENGE'

"A challenge for our engineers," was the way Esquimalt Reeve Ray Bryant greeted the news.

"It will help with some traffic problems, but we will have to find a way of tying the four-lane bridge in with our two-lane Tillicum Road."

Joining Chamber

Industrial Hopes Grow in Sooke

Sooke is hoping for accelerated industrial growth with the entry this week of the district's Chamber of Commerce into the Greater Victoria chamber, according to Sooke president John Slemko.

Mr. Slemko claimed Saturday that it will in future be the policy of the Greater Victoria chamber to turn industry's eyes westward to Sooke.

"Both Victoria and Esquimalt already have pretty well as much industry as they need, right in their municipalities," said Mr. Slemko.

"Sooke has the land, water, power, roads and harbor facilities. There is also the assurance that no one will be working against them," he added.

Jester's Tale Cancelled

'Expand Sex Study'

★ ★ ★

Proposal Goes to Trustees Monday

Expansion of Greater Victoria's classroom sex education to include teachers as instructors will be proposed to the district school board Monday.

The "Family Life Education" program may also be enlarged to cover all grades from 6 to 10.

THREE MEMBERS

The proposal will be presented to the board as a recommendation from the family life education committee, composed of two medical doctors and assistant school superintendent A. J. Longmore.

The doctors are Elizabeth Patriarche and G. P. Evans, both of whom have been giving lectures on reproduction to Grade 8 pupils since 1964.

Grade 6 girls also view a film on menstruation and, in Grade 10, all students are being told about venereal disease.

The committee now is proposing that Grade 7 pupils see movies dealing with the physical changes of puberty, in preparation for the Grade 8 program.

MEDICAL ROLE

Another recommended addition is the movie, Human Heredity, to be shown in Grade 9 as a follow-up to the Grade 8 course.

"The medical profession wishes to involve the teaching staff more in the program and the medical role would be more of a consultant role," says the committee's report.

Mr. Longmore said Saturday Dr. Patriarche and Dr. Evans have offered to instruct teachers in giving family life education.

SOCIAL PROBLEM

Another change recommended in the Grade 10 VD instruction is the substitution of new movies emphasizing the social problem of the diseases "rather than the clinical emphasis in the present course."

Greater Victoria's sex education program is one of the first of its kind in Canada and has attracted widespread interest.

The B.C. Parent-Teacher Federation this year called on the provincial government to begin sex education in Grade 3.

He joined the RCAF as a cadet in 1949, trained as a navigator and was commissioned the following year. After various postings, he completed the air force course in 1965 and moved to Comox later that year.

Steal Hair for Wigs

LISBON (Reuters) — Portuguese police report a growing number of assaults on girls with the sole object of stealing their hair so that it can be used for wig-making.

In several cases the assailants, usually gypsies, waited for the girls on lonely country roads. In others the attacks were carried out by several men who used a car to escape with the snipped-off tresses.

Schoolgirls are among the easiest victims of the assailants and in some villages parents refuse to allow their daughters to go to school unaccompanied.

The assaults coincide with a growing fashion in Portugal and many other countries for women to wear wigs.

* * *

Most of the hair used in wig-making is artificial and natural hair wigs fetch high prices.

Gypsies offer 500 escudos (about $25) for a pound of hair which must be a minimum of 12 inches in length.

Santa's mailboxes in downtown department stores are receiving plenty of mail every day. Here, Cathy MacLean, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James MacLean, and long-haired Rae Anna Bradley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Bradley, deposit their lists.

Little Joanne Fox was waiting for her sister to finish shopping when she was irresistably drawn to the realistic looking snowman which forms part of the Christmas decorations in a Victoria department store. Joanne is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Fox, Fern Street.

Sisters Gillian, left, and Penny Murray, were photographed as they browsed in the toy department picking out gifts for their friends and deciding which they would like for themselves. Gillian and Penny are the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Murray and both attend Norfolk House School.

Toyland is a wonderful place for trying out those tricycles and testing dolls, rabbits and other stuffed toys for size. From left, Sandra Snow, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. J. Snow, Michael and Sanda Hoitz, children of Mr. and Mrs. R. Hoitz.

Doing The Town

with DOROTHY FRASER

Superb gifts for your favorite man . . .

Do you want to give the man in your life an absolutely wonderful Christmas gift this year? . . . Then, take yourself with all speed to Wilson's men's department and ask them to show you their suede sport jackets . . . It will mean parting with $95 . . . but when you see these superbly tailored jackets made of the finest and softest suede . . . in dark brown or mocha, with leather buttons . . . we think you'll find the parting painless! . . . These are the most beautiful jackets we've ever seen . . . calculated to bolster the ego of any man on earth (and make him preen, if men do such things) . . . Anyway, go see them . . . And if the budget doesn't run to a suede jacket, Wilson's have all sorts of other quite marvellous male accoutrements . . . dressing gowns, for instance . . . Viyella tartans, plain wools made especially for Wilson's by Sayer and Sayer of London . . . nice colors like camel, navy and wine . . . Silks of all kinds (we like the silk travel gowns in matching zippered cases) . . . Terry cloth gowns, and those fit-all-sizes judogi gowns in either patterned cotton or terrycloth . . . Handsome smoking jackets in English flannels, tartans and velvets . . . A beautiful selection of fancy vests . . . W. & J. Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7177.

For men who shop for women . . .

We know some women who like to do their own picking and choosing . . . who have more fun possessing cash-in-hand for the after-Christmas sales than they could possibly get from opening a gift package . . . no matter how glamorously it's wrapped . . . If you're the spouse of such a lady, our advice is to give her a Gift Certificate from Miss Frith's . . . This holds true too if you're having trouble making up your mind as to just what will give the most pleasure . . . Get a Miss Frith gift certificate for any amount you see fit . . . You can open a budget charge account with nothing to pay until next February . . . stretch out subsequent payments without carrying charges . . . Let the little women select her own pretties, and she'll bless you from January to December! . . . But if you want to do your own selecting, well go to it, with our blessing . . . because you can't go far wrong at Miss Frith's . . . You might think in terms of coordinated sportswear . . . sweaters, skirts, slips . . . stunningly styled, and perfectly matched . . . Or glamorous housecoats priced from $16.95 up . . . Peignoir sets . . . the kind of stuff dreams are made of . . . tagged from $29.98 . . . Plus hosiery and bags and gloves and umbrellas and you-name-it! . . . Miss Frith's gift wrap your purchases . . . have customer parking at their Fisgard Street entrance . . . Miss Frith Millinery and Fashions, 1617 Douglas St., 383-7181.

Travel on your mind for 1967? . . . then drop in at George Paulin Travel Service and let them tell you about all the wonderful holiday trips and cruises scheduled for the months ahead . . . Get a handful of brochures and read about what's in store for you if you just say the word! . . . We hear that all the major steamship lines have announced their sailings for the 1967 Atlantic season . . . as a matter of fact, some are already heavily booked . . . Ships sailing from New York and Montreal are, for the first time, allowing their passengers to embark the night before a morning sailing . . . at no extra cost . . . thus obviating the need for a hotel . . . We imagine this will be particularly appreciated in Montreal, where hotels will be jam-packed for Expo . . . And talking of Expo, lots of Europe-bound travellers are choosing an Atlantic crossing this coming year so they can take in what promises to be a fabulous fair, either coming or going . . . Apropos of which, Paulin's have devised a mighty attractive package deal for Expo 67 . . . two to seven nights in a good hotel, plus tickets to the fair, and some Montreal sightseeing thrown in . . . You pay for all this before your departure . . . and from what we've heard, it will save you a pretty penny! . . . Drop in to Paulin's and let them tell you all about it . . . George Paulin Travel Service, 1008 Government St., 382-9168.

The cool thing to do next spring will be to trot around in a coat-dress.

Dresses in tune with the holidays . . .

We saw a teal blue lace dress at Madam and Eve this week that's just the thing to wear for Christmas Dinner or later-day festivities . . . White crepe ruffles around neck, armholes and hem . . . a flirty little frock for a slim young thing (it's a small size) . . . For more gala occasions . . . maybe New Year's Eve . . . there's a long white lace dress by Polly Peck . . . beautifully simple with its narrow straps and black velvet ribbon riding high under the bosom . . . Another Polly Peck we like . . . this time for day wear . . . is a lime green wool with short sleeves and four big buttons giving a double-breasted effect . . . When you're in Madam and Eve, don't miss looking at the Joni Apple blouses . . . white arniel crepe simply dripping with lace ruffles . . . in either three-quarter or long sleeve versions . . . They're so easy to care for . . . hand-washable and drip dry . . . just the merest touch of an iron if you feel you must . . . We haven't seen such exquisitely feminine blouses since we were shown a tintype of our mother's great-aunt Emma! . . . You'll find a lot of nice, inexpensive gift possibilities at M&E . . . lace stockings, silk and chiffon scarves . . . little calf or suede over-the-shoulder or clutch bags . . . Madam and Eve Shop, Trounce Alley, 383-7177.

Festive Evening At Royal Roads

The quarterdeck at Canadian Services College Royal Roads was the gala setting for the annual Christmas ball, Friday evening.

* * *

Commandant Group Captain D. B. Wurtele and Mrs. Wurtele, Cadet Wing Commander K. R. Moulden and Miss Elizabeth Muirhead received the Cadets and their guests.

In keeping with the festive theme there was a parade of boar's head before the buffet supper. Santa was also in attendance during the evening.

Dancing to the modern music of the Seventh Edition added to the gala evening.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: Recently you raised an interesting question: "Why would a person write to a newspaper columnist for help with a problem?" I would like to tell you why people write to Ann Landers.

You are the poor man's psychiatrist, the lonely man's confidante, the teenagers counsellor, the ignorant man's source of information.

In your forthright, sometimes painfully blunt manner, you dish out common sense like nobody else in the world — in language that everybody can understand. I am sure you have no idea how widespread is your influence — how much good you do.

You are not always right, but then who is? But you ARE fair. When your readers have disagreed with you, you have published their letters — and on occasion you have admitted you were wrong.

Your column is a great forum for public opinion. I have seen many vital issues debated in your space. And your column can be a post graduate course in day-to-day living. You present your own opinions and the opinions of the experts. And you also print the views of ordinary, everyday folks who may not be educated but who have become wise from experience.

If you accomplished nothing else you'd be in line for a service medal for just letting thousands of lonely, frightened, unhappy, angry people get a load off their chests. I want to thank you, Ann Landers, for being there. — AN ADMIRER

* * *

Dear Admirer: It is reassuring to receive a letter like yours — especially after last week's "Drop Dead" — "Go Drown" messages from teen-agers who are mad at me because I don't like some of their music.

I really don't mind the angry letters because I know that often I am serving as the substitute whipping girl. When a reader unloads his anger on me he is letting somebody alone.

* * *

Dear Ann Landers: Several months ago, I became involved in a sordid affair. It occurred at a difficult time in my life when I was trying to recover from the loss of my husband. I fell in love with a married man in our church but I broke up with him when I came to my senses.

My parents were crushed. They spared no words letting me know that I had disgraced them. I became deeply depressed and finally consulted a doctor. He convinced me I must snap out of it and stop beating myself for what I had done.

I returned to my church and asked for forgiveness. Everyone has been wonderful to me and no one mentions the past. My parents, however, cannot forgive me. They were once faithful church-goers but now they say they cannot show their faces in church.

Every Sunday when I see their empty seats, I want to die. Perhaps I should not have returned to the same church but I felt if I could not hold my head up there, I couldn't hold it up anyplace.

Please tell me what to do. — heartbroken daughter

Dear Daughter: Obviously your parents have decided that you haven't suffered enough and they are going to see to it that you suffer some more.

Now that you have shown your face I suggest you transfer to another church. When you sit and look at those empty seats, you are asking for it, Girl.

PERSONAL MENTION

By Dorothy Wrotnowski

Along with beautiful women, beautiful horses, negro mammies and fried chicken the Southern States have long been known for their hospitality.

And the P. D. P. Holmes, who have only just returned from a five-week trip that covered 8,000 miles, can't say enough in praise of this hospitality.

More than lived up to its reputation says Catherine Holmes.

Back again in Georgia they went to Savannah where P.D.P. attended the American Real Estate Convention as Canadian representative.

After the convention there was a quick trip to Nassau then back to Florida and by motor to Louisiana.

And dinner at Antoine's is also everything it is said to be according to the Holmes.

In Natchez, the oldest city on the Mississippi River (says the World Book), the Holmes were impressed with the restoration of the old homes and other buildings. Many of the homes are private dwellings and are open to the public only at times, others all the time.

In Stanton Hall they had wonderful meals from old Natchez recipes including an unusual mint julep.

Williamsburg they found fascinating. And especially the private enterprise in the old trades. In Alburqueque they found the old part of the town of 1706 completely restored.

A visit to Grand Canyon was enroute to Las Vegas which they found exciting. San Francisco and then home.

But it wasn't for long for Pip Holmes. He left the next evening for Ottawa for the final meeting of the year for the Canadian Association of the Real Estate Board.

Now Christmas is upon them and then they'll be moving house.

They will be away five or six weeks. And they'll all be having Christmas dinner in Hawaii with the Harry Gladwells who left for the sunny isle yesterday. The Gladwells took their children, Kirsty, Tibbie, Mary Allison and Billy with them.

The Keith Olsons will be heading for the same place a couple of days after Christmas.

Christmas Party

It doesn't seem to matter that the weather is soggy and wet when the festive season is upon us.

Nowhere was this more evident than at the party given by Mr. and Mrs. Doug Hunter on Friday evening.

Driving up along Cherrilee Crescent you come upon the Hunter house ablaze with lights and out on the lawn was a brightly lighted Christmas tree. You could see the guests through the tall windows — the party was on.

Inside the place glowed — a fire blazing in the fireplace and shining on large copper bowls filled with gold tipped pine, holly and masses of white chrysanthemums.

I said it didn't matter about the weather but I was a little envious to hear that the Speed Olsons are leaving Monday for the sun and sea in Hawaii.

Pleasant Surprise

Everyone around the Colonist editorial is looking forward to Monday morning for a change.

For we are to be completely refurbished. New desks, new chairs, new filing cabinets, etc.

The clean up for the last few days has been terrific. Papers and papers and papers being shot into overflowing waste baskets as desks are cleaned out.

Last time there was such an upheavel was when we moved from Broad Street to the Roundabout. And that was in May, 1951.

Of course you discover many items you had for gotten you had put away. And some of these will go into the cardboard cartons for the things to be saved.

A pleasant surprise was the find of the newly published Theatre in the Kitchen. Evidently it had arrived on a day off and was put into a hardly-ever-used drawer. For safety, no doubt.

However, as I said, it was a pleasant surprise because it is so different than the average cook book. It would make a delightful Christmas gift and you can buy it at The Book Nook, Ivy's Bookshop or any Bastion Actors' Committee member.

Madame Benoit contributes findings from old Canadian recipe books such as "The hostess with delicate taste has a fine way to offer a bite with the cool champagne taken in the moonlit garden. She fills nasturtium flowers with fresh cream cheese made light by the addition of whipped cream. To be happy you eat flowers and all."

Ingredients: "One husband or lover (or friendly neighborhood hunter) who likes hunting birds.

Three springer spaniels (or more, or less) who also like hunting birds.

Two dead blue grouse.

1st step. Nag husband well, so that he can go hunting with a clear conscience.

2nd step. Enjoy husbandless, dog-less day.

3rd step. Pretend to be glad about return of the hunter and his wet, dirty dogs, and admire the dead birds.

4th step. Be sure to be allergic to feathers, unless you want the job of plucking birds.

After the birds are plucked, cut off the legs, wings and both breasts. (Always assuming there ARE that many parts left unshattered, and not full of No. 7 shot.) Flour them and brown in hot bacon drippings. Then add seasoning to taste.

"All I use is salt, pepper, and a little thyme. Then thicken with a little more flour and make a gravy to simmer the birds in, by adding HOT TEA. OK, so you don't have to, but if you haven't tried it, don't knock it. Then add some chopped onion and simmer until done. The length of time depends on the age of the birds, but about 30 minutes or more. This dish is good served with rice. Try sometime a dash of curry as part of the seasoning, while the birds are simmering."

To Charity

Captain and Mrs. F. A. Hobday who have both been ill won't be sending any Christmas cards this year. But they will donate to charity the money usually spent on the cards. They would like all their friends to know that they do wish them a Happy Christmas and a Prosperous New Year.

Home for Holiday

Alexander-Lowman

Veil Imported from France

An exquisite Grecian-inspired gown of white peau d'ange was worn by Bonnie Jane Lowman, Saturday when she exchanged marriage vows and rings with John Carter Alexander.

* * *

Giving back interest to the slim-fitted floor-length gown was a watteau train sweeping from the empire waistline. Delicate re-embroidered lace appliques outlined the neckline of the gown and sleeves gently tipped the elbow. The lace was echoed in the border edging the bride's full-length veil which was imported from France. It misted softly from a coronet of veiling and lace appliques. As jewelry, she chose a pearl necklace and the groom's gift of pearl earrings. As "something borrowed," the bride wore her mother's kid gloves from Belgium. She carried red rosebuds in her bouquet.

* * *

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Clara Lowman, 2620 Currie Road, and the late August Lowman. The groom's parents are Rev. and Mrs. Millard Alexander, 1939 Grandview Dr.

St. Mary's Anglican Church, Oak Bay, was decorated with white chrysanthemums for the service at which Canon Hywel Jones officiated, assisted by the groom's father, Tom Sigsworth, Calgary, gave his niece in marriage. The couple had chosen the 83rd birthday of the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Louise Bourne, as a wedding date.

The red silk velvet gowns worn by the bride's two attendants were fashioned on A-lines and featured tiny cap sleeves. Their coronet headpieces were en tone and they carried bouquets, of white chrysanthemums. Maid of honor was Miss Linda Neil and Miss Margaret Alexander was bridesmaid.

Best man was Murray Pitre and the guests were ushered to their pews by John Edwards and the groom's brother, Jim Alexander.

At the reception following in the Oak Bay Beach Hotel, the head table was centred with a three-tier wedding cake, decorated along Grecian lines and topped with red roses. The newlyweds used an heirloom sword, which belonged to the bride's great-uncle, to cut the cake. Dr. George Robson proposed the toast to the bride.

* * *

A black and white tweed suit, imported from London, England was worn by the new Mrs. Alexander for travelling on honeymoon to Harrison Hot Springs. Completing the three-piece ensemble was a black silk overblouse. She chose a draped black silk hat, black and white accessories and an orchid corsage.

Travelling from out-of-town for the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Tom Sigsworth, the groom's grandmother Mrs. A. G. Carter, and his cousin Miss Diane Carter, all of Calgary, and Mr. and Mrs. Tom Bates of New Westminster.

FULFORD, B.C. — Mrs. E. Parsons opened the tea and sale of work sponsored by the Burgoyne Bay United Church Women on Thursday. This was held at Nan's Coffee Bar and proceeds of the afternoon amounted to $70. A guessing contest, with a Christmas pudding as a prize, was won by Mrs. W. M. Mouat after she cut with Mrs. Thelma Reynolds, who guessed the same weight. Teas were served and all members of the UCW assisted.

Dear Patrons:

We would like, at this time, to honor ALL of our staff. Some have been with us almost since the first Margo Beauty Studio was opened six years ago. Others, only three or four years. And then, there are more recent arrivals.

Whatever the length of service with the Margo Beauty Studio, we are proud of our staff. It is only because of their courteous, efficient attention to our customers, their enthusiasm, and their dedication to their work, that we have been able to expand to our present size of operation.

At the time of writing this, we do not have recent pictures of everyone, so rather than miss anyone, we chose this method of saying "Thank You" to each and every one of them.

And to you, our customers, may we also say "Thank You." We know that all of the staff will join us in wishing you "A most Joyous Christmas, and Prosperity in the year to come."

Sincerely,
MARGO BEAUTY STUDIO LTD.

Booming Baby-Sitting Boasts Double Rules

By KITTE TURMELL

Baby-sitting is now a big part of a billion dollar business. That's the value that's put on child care in the home.

And nearly half of all young girls depend on it for their income, with about 60 per cent sitting at least once a week.

This means competition is keener, and more is expected of a sitter.

TALK TO PARENTS

A sitter should talk to the parents. Actress Roxanne Arlen has some good suggestions here. She's the wife of Julian Snyder and mother of their daughter, Hillary Susan, age 15 months.

"Talk to the parents and get acquainted with the child before you're left alone together," she told me. "Then you'll know that when the child says 'Ah-ha,' he wants a drink of water, or a toy, or his Mama.

"Know where to phone parents, neighbor, police or fire departments — and keep the list handy for each visit. Know how to take a temperature if you suspect a child has a fever but want to be sure before you call the parents. Treat the child as an individual and get him and his parents to trust you."

Actress Roxanne Arlen, daughter, baby-sitter

But baby sitters have their requirements, too. Here's a six-point code for fair play, drafted by six baby-sitters. Parents should:

- Pay the amount promised.
- Call a sitter at least a day in advance, except in emergencies.
- Notify her if the TV is out of order, so she can bring a book.
- Not bring in the neighbor's children.
- Pay time and a half for afternoon sitting — when it's harder to supervise children — and also for all hours after midnight.
- Not treat her as a servant who must do housework, too.

Pointers for baby-sitting include:

- Arrive in time to make friends with the children before the parents leave.
- Remain in the house and stay awake until the parents return.
- Check on the children hourly after they fall asleep.
- Keep all outside doors locked and don't let anyone except the parents in.
- If parents can't drive you home, arrange for your parents to pick you up.
- Accept jobs on week nights only if parents will be home at reasonable hour (10:30 p.m.).
- On very late weekend nights, spend the night.

For help on getting started in child-care, send your self-addressed, stamped envelope for Kitte Turmell's new leaflet, 'Teen Guide For Smart Baby-Sitting," care of this newspaper.

Kitte Turmell's Letters

Make Cousins Welcome

"Dear Kitte Turmell: If your parents are giving a family holiday dinner, including some younger cousins you rarely see, how long should you stay around to entertain them after dinner? — Jim"

Dear Jim: At least an hour. If you're going to see friends or to a hang-out for teen-agers where they'd fit in, consider inviting cousins to go, too. Then you can get better acquainted while your parents and theirs have some talk-time of their own.

* * *

Confidential to "Teen Mother" —All you "owe" to friends and neighbors who give holiday presents to your child is a warm "Thank You." The smile of a child, happy to receive a present, is reward enough and you are not expected to give anything in return except some show of appreciation.

* * *

"Dear Kitte: I like this boy but he doesn't seem to be interested. Last summer I met him and then he began to call me. After a while, he stopped calling me.

"Whenever I see him he acts friendly and may call me the next day. But after that I won't hear from him anymore.

"Should I tell him I like him? Or should I let him make the first move in telling me he doesn't like me. — 'Shook-Up'"

Dear "Shook-Up": Don't be. Tranquilize your worries with the reminder that most boys have their minds on many things—school, part-time work, hobbies, cars, sports, etc.

Assume he likes you. Show, by friendly interest whenever you meet, that you like him. But don't overdo the attentions until he shows more special interest in you on a dependable basis.

"Dear Kitte Turmell: "I have a crush on a 16-year-old boy. I believe that he likes me too, because he gave me his tie the other night, when we were at a dance. I was wondering what I should do. Would it be all right to call him? — Caris"

Dear "Caris": Wait to hear from him, or see him at the next dance or party. As time goes on, if you have no opportunity to see him, or talk by phone when he calls you, invite him to a girl-bid dance or home-party. Don't reveal to him or others that you have a "crush" or you'll embarrass him. Just be friendly, and don't overdo the show of romantic interest.

The Week in Records

Christmas List: Best in One LP

By MARY LEE BURROWS

Dear Santa: The record I want most for Christmas is an LP with the top 12 tunes of the year as recorded by the individuals and groups that made them popular. I think even you will have difficulty delivering that, Santa!

* * *

If you fans of Snoopy vs. the Red Baron want to know how Snoopy is faring you'd better listen to your radios. The chances of the record reaching Victoria before you read this are slim.

* * *

The Expo '67 promoters are amongst the All-American Big spenders. I don't know what they have offered the Beatles to appear there, but I do know that the fab four have been offered $500,000 for only two back-to-back appearances in Shea Stadium, New York. The Beatles are known to have turned down $165,000 for one appearance.

The New York promoter expects to lose $100,000 on the deal but thinks it will be a "rich" experience. I wonder how "rich" the Expo promoters are willing to get for experience.

Up 'n Comers: If Snoopy doesn't get the Red Baron in a sharp climb he should come out on top of I'm a Believer before Christmas. Games that Lovers Play by Eddie Fisher and Try a Little Tenderness by Ottis Redding night make it soon.

Certain to be the most played song this week is Adeste Fidelis.

Tot Says It in Song For Christmas Blast

MILWAUKEE (AP)—Kathleen Thews said her kindergarten class at Washington elementary school was singing Tannenbaum, O Tannenbaum while rehearsing a Christmas play but a six-year-old boy had his own version which he delivered lustily: "Atomic bomb, O atomic bomb."

"And he really thought he was right," Miss Thews said.

Youth Sent to Cell To Refresh Memory

Frederick Thomas, 20, of 2314 Bellamy, will have a quiet weekend in jail to help him refresh his memory.

Bellamy was orderd into jail Saturday by Magistrate William Ostler after he entered a guilty plea to being a minor in possession of liquor, but refused to say where he had got a case of beer.

Police checked a car driven by Thomas after a drive-in operator complained Oct. 30 that the accused and two juveniles were causing a disturbance on his premises.

BOTTLES IN CAR

Thomas was found to have four unopened bottles of beer in a case and the trio smelled strongly of beer, court was told.

When questioned by Magistrate Ostler, the accused said "I can't say where I got the beer. Maybe the guy who got it isn't 21."

Magistrate Ostler replied, "You can spend the weekend in jail and I will ask you the same question again Monday."

* * *

Thomas Malcolm Nelson, 1843 Island Highway, will spend five months in jail. He pleaded guilty in central court to driving while impaired and driving while his licence was under suspension.

The court was told Nelson had two convictions for impaired driving and three convictions for driving while under suspension.

'QUITE UNMOVED'

Magistrate Ostler asked Nelson, "Have you any appreciation of the gravity of your record?" He added, "You are quite unmoved by these sentences."

Nelson's licence was suspended for a further three years.

* * *

Earl Douglas Spence, 204 Oswego, was jailed for 21 days when he entered a guilty plea to driving while impaired.

Spence was arrested after police noted he was driving at speeds between 20 and 44 miles an hour on Cook about 8:30 p.m. Thursday.

Spence admitted he had been given a 10-day sentence for the same offence in January, 1963.

Darrell Zaruk, 338 Michigan, was fined $45 for careless driving. He was involved in a rear-end collision in the early hours of Nov. 27.

Italian Heirs Will Pay Flood Relief

ROME (UPI) — The cabinet of Premier Aldo Moro decided Saturday night that heirs will foot the bill for extra flood relief passed by the senate in an upset vote.

The cabinet, which last month upped all income taxes 10 per cent for a year to finance a $800,000,000 flood relief program, voted to extend the raise of inheritances taxes for one more year, until the end of 1969.

The measure was intended to provide the extra $16,000,000 made necessary by a senate amendment to the relief measure. The senate voted 94-91 Friday night to grant subsidies of up to $800 to all low income families which lost furniture or clothing in the Nov. 4 floods.

Computer Troubles Seal Drive

Swiching to automation can be great but you have to be ready for it, as Victoria Christmas Seal campaigners are finding out.

As a result of a time lag while campaign officials were switching to the computer system, people who had already made donations received follow-up notes, much to their annoyance.

"We are asking that all people who have already made donations and have received follow-up notes, please ignore them," said campaign chairman Mrs. Alice Kimmett.

She said people are being generous in spite of the collecting difficulty. Donations now stand at $26,379.

Airlines Must Speak Up

NEW YORK (AP)—The U.S. Court of Appeals has ruled that if an airline wants to limit its liability to to an international traveller it must warn the passenger in clear language and large type.

In a case involving injuries and deaths that resulted from the crash of an Alitalia plane off Shannon, Ireland, on Feb. 26, 1960, the court said Friday the airline could not rely on a 90-country treaty known as the Warsaw Convention and limit its liability to $8,300 per passenger.

Judge Irving R. Kaufman said before an airline could invoke the treaty's limitation, it had to live up to its terms. Kaufman decided that the treaty required the airline to warn passengers of the limitations in clear language and large type on the tickets. Alitalia used neither, Kaufman stated.

Plaintiffs in the case are John Lisi of the Bronx; Joseph Maiorano, Mt. Vernon, N.Y.; Nicolina Como, of Brooklyn; Rocco Cologgi of North Tonawanda, N.Y.; and Rosina Dbiase, of Seneca, N.Y.

The ruling—if Alitalia does not appeal to the United States Supreme Court — means, the five can proceed with individual lawsuits of more than $500,000 each. The total of the five suits is $3,975,000.

—Her family

HARKNESS — In loving memory of Tom Harkness, passed away Dec. 19, 1965.

There is someone who misses you sadly,
And finds the time long since you went;
There is someone who thinks of you always
And tries to be brave and content.
Gone is the face we loved so dear,
Silent the voice we loved to hear,
'Tis sad, but true, we cannot say,
The best are always the first to die.

Diplomats' Belief

Crisis in Rhodesia Off Until March

By IVAN ZVERINA

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — The Rhodesian crisis has not been solved by the latest Security Council sanctions and will come back before the United Nations "with a vengeance" next March, diplomats predicted Saturday.

Secretary General Thant will have to report in March on the mandatory sanctions imposed on the white-dominated rebel British colony in Friday night's council vote.

Diplomats agreed Thant will have little to report on except a certain economic inconvenience on the Salisbury regime that will make it even hard to deal with the white settlers entrenched there.

ONLY COMPULSION

The diplomat making the March prediction was not one of the Africans who have been claiming ever since Rhodesia's unilateral declaration of independence from Britain in November, 1965, that nothing would work short of compulsory sanctions including South Africa and Portuguese African territories, or even use of force.

"The white Rhodesians are tough, much tougher than you think," he added. "Do you seriously believe that the sanctions imposed last night will make them change their mind? They will harden their positions, that's all."

The European diplomat, who has spent some time in Africa, said the Rhodesian white settlers cannot be compared to any other British colonists.

"In Kenya, at the height of Mau Mau terrorism, there were tough British men fighting for their lives but there were the 'officer class.' the Rhodesian settlers are the NCO's."

Other diplomats, including Africans, raised the obvious point of South African and Portuguese non-compliance with the sanctions ordered Friday on such currency-earning Rhodesian exports as tobacco, sugar, chrome and asbestos, but particularly with the non-compulsory sanctions on shipments of oil to Rhodesia.

"What will Thant, what will the UN, do next March after they learn that oil has been shipped into Rhodesia through South Africa and Portuguese Mozambique, sanctions or no sanctions?" one African asked.

TWO PROPOSITIONS

One answer, which was almost out of the realm of the possible for the UN, would be to launch a military enforcement action.

Another equally tenuous proposition would be to force Britain to use its navy to blockade South African ports. Britain is on the record as unwilling to do anything like that because it would set back its economy tremendously.

Yet, many observers here areed that offically Britain had justification in being jubilant to a degree over the council vote. They said it was a sea of approval for the British request for selective sanctions as well as proof that Britain cannot, at the moment, be pushed.

REAL DILEMMA

The Labor government can point to a record of initiating measures which will certainly prevent serious critics from charging that it has done nothing.

The real dilemma Prime Minister Wilson's government will face will be when the time comes to show what these measures have done at considerable cost to the British economy.

"In the end Wilson will not be able to escape answering a very pointed question," one diplomat said. "The question will be: Why, after all this sacrifice by the British taxpayer, haven't we been able to bring down the Rhodesian rebel regime?"

RESUME DIALOGUE?

Another aspect of the problem is that many diplomats here expect Britain to resume, sooner or later, some dialogue with Salisbury on what one of them termed a "settlement out of court."

The British got a green light on such a course when the council Friday night rejected an African demand for a categorical assurance by Britain that it would not settle for anything less than majority rule in the colony.

Bob Hope Travels Between Bookends

Hope arrived just 15 minutes after evangelist Billy Graham had departed for Tokyo. The clergyman also is visiting troops in Vietnam over the holidays.

Hope told an audience of 1,500 in the airport waiting room that he understood Francis Cardinal Spellman was one day behind him.

"With Billy Graham just ahead of me and Cardinal Spellman just behind me, that's the kind of bookends I like on a trip like this," he said.

Hope introduced Gen. Emmett (Rosie) O'Donnell, president of the USO, who is traveling with the troupe, to the mixed audience of civilians and servicemen on what he termed "his favorite sandspit."

O'Donnell told the crowd he was glad to return to Wake since he was the first pilot to land there Sept. 5, 1941.

Hope then introduced the remainder of his cast, including Vic Damone, Phyllis Diller, Joey Heatherton, Anita Bryant, Miss World Reita Farns, Diane Shelton, The Korean Kittens and Les Brown and his orchestra.

The Hope troupe's itinerary will include Thailand, Guam, The Philippines and Vietnam.

There'll be a hot time in Bowsman New Year's Eve. A spanking new water and sewage system was completed last week and the townspeople plan a monumental bonfire fuelled by more than 50 outhouses that have outlived their usefulness.

About 100 homes have been hooked up to the new system in this farming and lumbering town about 120 miles northwest of Dauphin.

Frog Shoot Blasted By SPCA

LONDON (Reuters) — A Boxing Day frog-shooting expedition planned by drinkers at a country tavern was denounced Saturday as barbarous by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

Jack Ruby

Healing And Resting

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — Jack Ruby, suffering from widespread cancer, is healing well from a limited exploratory incision performed after he went from his jail cell to a hospital Dec. 9.

A hospital bulletin said Saturday that Ruby, who killed Lee Harvey Oswald, was resting comfortably.

LYMPH SYSTEM

Surgeons first found cancer by discovering a tumor in Ruby's neck in a nodule in his lymph system.

Other tests indicated that the malignancy was widespread, with one lung a major point of suspicion as the centre of the disease. The pancreas is another point of suspicion, but doctors said it would be useless to pinpoint the source of the cancer at this time.

Doctors reported Ruby resting comfortably at Parkland Hospital, where he was guarded constantly by a deputy sheriff in his room and another outside the door.

WICHITA FALLS

Ruby was sentenced to death in 1964 for the murder, but an appeals court Oct. 5 ordered a new trial because of inadmissible evidence and ordered the trial held outside Dallas. Wichital Falls had been selected for the second hearing.

Ruby, 55, is being treated with a chemical. Doctors said the cancer was so widespread they could not resort to surgery and that the particular type of cancer cell in Ruby did not respond to radiation therapy.

Air Car Debuts

BURBANK, Calif. (UPI) — A car without wheels that can travel up to 70 miles per hour on a cushion of air 12 inches above the ground will make its public debut today at the Lockheed terminal.

Officials of Aircars, Inc., said the vehicle would be in production in early 1967 and would retail for about $2,995.

Dishwasher-Husband Can Get Separation

MILAN (Reuters) — Making a husband wash the dishes and do other housework constituted a "grave insult" and can be a legal ground for separation, a Milan court ruled Saturday.

The court granted a 45-year-old man's request for separation from his wife, finding her the guilty party. He said she made him do the chores because chores "did not become her status as a college graduate."

There is no divorce in Italy. The couple's names were not disclosed.

Trouble, Too

Mother Gets 'Thrill' From Youngsters

UNION CITY, Calif. (UPI) — A statuesque mother of four is facing charges that she supplied about two dozen youngsters with sex, liquor and glue-sniffing.

* * *

"I've done shameful things with children, but I like to have kids around," she was quoted as saying. "I get a thrill out of them."

Police detective Charles Foster said the house had been placed under surveillance two months ago after reports were made of wild parties there.

* * *

Since summer vacation, Foster said, Mrs. Mack had been supplying liquor, glue for sniffing, and pep pills for the youngsters. She also was charged with "sexual misconduct."

He said the activities took place largely on weekends when her husband, Lester, 43, took their children to visit relatives in the Sacramento area. They also occurred sometimes during the day when her husband was at work.

Foster said Mrs. Mack had sexual relations with several teen-age boys. He said there were also reports of sex between the teen-agers.

She was charged with two felony counts of contributing to the delinquency of minors.

U.S. Smasher May Tell

Are Quarks There?

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new atom smasher proposed by the U.S. government may hold the key to whether science can ultimatley hope to tap a hypothetical source of energy vastly more powerful than that loosed by hydrogen bombs.

Such a titanic force could come from still-undiscovered — but theorized-sub-nuclear particles called "quarks."

Some physicists believe such particles exist within the nuclei of atoms and constitute the long-sought basic building stones of all matter in the universe.

Indeed, these physicists say, the hypothetical quarks may even be the keystones to the basic forces of nature, such as gravity.

* * *

They long have said the possible existence of this particle is a prime reason why the U.S. should build its proposed $375,000,000 atom smasher. Weston, Ill., was selected Friday as site of the device.

The Atomic Energy Commission has neither confirmed nor denied its huge machine might settle once and for all whether quarks exist. But its scientists have indicated repeatedly a machine of such energy would for an indefinie time offer science its most powerful tool for tapping the secrets of matter.

Thousands Demand Fish-Harvest Harmony

A demand for a compromise solution that would allow both the sports and commercial interests to harvest in harmony the salmon stocks migrating through Juan de Fuca Strait was made at the meeting of the Salmon Sports Fishing Advisory Committee meeting last week.

Bob Wright, speaking on behalf of the Amalgamated Conservation Society, representing 14 lower Island outdoors groups and 14,000 members, asked that a two-mile offshore net restricted area be initiated as a sports reserve that would allow migrating salmon on their spawning runs to move unmolested past the net lines.

On to Rivers

These fish would pass through the major sports fishing areas of Vancouver Island and continue to the rivers as spawning stocks, he said.

At the same time the net harvest could continue outside the restricted area, he explained.

"In the past few years the net harvest in Juan de Fuca Strait has become so efficient that netting time has been limited. If under this new arrangement more time was needed to compensate for the sports reserve area, netting regulations could allow additional fishing time," he said.

Pass Through

"It perhaps will be argued by commercial interests that many of the fish they harvest will pass through the sports reserve and escape the net lines.

"If this should happen there is another major net fishery at the mouth of the Fraser River that could harvest salmon in excess of spawning requirements. We would point out that the Fraser River is an historic fishery, operating long before Juan de Fuca net fishery came into being," Mr. Wright said.

First Time

"This suggested compromise would correct the diminishing sports fishery of lower Vancouver Island and at the same time allow a sizeable commercial harvest. In other words, for the first time these two important industries could become compatible through compromise," he added.

He said that to be effective the two-mile net-free zone should start at the Bonilla-Tatoosh surf line and extend inwards into Juan de Fuca Strait.

"Believe it or not, we are not asking for a cut in the commercial harvest. Let the commercial interests take as many as before," he said.

Mr. Wright produced figures to show that gillnet fishing days in Juan de Fuca Strait have gone from 383 days in 1953 to 8,967 in 1963.

"Look at the growth! No wonder our sports fishery has gone to pot," Mr. Wright said.

"Add to this the dropout problem (salmon that drop out of the gillnets in rough waters of Juan de Fuca Strait and sink to the bottom and die) and estimates go as high as 35 per cent and you can sum the rest up for yourselves," he told advisory committee members.

"Something has to be done. There is virtually wall after wall of nets stretching from the international boundary . . . literally hundreds of gillnetters, and of course, during the day you have a fleet of seine boats.

Long Parade

"We are called emotional — and we are. Any salmon fisherman who observes the endless parade of commercial netting boats that pass the Victoria waterfront on the way to Area 20 (Sooke to the surf line) and then experiences the terrible sports fishing in our area, would get emotional, too," he said. He noted that up until about 12 years ago salmon sports fishing adjacent to lower Vancouver Island was good and attracted thousands of tourists and residents. Sport fishing fishing activity increased.

Mr. Wright referred to suggestions by the fisheries department that sports fishing in the Victoria-Sooke area is on the wane in the fall. "Rubbish. The only reason it is on the wane near Victoria is there are no coho for the sports fishermen to catch.

Boat Count

"If the department thinks sports fishing is on the wane in September I suggest a count of the number of boats in Cowichan Bay," he said.

Mr. Wright also countered suggestions that mature coho are not susceptible to hook and line by pointing to the mature coho caught in Cowichan Bay and to the fact that before the concentration of nets in Juan de Fuca sports fishermen had no difficulty catching limits of coho in the fall.

He observed that restrictive gillnet sizes have been in force in all other coastal waters (60 mesh and 200 fathoms) while in Juan de Fuca 90 mesh and 300 fathom nets are allowed. Seine boats are allowed 200 fathoms in all other waters and 300 fathom nets in Juan de Fuca. Area 20 is the only place where seiners are allowed to use power skiffs.

Mr. Wright referred to a State of Washington department of fisheries report published in 1960 which said that coho mill about the Bonilla-Tatoosh area from June until September with early races moving into Juan de Fuca Strait during July and August.

"Many people believe that if you have a four-day fishery and lift the nets for three days that three-sevenths of the fish will pass through," he said.

Even Weeks

"This is not the case. Many of these coho move around in Area 20 and perhaps are in the area several days, or even weeks, before they move on.

"I respectfully suggest that fish that evade the solid wall of nets are spooked and travel past the lower Island area deep or outside beyond the reach of sports fishermen.

"In fact, last September some of our sports fishermen ventured out past Race Rocks with hand lines and five-pound weights and had little trouble limiting on mature coho in 20 and 25 fathoms of water. Unfortunately this is not sports fishing and is no answer to our problems. We know the coho are passing through our waters outside and deep. These are our spawning escapement, but they are completely useless to the sports fishery," he said.

On U.S. Side

Mr. Wright quoted precedents for establishing a net-free zone.

Initiative 77 in Washington State sets aside a three-mile net-free area off Juan de Fuca Strait and Puget Sound on the U.S. side.

A two-mile net-free reserve is now in effect in the middle east coast waters of Vancouver Island from Mistaken Island, south of Parksville, to Shelter Point, near Campbell River.

Roadblocks Widespread

Just One Whiff Could Ground You

By TERRY ROBERTS

VANCOUVER (CP) — A special squad of sensitive-nosed policemen is Vancouver's answer to motorists who drink and drive during the Christmas season.

Should a nose thrust unobtrusively in a car window detect the scent of alcoholic cheer, the driver is in for stiffer examination that could lead to arrest.

ON THEIR WAY

Those who pass the sniff test and produce a valid driver's licence and vehicle registration are thanked and sent on their way.

The whole process takes less than two minutes of a driver's time, but police believe it pays off in reducing Christmas-time traffic carnage resulting from alcohol.

The roving unit, sometimes labelled "a wolf-pack of noses" or "the flying squad," checks up to 1,500 vehicles a night in an annual campaign that begins early in December and runs through New Year's Eve.

Police call the campaign applied psychology.

"It's been my experience in past years that the sight of one police roadblock examining cars is enough to make drivers think twice about taking a drink," says Cpl. Don Brown, in charge of the nose unit.

TWELVE SPOTS

He said the squad can set up in 12 locations in one night.

The psychology of the measure involves the mobility of the unit. It can move to various locations, and does, within minutes, and in no preset pattern.

Police Chief Ralph Booth attributes a drop in impaired driving arrests to 34 so far this month compared with 69 in November to the roadblock campaign. "It is quite evident that our roadblock policy has had a deterrent value," he said.

ALL YEAR

A. H. Rossiter, superintendent and head of the traffic division, is a firm believer in the psychological benifits of the campaign, and has many times proposed a year-round plan.

He said the total of 1,543 impaired driving arrests so far this year show "we'd be more than justified in continuing roadblocks right through the year."

Next year, there likely will be a new factor on the scene that will result in police making fewer impairment arrests but suspending drivers' licences on the spot.

ACCURACY LACK

Roadside suspension legislation passed earlier this year but not yet proclaimed was scheduled to be operational in Vancouver and Victoria for this Christmas. But the plan ran into a roadblock in the accuracy of alcohol-testing equipment.

Attorney-General Robert Bonner said the breath-type tester proved in RCMP tests to be not accurate for the .08 per cent blood-alcohol ratio in the legislation.

Under the law, police will be able to suspend a driver's licence for 24 hours if they believe the motorist has had enough to drink to reach the .08-per-cent level.

The motorist can wait out the 24 hours to get his licence returned or can take the breath test. If the tester shows the level below .08 per cent his licence is returned immediately.

Should the tester indicate a reading of .15 per cent, the level recognized for impairment, the policeman cannot charge the driver or use the reading as evidence in any subsequent charge.

Mr. Bonner said policemen must decide either to charge the driver with impairment or invoke the new suspension law before the test is taken and that minds cannot be changed once the process is in motion.

'Secret Agent'

Union Expels Shop Steward

KELOWNA (CP) — A Teamster shop steward has been expelled from the union following charges he was working as a "secret agent" for a rival union, officials said Friday.

The man, not named by the union, was a former employee of Sun-Rype Ltd. and was expelled at a union trial earlier this week.

Kelowna and regional teamster officials said last week they had evidence that the man had been secretly working against the union while employed.

RAIDS CHARGED

The teamsters have accused the Brewery Workers' union of attempting to raid Sun-Rype where 3,200 workers are represented by the Teamsters.

They said the shop steward was soliciting memberships in the Brewery union rather than looking after Teamster interests.

Meanwhile, Teamsters and the Brewery union were preparing briefs for presentation at a labor relations board hearing Wednesday in Vancouver where an application for Teamster decertification will be heard.

Mrs. Kennedy leaves Look lawyer's office

* * *

Script of Book 'Too Painful' For Jacqueline

NEW YORK (AP) — A lawyer for Mrs. John Kennedy looked at the manuscript of the book Death of a President, for the first time Saturday. He said he took Mrs. Kennedy along with him, but she did not read it because she felt it would be too painful.

Simon H. Rifkind, who filed a suit Friday in Manhattan Supreme Court on behalf of Mrs. Kennedy to block publication of the book, said he viewed the manuscript at the Wall Street office of David Peck, a lawyer for Cowles Communications, one of the defendants.

"I asked him — Peck — to expose to my view the manuscript of the story which I had never seen before," said Rifkind. "He was glad to exhibit it to me.

"I wanted to have Mrs. Kennedy along to answer any questions that might come up. She did not want to read it because it would be too painful. From time to time, she answered questions."

Rifkind said he spent "many hours" looking at the manuscript, and that Mrs. Kennedy was with him a good portion of the time. She left, however, before he did.

Meanwhile, a lawyer for another defendant in the case said, "There's never been a case like this before."

Defence Plan

The lawyer, Edward S. Greenbaum, 76, representing Harper and Row, said Saturday he would file an answer to Mrs. Kennedy's suit next week, probably Thursday.

"You'll know what tack our defence will take when you see our answer," said Greenbaum, Harper's counsel for 40 years.

Mrs. Kennedy asked the Supreme Court in Manhattan Friday to bar publication by Harper and Row and Look magazine of William Manchester's account of the assassination of President Kennedy and the events surrounding it.

Mrs. Kennedy charged

Little Time for Protests

Truck Rate Hike Sought

2 Per Cent Jump Forecast In Island Living Cost

Haddock

By BILL STAVDALL

A freight rate increase averaging 10 per cent is being sought by trucking firms which supply Vancouver Island.

The increase, if granted by the Public Utilities Commission, would raise the average cost of all goods imported from the mainland by an estimated two per cent, effective Jan. 16.

Rate increases on freight shipped between Island points and from the Island to the Gulf Islands are also being asked by the truckers.

* * *

Timing of the application drew criticism Saturday from chamber of commerce spokesmen up and down the Island. There are about 10 working days between Dec. 22, when the proposed rate revisions will be made public, and Jan. 6, deadline for submissions to the PUC.

Courtney Haddock, president of the Victoria Chamber of Commerce and manager of Woodward's department store in Victoria, was dismayed when he heard the news.

* * *

"Holy cow!" he exclaimed. It was Mr. Haddock, who calculated a two-per-cent increase in the cost of living for Islanders on the basis of a 10-per-cent freight rate increase.

He said he would put the chamber's staff to work Monday investigating the matter.

There will be little time to register protests, he pointed out.

A public notice which will appear soon advises that details of the proposed revisions will be available on or after Dec. 22 at the offices of the freight companies applying for the increase.

* * *

Representations must be made to the superintendent of the motor carrier branch of the Public Utilities Commission by Jan. 6. If the PUC approves, rates will increase Jan. 16.

"I don't think that is right. I can't believe they would put this in so quickly," said Mr. Haddock.

Jordan Crisis

Israel Demands 'Other' Arabs Stay at Home

REHOVOT, Israel (UPI)—An Israeli government leader warned Saturday night Israel would not "tolerate" stationing of other Arab troops in Jordan.

Labor Minister Allon, tipped as probable defence minister in a forecast reshuffle of Premier Eshkol's cabinet, said "Israel coud not suffer the entry of Egyptian, Syrian or Iraqi troops into Jordanian territory," especially on the west bank of the Jordan River on Israel's border.

ALONG BORDER

The Arab defence council in Cairo last week called for Jordan to allow troops of other Arab countries to be stationed along the Israeli border.

Allon said "We don't rattle sabres but we do explain our stand. Should new troops enter Jordan this would be a far-reaching breach of the armistice agreements and they should realize the alternative in Jordan is not only between Hussein and Nasser—there's a third one . . ."

Allon let the warning rest there.

Jordan's young King Hussein has opposed permanently basing troops from the left-leaning United Arab Republic, Syria or Iraq in Jordan. He is believed to consider they would pose a threat to his own throne as well as to peaceful relations with Israel.

"No Arab state would make war on Israel without Cairo's consent, while Syria would provide the main base of acts of terror against Israel," he said.

PEACE SOUGHT

Israel seeks peace and co-operation with every Arab state regardless of its type of regime, he said. Israel would agree to an interim arrangement which, although not a peace accord finally ending the state of war which has existed with the Arabs since 1949, would prevent the outbreak of new hostilities.

93,000 Railmen Settling Wages

MONTREAL (CP) — Representatives of about 93,000 railway workers have concluded a year of negotiations by reaching a proposed agreement with the CNR and the CPR on a new wage contract, spokesmen for both sides said Saturday night.

Terms of the proposed agreement will be submitted to members early next week for a vote.

It was understood the contract, if approved, would give the workers a wage boost of about 24 per cent over three years.

Lost in Space

Valuable Astrobugs Fail to Come Home

It carried 10,000,000 bug and plant specimens testing the effects man might experience on long-ranging flights in space.

The mission of Biosatellite I went wrong on its fourth day of orbit with failure of a retro-rocket to fire for a planned capsule recovery over the Pacific 400 miles north of Honolulu.

Instead of descending into the atmosphere with a parachute, the miology laboratory capsule only separated from its spacecraft, a National Aeronautics and Space Administration spokesman reported.

The capsule and its cargo continued in uncontrolled orbit. Its eventual fate will be to drift into the atmosphere and burn up with re-entry heat.

"We cannot now pinpoint the reason for the recovery failure," the NASA spokesman said.

The capsule was launched into perfect orbit Wednesday from Cape Kennedy, Fla., as the first mission in a $100,000,000 "bring-'em - back - alive" Biosatellite program. Five more launches are planned.

UNION CHIEF FREED

VANCOUVER (CP) — Jeffrey James Power, one of four union leaders jailed for contempt of court, is out of prison Saturday after a special amnesty was granted Friday by Solicitor-General Pennell.

There were no immediate reports from Ottawa explaining Power's release that came after Mr. Pennell told the Commons earlier Friday he would not decide the matter until Monday.

However, Power walked out of prison later in the day.

There was no word on a plea from the B.C. Federation of Labor for clemency for the three other men.

Power, president of the Boiler Makers Union, Paddy Neale, secretary of the Vancouver Labor Council, Tom Clarke, an International Woodworkers of America official and Art O'Keefe, former business agent of the Electrical Workers Union, were jailed for demonstrations at the Lenkurt Electric Co. Plant in nieghboring Burnaby last May.

1,000 Flee Before Explosion

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (AP) — More than 1,000 persons were evacuated from Lambert - St. Louis Municipal Airport Saturday night, minutes before a time-bomb made of four sticks of dynamite exploded in the east dome area of the terminal.

The blast shattered seven large glass windows and caused other minor damages, but no one was reported injured, police said. Operations returned to normal within an hour.

James L. Williams, an airport custodian, said he found a shoebox containing the dynamite and an alarm clock on a row of chairs near the counters of Braniff, Ozark and Central airlines.

Delta Hard Hit

Flood Alert On Mainland

VANCOUVER (CP) — Greater Vancouver municipalities are on flood alert after the weatherman predicted no end in sight to one of the worst rainy seasons in the area's history.

Municipal works departments in most areas had crews on weekend standby in case drainage systems could not cope with the downpour and began to overflow. (See also Page 21.)

One of the hardest hit areas was Delta, a low-lying area south of Vancouver, where Reeve Clarence Taylor said about 4,000 acres of cropland was under water.

He said there could be heavy damage to strawberry plants and beet crops.

The Vancouver area has measured more than 16 inches of rain that has fallen 41 days and 41 nights since it began Nov. 7. The rainfall has ranged from a trace to a downpour during that time.

Defection Over

MALMO, Sweden (UPI)—Harold Koch, a former Chicago priest who defected to Russia three months ago, has left the Soviet Union and says he wants to return to the U.S. after hearing his father is seriously ill.

More Asian Help To South Vietnam

WASHINGTON (AP) — More aid to South Vietnam, including more troops, will come from several countries, Secretary of State Dean Rusk predicted Saturday on his return from a globe-girdling trip. (See Page 6.)

He declined to give more details, and said it was up to the countries concerned to make any announcement. However, he indicated the troop addition would come from an Asian country.

"I think there will be more aid from a number of countries," Rusk said.

Asked if that would include more military personnel, he said: "I think there will be some more troops there, yes."

South Korea, the Philippines, Australia, New Zealand and Thailand are countries now listed as having military personnel in South Vietnam.

Shooters Defy Rain, Fog

* * *

There were about 80 prize-winners, but the biggest winner of all was the 500 Fund, which annually receives a boost from the two-day turkey shoot.

* * *

Using the new electric shooting trap, which was installed at the end of November, about 80 squads of five each shot their rounds, with a ham or turkey being given to the winner in each squad.

* * *

Trapshooting captain Sam McCleave reported that despite both fog and rain, the turnout was as good as last year's.

He expects even more to go to the shoot today, possibly as many as 175 squads, especially if the weather co-operates.

The second day has always been the time when more Victorians have turned out to shoot for a chance at a turkey, and at the same time know that win or lose they are helping the 500 Fund add a little joy to Christmas, for some of the city's neediest.

* * *

The club has already contributed $300 to the Colonist fund — to be divided among the 500 families chosen and thereby swell their cheques on Christmas Eve by 60 cents each.

Costly Joke Irks U.K.

Committee of the Hole Struck

LONDON (AP)—A high-level committee consisting of a government minister and 14 experts has been set up to get to the bottom of the hole problem.

Millions of pounds of taxpayers' money is spent every year, it seems, on adding holes and filling them up again.

* * *

All the nationalized public utilities are in the hole-digging business. And they all want to dig their own holes.

The men from the water board come along and dig up the road, lay their water pipes and fill up the hole.

* * *

Then the men from the gas board come and dig it all up again, lay their gas pipes, fill in the holes and go away.

By this time, the water board men usually come back for a second time. It goes on and on.

It has become a sort of national joke. A movie company even made a slapstick silent film about it called A House of Your Own.

* * *

But with a big economy drive under way and the prime minister calling for greater productivity, it didn't seem so funny to the minister of public building and works, Reginald Prentice.

* * *

He wants all the people who dig holes to co-ordinate their work so that they can all use the same holes. That way, he contends, instead of having to dig the hole four or five times and fill it in each time, they need only one hole—with a considerable saving in money and manpower.

* * *

So, in the best civil service and government tradition, he has appointed a committee to investigate the problem of holes.

Intense Jungle Fight

U.S. Troops Jockey To Trap Battalion

SAIGON (UPI) — Bloody jungle fighting erupted in the central highlands today as U.S. air cavalrymen jockeyed to trap and destroy an estimated Communist battalion trying to escape.

The battalion was trying to flee soldiers of the First Air Cavalry Division moving in on three sides toward the South China Sea coast.

The multi-company force of cavalrymen had suffered moderate casualties in the fighting Saturday 285 miles northeast of Saigon and 38 miles northwest of Qui Nhon.

The death toll for the Communists was expected to be much higher as the cavalrymen squeezed in on the Red battalion — possibly between 400 and 600 men.

Firefights

The troops were supported by heavy air strikes and artillery bombardments.

Fighting broke off at nightfall Saturday and it was feared the Communists managed to flit away in the jungle.

But shortly after daybreak the cavalrymen triggered two more firefights and drove into a force entrenched in concealed bunkers.

There was bitter fighting as the soldiers blasted bunkers with artillery and called in aircraft to hammer the Red positions with bombs and napalm.

Further north, U.S. marines chasing guerrillas in hit-and-run bands killed 23 Viet Cong in a series of sweeps in the northern provinces. B52 bombers smashed Communist positions inside the demilitarized border zone for the third straight day.

The fighting, among the most intense in recent weeks, erupted as the cavalrymen swept the guerrilla-controlled section of Binh Dinh province in Operation Thayer II, a search and destroy project that began Oct. 25 and has resulted in a reported 625 Communists killed.

Late in the afternoon, the Americans came under heavy automatic weapons and mortar fire. At some points, the two sides closed to within hand-grenade range.

After nightfall, the guerrillas managed to pull back and, by all indications, leave the area along jungle trails.

Explosions

In air raids Saturday, three U.S. air force F4C Phantoms attacked coastal defences at Dong Duong in North Vietnam, spokesmen said, and set off 12 secondary explosions. The defences have often taken pot-shots at 7th fleet ships operating offshore.

Other planes concentrated on highways and waterways in North Vietnam's southern panhandle where the Communists are reportedly pouring men and supplies southward toward a continuing buildup.

Monsoon weather limited raids Friday, but a handful of U.S. planes unloaded 2,250,000 propaganda leaflets over Hanoi. Some of the leaflets urged North Vietnamese troops to surrender if they were sent into the south.

Cropduster

In the Mekong Delta south of Saigon, a U.S. special forces team was attacked by guerrillas but was saved without a casualty when an air force AC47 plane with Gatling-type guns routed the enemy with bursts from the 6,000 bullets-a-minute weapons.

The Green Beret advisers held off guerrillas small arms and mortar fire for more than 90 minutes before the plane dropped in like a cropduster and saturated the area with machine-gun fire.

The converted cargo planes are rigged throughout the lower fuselage with .30-caliber machine-guns. The weapons automatically spray about four bullets into every square foot of an area bigger than a football field.

Romania Claims Damage

SAIGON (UPI)—Broadcasts from Hanoi today said Romania has become the second country to charge U.S. bombs damaged its embassy in the North Vietnamese capital during raids last Tuesday and Wednesday.

China was the first nation to make such a charge. Hanoi reporting Saturday bomb and rocket fragments with U.S. markings were found in the Chinese embassy. But U.S. spokesmen in Saigon and Washington denied any raids on residential areas of Hanoi.

Dum-Dum Effect

By WILLIAM MORRIS

An army doctor and veteran of Vietnam described Friday the "dum-dum" effect of the M16's bullet which, he said, shatters on impact, causing "massive tissue destruction."

* * *

The doctor, Maj. Norman Rich, served with the Second Surgical Hospital and described the effect of the bullet during a symposium on the care given casualties of the war.

In one case Dr. Rich cited, a GI wounded by an M16 bullet received an entry wound about the size of the eraser of a lead pencil. The exit wound was about the size of a regular cigarette pack, or 125 times larger.

* * *

This occurs, Dr. Rich said, because the M16 bullet breaks into small lead fragments after its hard casing opens on impact.

In other bullet designs, the bullet remains whole and passes through a target nearly intact. Exit wounds from bullets of this type are closer to the size of an entry wound.

Dr. Rich's description came in a discussion of "comparative missile wounds in Vietnam" and a study of 750 surgical cases at his hospital between January and October, 1966.

* * *

Of that number, 434 had been hit by shell fragments, mostly from artillery and mortar fire, and another 316 were wounded by small arms fire, primarily from 30-calibre weapons.

A few, he said, had been hit by the 5.56-millimetre bullet from captured M16 rifles which are replacing the larger 7.62 calibre M14 rifle as the army's basic weapon.

Dr. Rich said that of the 750 cases, 61 per cent were returned to duty within 16 days and 1.2 per cent of the cases ended in the death of the wounded man.

* * *

This death rate of wounded men who died in hospitals was lower than the 2.4 per cent average for the Vietnam war.

In the Second World War, this hospital death figure was 4.5 per cent, and in Korea, it was 2.5 per cent.

The lower death rate, he said, was attributable to the use of the helicopter and the more rapid transfer of a wounded man from the battlefield to the hospital.

Reckless Climbers Fined

TOKYO (Reuters) — Mountaineers in Gumma, central Japan, now have to watch their step—they can be fined for reckless climbing.

The Gumma prefectural government has decided to impose a penalty of up to 10,000 yen ($28) for the offence.

Two U.S. B-52 bombers drop their loads of 750-pound general purpose bombs on Viet Cong targets below in photograph just released in Washington. Raid took place last week in October. — AP).

Travel Rule Still Same

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. state department has extended until March 15 its review of present restrictions on travel by Americans to certain Communist countries.

Present regulations requiring specially validated passports for trips to Albania, Cuba, Communist China, North Korea and North Vietnam will remain in effect until then unless modified sooner, the department said Friday.

Weather Halts U.S. Women On Hanoi Trip

MOSCOW (AP)—Four American women had a talk here today with a representative of South Vietnam's Viet Cong guerrillas and then went to the airport for a trip to Hanoi, North Vietnam, but bad weather blocked the flight.

The women, expressing some apprehension that U.S. bombs might kill them in the North Vietnamese capital, now are scheduled to take off today for a flight to Hanoi via Peking, China.

TELL THE PEOPLE

American planes bombed the Hanoi area Tuesday and Wednesday.

Three of the four said they were going to see for themselves what they called "an immoral, illegal war" and then tell the American people about it. They contended the American people are not getting a true picture.

The fourth woman, Diane Bevel, 24, of Chicago, declined to talk about the trip for publication. Mrs. Bevel just listened as her companions were interviewed.

The four, who scarcely knew each other before leaving New York Wednesday, are going to Hanoi at the invitation of the North Vietnamese Women's Union. They expect to be there 10 to 14 days.

They said they were chosen by a group of about 25 women two weeks ago to represent the U.S. peace movement.

They met for almost two hours Saturday with a secretary of the Vietnam Liberation Front's Moscow office, Do Huu Chi. The front is the political arm of the Viet Cong.

'Call Right Away If a Fire Starts'

By ARNOLD OLSON

NANAIMO — Nanaimo firemen cannot remember a time when they have not been called out for a fire at Christmas.

However, they prefer that the motto for the season be "call right away if a fire starts."

If a fire should start, call the department immediately, give the address and the name calmly, then the details as requested.

Then if the fire seems small, attempts may be made to put it out.

NOT BLANKET

Do not try to smother a tree fire with a wet, cool blanket. The tree branches will allow enough air to sustain the fire, which will dry the blanket and add to the fuel.

Do not try to take the tree out of the house while it is aflame—drapes and furniture can be set alight.

COMMON SENSE

The usual common-sense items such as leaving no paper debris near the tree, not overloading electrical circuits, or using frayed wiring, and decorating the tree with real candles are so common that they are sometimes overlooked.

The uses of polystyrene foam as a base for candles is dangerous, as this plastic is flammable.

Chief Collin MacArthur suggests that the lights be moved occasionally, so that dry spots on the branches do not develop.

He also comes to the aid of male smokers by suggesting that large deep ashtrays be provided for smoking guests, to prevent dangerous fallout.

The family should have some plan of action in the event of fire, so that children can be taken to safety.

Trees should be cut on an angle, provided with water, kept away from exits, supported well and checked daily for dryness.

Book Big Boost

PORT ALBERNI — If you want to prove to friends and relatives in other parts of the world just what B.C. is like today, you can't beat British Columbia: Challenge in Abundance, according to Ald. Bill Marshall.

The alderman, who is one of Alberni's representatives on the centennial committee, admitted he does not always agree with glowing centennial press releases from Victoria, but the enthusiasm for this book is well justified, he feels.

* * *

"It's the best $2.95 investment I've made in a book in years," he told council.

"It's up to date, its factual, its filled with up to the minute technical information. I consider this book is truly outstanding."

* * *

Ald. Blair said he had just received his copy, ordered from advance information about the publication, and he agreed with Ald. Marshall.

The enthusiastic support for the volume came after reading of a letter from Laurie Wallace, head of the centennial committee, advising council the book is available from the local centennial committee, or from regular retail outlets. In addition to the $2.95 edition, a de luxe edition is also available which will sell for $10, council learned.

Lucky Quintet 'Crawled Out'

NANAIMO — Five people "crawled out" of a 15-foot ditch after a two-car collision Friday.

CHEMAINUS — Lloyd Verne Skogman died at Chemainus Hospital. Born at Fusilier, Sask., he was 46 years old.

He had been a resident of Crofton for the past six weeks and was employed as a stationary engineer at the Crofton pulp mill. He had previously resided at Victoria.

He is survived by his wife Olive, one son, Daniel, and two daughters, Lynda and Patricia at home; two sisters, Edna and Ruth.

Funeral services will be held Monday with Rev. Percy Wills officiating.

PARKSVILLE—About 30 children ranging in age from toddlers to early 'teens are busily rehearsing for a Christmas Tableau to be presented by the combined Sunday schools of Knox United Church and the Anglican parish at St. Edmund's Anglican Church, today at 7 p.m.

The tableau in 13 scenes will be accompanied by a 17-voice teen-age choir and several vocal soloists as each scene will have a carol or hymn suitable to the theme based on the nativity.

Preparations involve considerable manipulation of lighting effects as scene changes will be done through lighting as curtains cannot be used. A dozen adults from both parishes are busily working out final plans for the event which it is hoped might become an annual project for the Sunday school children.

DUNCAN — Gerald Noble Mitchell died in King's Daughters' hospital in Duncan.

He was born at Mt. Pleasant, Vancouver, in 1890.

From 1913 until his retirement in 1950, he was a dairy farmer at Nicomen Island, B.C.

Formerly a resident of Athey Road, Deroche, B.C., he was visiting an only son, Norman, of 255 First Street, Duncan.

Mr. Mitchell was predeceased by his wife, the late Hilda Mitchell, and one daughter, Eileen.

He is survived by one grandson, Milton.

Services were held in the Hirst Funeral Chapel, Rev. Alan Kerr officiating.

PARKSVILLE—Devoted service to Parksville volunteer fire department for 11 years was rewarded recently when Neil Nelson was honored by Fire Chief William Wheeler and members of the department on his retirement from active service.

Mr. Nelson has always been a hard worker on the department fire prevention campaigns and during competitions, in addition to always being right on the job whenever the alarm sounded.

The presentation was made during the annual Firemen's children's Christmas tree party at the fire hall when some 75 members and guests sat down to a sumptuous supper and then had a visit from Santa Claus.

Sunshine Looks Like This

You better believe that Nanaimo, at times, looks like this, with bright sunshine shining bright on shining bright cars . . . and so on. But things are not bright now at all, as rain keeps pelting down on Nanaimo and Vancouver Island. This picture, compressing several blocks into one via telephoto lens, is just reminder that things are never as bad as they seem.—(William E. John.)

Last of Seven Pleads Guilty

NANAIMO—The last of seven young people has pleaded guilty to charges of assault and has been remanded for sentence until Dec. 28.

Magistrate Eric Winch commented that he could not recall this type of offence in Nanaimo, and expressed his concern for the protection of the public.

LAST OF SEVEN

Edward Dye, 20, of Wellington, was the last of the seven young people, four of them juveniles, to enter a plea.

Carol Ann Gibbs, 18, Wellington, and Patricia Marie Carson, 18, of 415 Kitzwilliam, also have been remanded to Dec. 28.

Two juvenile boys were remanded to Dec. 29, while the juvenile girls were sent to Willingdon School for Girls.

They had lured two seamen, from the ship Angeline, to a secluded spot in Harewood.

GOT OUT

One of them kicked Jensen in the head, the blows causing a two-inch cut that had to be stitched.

They were apprehended by RCMP after Jensen, who managed to escape, ran to a nearby house and reported the attack.

Dinner Goes With Duty

The navy will relax its usual rigid rules and allow families of men on duty aboard ships of the Maritime Command to join them for Crhistmas dinner.

Families will be welcome between 11:30 a.m. and 8 p.m. and will be treated to a full-course Christmas dinner.

Legion Plans Big Parade

PARKSVILLE — A church parade will be held by Mt. Arrowsmith Branch No. 49, Royal Canadian Legion, today. The 11 a.m. service at St. Edmund's Anglican Church will be conducted by Rev. Eric Blackstock, vicar of St. Edmund's and Legion branch padre.

The president, Kenneth Woodford, has requested Legionnaires to assemble at Legion Hall at 10:45 a.m. The colors will be on parade so medals will be worn.

Fees Frozen Through '67

The new chancellor of the University of Victoria confirmed Friday that students at the university next year can put aside any fears of there being a fee increase.

"The university budget is formulated on the basis of no fee increase," said R. B. Wilson, former mayor of Victoria who will assume chancellory duties Jan. 1, 1967.

Mr. Wilson's appointment to the coveted university post was confirmed in a university release which also announced election results of six vacancies in the University Senate.

SECOND TERM

Re-elected to the senate for a second term are Mr. Justice John G. Ruttan of the Supreme Court of British Columbia, and L. J. Wallace, deputy provincial secretary.

Elected for the first time were Canon C. Hilary Butler, Dr. J. F. K. English, Dr. Charles Gregory and Dr. Frederick H. Sanders, all of Victoria.

All terms involved, including the chancellory, are for three years. As chancellor, Mr. Wilson is automatically a senator.

Mr. Wilson succeeds Dr. Joseph B. Clearihue, who retires this year after a 63-year association with the development of higher education in Victoria, his native city.

The Board of Governors, on which Mr. Wilson serves, is a body which has responsibility for financial administration and the setting of policy.

But he said it is out of the Board of Governors hands to permit student representation on the Senate itself. Student agitation in several universities is centred around the problem of seating a student representative on university senates.

Fined Minimum For Impairment

NANAIMO — Robert Fielding, 66, was fined $50 Friday for impaired driving. Magistrate Eric Winch set the minimum fine and suspended Fielding's driver's licence for nine months after being told Fielding's only source of income is a $105 pension.

Mother of Four Gets 'Thrill' From Youngsters

ROME (Reuters)—Tear gas, a wild car chase, and a spectacular crash ended early Saturday with a French woman and four private detectives from Paris under arrest on kidnapping charges.

TEAR GAS

The four private detectives—one of them a woman—threw tear gas in Marini's face outside his apartment and tried to snatch the girl from his arms and push her into a waiting car, police said.

But Marini reacted quickly and jumped into the car as they tried to move off. After a violent struggle he managed to wind down the window and shout "help, help, they are kidnapping me."

INTO BUS

Warned by passers-by, police set up roadblocks. When the car approached one on the Via Cassia, it swung round in a u-turn and crashed into a bus.

Injunction Crusade 'Misguided'

The construction industry has advised B.C. unions to drop their campaign against use of injunctions in industrial disputes.

"The current campaign against injunctions is not only misguided but appears to be widely misunderstood. It should be dropped," said R. G. Saunders, president of Amalgamated Construction Association of B.C.

His association represents 620 companies.

Mr. Saunders issued his statement following presentation of a brief by the 126,000-member B.C. Federation of Labor to cabinet ministers, asking for injunctions to be outlawed.

Federal Area In Ottawa Gains Favor

OTTAWA (CP)—The idea of setting up a bilingual federal district in the Ottawa area appears to be steadily gaining favor in political circles—even in Toronto.

With little publicity, the Ontario government has commissioned and obtained a detailed report on the pros and cons of a federal district in the national capital area.

The report, expected to be made public shortly, is understood to endorse the proposal, so long as some form of home rule is retained for local taxpayers. Premier John Robarts is taking a personal interest in the question, informants say.

Prof. Donald C. Rowat of Carleton University's political science department confirmed in an interview that he completed the 100-page report some time ago, but declined to comment on his findings.

Jockey for Position

The existing national capital commission is largely limited to the development and maintenance of scenic parkways and parks, while scores of municipal councils and administrative boards jockey for position.

The capital region has a population exceeding 500,000, with a French-speaking element of roughly 40 per cent.

French - speaking legislators and civil servants often complain that Ottawa is largely an English-speaking Ontario town rather than a truly bilingual national capital. They particularly object to the lack of French high schools and to the fact that French is not an official language in Ottawa's municipal affairs and courts.

The main argument against the federal district idea here is that in Washington it deprives local residents of any democratic representation in local government. The District of Columbia has a Negro majority but is governed by a congressional committee dominated by southerners who oppose racial integration.

Russia Pushing Japan –But for Fifth Place

LONDON (AP) — Jane's Fighting Ships was quoted by The Associated Press in a story Dec. 13 as saying the Soviet Union was pressing Japan for leadership in the merchant marine field.

Actually, Jane's said the Soviet Union was pressing Japan in the merchant field without specifying it was for fifth place. The leaders are Britain, 21,530,264 tons; the United States, 21,537,349; Liberia, 17,538,563; Norway, 15,641,498; Japan, 11,971,157, and the Soviet Union, 9,500,000.

Given Life Sentence Negro Doesn't Know Why He Killed Six

19-year-old Richmond Negro, who testified he would give no reason for shooting the six persons he admitted he killed, was convicted Saturday of first degree murder.

The jury of 11 men and one woman, which included two Negroes, recommended that Thomas Lee Penn be sentenced to life in prison with no recommendation for mercy.

FIVE MORE

Penn would be eligible for parole in 15 years under the sentence, but he still faces trial on five other murder charges.

Penn was convicted of the fatal shooting last May 9 of Cynthia Johnson, 16. Penn said he met the girl, also a Negro, on a Richmond street that night, took her into a nearby wooded area at gunpoint and shot her nine times.

'CAN'T GIVE REASON'

Asked by Richard R. Ryder, his lawyer, why he shot the girl, Penn replied: "I don't know."

Questioned about his reasons for the other killings, he answered: "I can't give the jury any reason."

The five other victims, both Negro and white, were shot to death between February and May of this year.

Draw Winners

Safety Means Seven Inches Of Lake Level

But Resort Operator Is Getting His 'Ferries' Ready

LAKE COWICHAN — If the lake level rises another seven inches, 36 homes along the old Youbou Road at Lake Cowichan will be surrounded by water and Cedar's Resort operator Peter Edwards will supply a free ferry service by rowboat.

Mr. Edwards said Saturday, "Our parking lot is now under seven feet of water and the pumphouse, which in normal winters is 40 feet from the lakeshore, stands now in four feet of water.

"The situation for the houses along the Cowichan River in the village is quite serious and people wanting to reach dry land either have to use a boat or they have built walkways on stilts."

★ ★ ★

He said in order to get the mail from the post office in the village centre one has to wear rubber boots because the building is surrounded by water.

However, river generally began going down Saturday.

It is feared fresh rains will cause new problems.

At some parts the road through the village is flooded by Cowichan River at depth ranging from four to 10 inches.

Conservation officer Jack Fox of Duncan said it is too early to tell whether there will be much damage to salmon.

He said, "We shall lose some fish."

He explained some of the salmon have gone into side streams and into flooded bush areas but many will return to the river bed when the river goes down.

He said if salmon deposit their spawn in flooded areas then the eggs will be lost when the river goes down. Some eggs may be swept away by the swift current.

Mr. Fox stressed all salmon who have spawned will die, as is the case every year regardless of flood conditions.

He said, "I don't know about any alarming losses of fish and we check the river every day."

Referring to a large log jam a few miles east of Lake Cowichan, Mr. Fox noted the jam has been there for a number of years and it is unlikely it will be washed out.

President of the Cowichan Fish and Game Association Arnie Williams confirmed Mr. Fox's statement about the log jam.

He said, "The jam has been there for many years."

Blood Overflows in Clinic

Blood clinic chairman Mrs. David Peachey said, "It was a very wonderful response.

"I would like to express my gratitude to those people who had to stand in line and wait.

"There was nothing we could do about it."

Mrs. Peachey said a special trophy for giving the largest amount of blood per capita went to the Duncan Soroptimist Club, with the RCMP detachment as close runner-up and the Duncan Kiwanis Ambulance Society third.

Control Could Cost $1,000,000

By KLAUS MUENTER

DUNCAN — While the raging Cowichan and Koksilah rivers play havoc with settled communities, Cowichan Indians and local government officials wonder how abstract a government can become.

The failure to realize a proposed flood control scheme, which would have eased and perhaps completely alleviated the annual flood threat to people and property, resulted in three major setbacks.

According to C. A. P. Murison, chairman of the now-dormant Cowichan-Koksilah Rivers Flood Control Committee, the execution of the scheme would now cost close to $1,000,000, an engineering survey would have to be repeated because conditions have changed, and the flooding still threatens lives and valuable farm land.

COST JUMP

Mr. Murison said the disastrous flood of 1961 inundated not only large acres of farmland but also parts of the city of Duncan and the North Cowichan municipality.

To realize the plan outlined by federal engineers in 1958 would have cost $450,000.

Saturday Mr. Murison remarked the cost now would be approaching $1,000,000.

"It is the price of neglect and delay," he said.

MANY SIDES

He said the flood commitee formed several years ago consisted of local government representatives, officials from the Indian Affairs Branch, the federal fisheries department, two large companies and senior government observers.

Some years ago Mr. Murison warned if no action was taken the floods would recur.

COMMON MATTER

Saturday he noted, "The flood problem is no longer a problem of local governments but has become a matter for the federal and the provincial governments."

Mr. Murison said the detailed report was submitted to the provincial government in May 1961, but no action was taken.

He said the city of Duncan and the North Cowichan municipality were forced to carry out flood control work to protect their residents.

'FAILURE'

"The situation today has been caused by the failure of the two senior governments to get together to solve the problem," he said.

"Local governments have been compelled to do the wrong thing.

"Flood control work on a local level is unsound and yet they had no other choice."

Mayor Jack Dobson said, "We would be in favor of co-operation with any group or interested agency to try to solve the problem.

INVESTIGATING

He referred to an earlier proposal to allow the lake to discharge high water towards the west coast via Nitinat Lake.

Mr. Murison said earlier this solution would be possible but it was found too expensive.

FREQUENT FLOODS

The mayor, who was born in Duncan, said he can remember annual floods in Cowichan Valley since he was a small boy.

He said following the severe flood here almost six years ago the city council amended the building bylaw and floor levels in houses in the low-lying areas of Duncan had to be raised.

EVERY YEAR

He said, "Every year we have allotted money to carry out river flood control work but we never did any work in the river without notifying the other two parties," (North Cowichan and Indian department).

Chief of the Cowichan Indian Band Dennis Alphouse also suggested the resubmission of the flood control committee brief to the senior governments.

He said the urgent problem can only be solved on a large scale.

Yacht Club's 'Harbor' Will Be Block Long

By ARNOLD OLSON

NANAIMO — A dream of years is coming to fruition. A parking lot, one block long and 210 feet deep, that will accommodate more than 100 cars, is being built.

The Nanaimo Yacht Club has been conducting its campaign of expansion and improvement since 1962, when the project was first conceived.

In April, the club began with attempts to reclaim soil by dredging but was stopped by the discovery of hard pan.

HELD UP

The project was held up for several months until impatience set in and volunteers showed up.

Ten trucks, two front end loaders and men to operate the equipment started in on this two-day project to build the lot from the sea up.

There will be 3,000 yards of fill used, which will raise the area over 10 feet, well out of reach of the sea water.

SAILBOATS

Parking for sailboats (dry storage) and an area for scraping and painting of boats also will be incorporated into the area.

The women must not be forgotten, as some of the fill will be purchased, although most of it is through the generosity of the Nanaimo Harbor Commission.

Some $1,900 has been raised by the ladies for this project through their dances and rummage sales.

WELL PLANNED

The whole project was well planned from the beginning, with a bond drive that met immediate success and accumulated $50,000.

The club's debenture bonds were for $250, open to the members and close friends of members.

The banks were contacted and an agreement made to ensure successful time payment on the bonds.

TWO YEARS

Over the past two years, club committees, were headed by commodores Frank Cowie and Stan Wardill.

Perhaps one reason for the success of the club is that it is not filled with the snobbery one usually attributes to a yacht club.

There are doctors, lawyers, firemen and 11-year-olds as members.

Members do not even need a boat to join.

Of course, it is expected that members will own one shortly, but it is not a vital concern.

What is of concern is safety.

There are several courses for members started this year.

This determined, hard-working attitude explains why membership has almost doubled in the past year, resulting in a total of more than 250 members.

Partial Hospital Approval

Pensioners' Celebration Cheered by Good News

By MARY TAYLOR

PORT ALBERNI — Dr. Howard MacDiarmid, MLA, was a little late for the old age pensioner Christmas banquet Thursday evening in Port Alberni Legion Hall, but the good news he brought made him as welcome as Santa Claus.

Dr. MacDiarmid was among the honored guests of the OAP group who gathered 175 strong for the annual affair, which surely must be among the most pleasant of all the Christmas functions public officials are asked to attend.

OF INTEREST

"I can say, apropos of the chronic hospital, which is of interest to so many here, that this has been partially approved," said the MLA, who had just returned from a trip to Victoria.

"There is no doubt it will go ahead. There may have to be some small revisions, but I hope even these will go back in again. And I will certainly do my best to help achieve it as soon as possible," promised Dr. MacDiarmid.

HEAD TABLE

Also seated at the head table were Mayor and Mrs. Les Hammer of Port Alberni, Mayor and Mrs. Fred Bishop of Alberni, Reverend and Mrs. George Affleck of the United Church, Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Russell and Mrs. Ann Damery, president of the pensioners' group.

Among those honored with rousing applause were two of the active members over 90 years of age, Arthur Currie and Mrs. Elizabeth Gurney, and more than eight who are over 80.

Escorted to the microphone by Mayor Hammer for the presentation of special awards for service to the pensioners throughout the year were Mrs. Florence Cameron and Mrs. Katheleen Pickles.

Mrs. Cameron, who plays the piano as vigorously and well as a woman half her 88 years, has been the association pianist since its inception. Mrs. Pickles has been secretary for several years.

ALL THANKED

Thanks were also tendered to the ladies of the Eagles Lodge and to the Lions Club, who assist the pensioners throughout the year as well as to the Salvation Army and the superintendent of social welfare who are always on hand in case of need, and to the representation of the Somass Mill Welfare Fund.

There's a very touching little ceremony now carried out traditionally at this old age pensioners' banquet. After the dinner has been served, each guest receives a slice of Christmas cake topped with a small candle.

CANDLE GLOW

With the lights dimmed and a candle glowing cheerfully before each guest, the old traditional carols take on significance anew. There's something very durable about the spirit of Christmas evoked by the mingled voices of a group of cheery older people, who have proved pretty durable themselves.

The lively Rhythm Gals, beating bongos made of bleach bottles, also gave everyone a chance to join in on old favorites. The foursome was made up of Mrs. Grace Taylor, a charter member who is over 80, Mrs. Rusty West, Mrs. Ann Damery and Mrs. T. T. Saunders.

Highlight of the evening was a showing of slides by Mayor Hammer of a trip made last year to Eastern Canada. For more than half an hour, the mayor took the pensioners on a fascinating trip to old and new sites of interest in Ottawa, Montreal and Newfoundland.

Long-time active member Rusty West emceed the entire program.

And as always, as the Valley's senior citizens hurried into coats and searched for umbrellas before filing into the buses provided to transport them home, you could hear the theme repeated, "This has been the best Christmas banquet we've had yet."

Hub City Docks Booming

Things are booming in Nanaimo harbor these days. Three ships are loading at Nanaimo Harbor Commission assembly wharf; work is beginning on addition to small-boat harbor; crane and piledriver are seen at right; and generally it appears to be a busy scene, as befits Hub City. — (Agnes Flett).

Campaign Appealed

NANAIMO — The United Appeal just didn't make it here. Its 1966 campaign ended Friday, $1,800 short of its $70,000 objective.

However, campaign chairman Glen Phillips said he is hopeful the goal will be reached before the books are closed in January, appealing to all.

Club Undaunted By Water Path

NANAIMO — The Gabriola Sandstoners Car Club hasn't got a clubhouse yet, so the members float from place to place.

For example, several meetings have been held on the car ferry which takes students to and from school in Nanaimo, three miles from Gabriola Island.

The club was formed after worried Gabriola residents got together Dec. 1 to consider action they might take to combat a teen-age drinking and driving problem. Two youths died Nov. 4 in a car accident after a teen-age drinking party.

The idea for a car club was raised by two members of the Dukes Car Club of Nanaimo, Bob Lowe and Jim Burns, who said their club has provided a good alternative to youthful trouble-making.

★ ★ ★

Island resident D. E. Williams, who is doing public relations work for the club, said the Sandstoners have attracted about 20 members with more planning to join.

Assault Fine $1,500

CAMPBELL RIVER — A youth who was fined $1,500 for three counts of bodily assault, is awaiting trial on a more serious charge.

Ronald Goodman, 19, Campbell River, was ordered to pay the fines when he appeared in magistrate's court.

The charge follows a car accident in which Gerry Reid, 18, died Sept. 25.

Goodman was fined $250 or three months on each of two common assault charges, and $1,000 or two years on a charge of assault causing bodily harm.

Island-Wide Project — On Forbidden Plateau

No. 41 Key for Zooming Crowd

PORT ALBERNI — If you've longed to zoom down snowy mountainsides or soar like an eagle from a steep hillside, it won't take a lot of money to make your dream come true.

★ ★ ★

The parks and recreation commission of the Alberni Valley has worked out a package plan for would-be skiers that should send 41 lucky people out on a quest for skis and mittens in a hurry.

In co-operation with groups from Courtenay, Comox, Victoria and other Island spots, a plan has been evolved to provide weekly Sunday ski lessons at Beautiful Forbidden Plateau, for an eight-week course.

In addition to lessons, the participants will also have the use of the ski-tow, and several hours of additional practice skiing each Sunday.

There's just one catch. Forty-one must register before the bus and other arrangements can be contracted for. A trial run last year proved highly successful and those who joined in came back highly enthusiastic.

The course, starting Jan. 8, will provide early morning transportation to Courtenay each Sunday where prospective snow-bunnies will transfer to another bus for the long pull up to Forbidden Plateau.

Once there, they'll have a 1½-hour lesson with professional skiers, and the use of the ski-tow for the rest of the day till 4 p.m., when they'll board the bus again, arriving back about 7:30 p.m. in the Albernis.

There's a coffee counter and lounge at Forbidden Plateau, but those who prefer to do so may take their own snack and thermos bottles and munch a lunch in the waiting bus.

The eight-week program costs $48.80 for adults and $46 for juniors, and includes all transportation to the ski slopes.

Many registrations have already been received, Dunc Russell, recreation director for the Alberni Valley reported, but there's still space for some more if the 41 member group required is to make the deadline. Family groups are warmly welcomed.

Booming Baby-Sitting Boasts Double Rules

By KITTE TURMELL

Baby-sitting is now a big part of a billion dollar business. That's the value that's put on child care in the home.

And nearly half of all young girls depend on it for their income, with about 60 per cent sitting at least once a week.

This means competition is keener, and more is expected of a sitter.

TALK TO PARENTS

A sitter should talk to the parents. Actress Roxanne Arlen has some good suggestions here. She's the wife of Julian Snyder and mother of their daughter, Hillary Susan, age 15 months.

"Talk to the parents and get acquainted with the child before you're left alone together," she told me. "Then you'll know that when the child says 'Ah-ha,' he wants a drink of water, or a toy, or his Mama.

"Know where to phone parents, neighbor, police or fire departments — and keep the list handy for each visit. Know how to take a temperature if you suspect a child has a fever but want to be sure before you call the parents. Treat the child as an individual and get him and his parents to trust you."

* * *

But baby-sitters have their requirements, too. Here's a six-point code for fair play, drafted by six baby-sitters. Parents should:

- Pay the amount promised.
- Call a sitter at least a day in advance, except in emergencies.
- Notify her if the TV is out of order, so she can bring a book.
- Not bring in the neighbor's children.
- Pay time and a half for afternoon sitting — when it's harder to supervise children — and also for all hours after midnight.
- Not treat her as a servant who must do housework, too.

Pointers for baby-sitting include:

- Arrive in time to make friends with the children before the parents leave.
- Remain in the house and stay awake until the parents return.
- Check on the children hourly after they fall asleep.
- Keep all outside doors locked and don't let anyone except the parents in.
- If parents can't drive you home, arrange for your parents to pick you up.
- Accept jobs on week nights only if parents will be home at reasonable hour (10:30 p.m.).
- On very late weekend nights, spend the night.

For help on getting started in child-care, send your self-addressed, stamped envelope for Kitte Turmell's new leaflet, "Teen Guide For Smart Baby-Sitting," care of this newspaper.

The Week in Records

Christmas List: Best in One LP

By MARY LEE BURROWS

Dear Santa: The record I want most for Christmas is an LP with the top 12 tunes of the year as recorded by the individuals and groups that made them popular. I think even you will have difficulty delivering that, Santa!

* * *

If you fans of Snoopy vs. the Red Baron want to know how Snoopy is faring you'd better listen to your radios. The chances of the record reaching Victoria before you read this are slim.

The Expo '67 promoters are amongst the All-American Big spenders. I don't know what they have offered the Beatles to appear there, but I do know that the fab four have been offered $500,000 for only two back-to-back appearances in Shea Stadium, New York. The Beatles are known to have turned down $165,000 for one appearance.

The New York promoter expects to lose $100,000 on the deal but thinks it will be a "rich" experience. I wonder how "rich" the Expo promoters are willing to get for experience.

Up 'n Comers: If Snoopy doesn't get the Red Baron in a sharp climb he should come out on top of I'm a Believer before Christmas. Games that Lovers Play by Eddie Fisher and Try a Little Tenderness by Ottis Redding might make it soon.

Certain to be the most played song this week is Adeste Fidelis.

Tot Says It in Song For Christmas Blast

MILWAUKEE (AP)—Kathleen Thews said her kindergarten class at Washington elementary school was singing Tannenbaum, O Tannenbaum while rehearsing a Christmas play but a six-year-old boy had his own version which he delivered lustily: "Atomic bomb, O atomic bomb."

"And he really thought he was right," Miss Thews said.

Kitte Turmell's Letters

Make Cousins Welcome

"Dear Kitte Turmell: If your parents are giving a family holiday dinner, including some younger cousins you rarely see, how long should you stay around to entertain them after dinner? — Jim"

Dear Jim: At least an hour. If you're going to see friends or to a hang-out for teen-agers where they'd fit in, consider inviting cousins to go, too. Then you can get better acquainted while your parents and theirs have some talk-time of their own.

* * *

Confidential to "Teen Mother" —All you "owe" to friends and neighbors who give holiday presents to your child is a warm "Thank You." The smile of a child, happy to receive a present, is reward enough and you are not expected to give anything in return except some show of appreciation.

* * *

"Dear Kitte: I like this boy but he doesn't seem to be interested. Last summer I met him and then he began to call me. After a while, he stopped calling me.

"Whenever I see him he acts friendly and may call me the next day. But after that I won't hear from him anymore.

"Should I tell him I like him? Or should I let him make the first move in telling me he doesn't like me. — 'Shook-Up' "

Dear "Shook-Up": Don't be. Tranquilize your worries with the reminder that most boys have their minds on many things—school, part-time work, hobbies, cars, sports, etc.

Assume he likes you. Show, by friendly interest whenever you meet, that you like him. But don't overdo the attentions until he shows more special interest in you on a dependable basis.

"Dear Kitte Turmell: "I have a crush on a 16-year-old boy. I believe that he likes me too, because he gave me his tie the other night, when we were at a dance. I was wondering what I should do. Would it be all right to call him? — Chris"

Dear "Chris": Wait to hear from him, or see him at the next dance or party. As time goes on, if you have no opportunity to see him, or talk by phone when he calls you, invite him to a girl-bid dance or home-party. Don't reveal to him or others that you have a "crush" or you'll embarrass him. Just be friendly, and don't overdo the show of romantic interest.

9 IN MEMORIAM

JOHNSTONE—In loving memory of Charlotte Clarke Johnstone, who passed away Dec. 19, 1965.
Loving and kind in all her ways,
Upright and just to the end of her days;
Sincere and true in her heart and mind,
Beautiful memories she left behind.
—Her family.

HARKNESS — In loving memory of Tom Harkness, passed away Dec. 19, 1965.
There is someone who misses you sadly,
And finds the time long since you went;
There is someone who thinks of you always
And tries to be brave and content.
Gone is the face we loved so dear,
Silent the voice we loved to hear.
'Tis sad, but true, we wonder why,
The best are always the first to die.
—Remembered by his loving wife Cassie and nephews Max and Nick, their wives and families.

MacBRIDE—Another year has come. Ever remembered by their only sister, Rena; five brothers, Malcolm, Archie, Kenneth, Colin and Keith MacBride. All had tragic ends doing their duty. Read the 91st Psalm.

MACDONALD — In loving memory of A. Macdonald, passed away Dec. 19, 1965.
His charming ways and smiling face
Are a pleasure to recall.
He had a kindly word for each,
And died beloved by all.

Diplomats' Belief

Crisis in Rhodesia Off Until March

By IVAN ZVERINA

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — The Rhodesian crisis has not been solved by the latest Security Council sanctions and will come back before the United Nations "with a vengeance" next March, diplomats predicted Saturday.

Secretary General Thant will have to report in March on the mandatory sanctions imposed on the white-dominated rebel British colony in Friday night's council vote.

Diplomats agreed Thant will have little to report on except a certain economic inconvenience on the Salisbury regime that will make it even hard to deal with the white settlers entrenched there.

ONLY COMPULSION

The diplomat making the March prediction was not one of the Africans who have been claiming ever since Rhodesia's unilateral declaration of independence from Britain in November, 1965, that nothing would work short of compulsory sanctions including South Africa and Portuguese African territories, or even use of force.

"The white Rhodesians are tough, much tougher than you think," he added. "Do you seriously believe that the sanctions imposed last night will make them change their mind? They will harden their positions, that's all."

The European diplomat, who has spent some time in Africa, said the Rhodesian white settlers cannot be compared to any other British colonists.

"In Kenya, at the height of Mau Mau terrorism, there were tough British men fighting for their lives but there were the 'officer class,' the Rhodesian settlers are the NCO's."

Other diplomats, including Africans, raised the obvious point of South African and Portuguese non-compliance with the sanctions ordered Friday on such currency-earning Rhodesian exports as tobacco, sugar, chrome and asbestos, but particularly with the non-compulsory sanctions on shipments of oil to Rhodesia.

"What will Thant, what will the UN, do next March after they learn that oil has been shipped into Rhodesia through South Africa and Portuguese Mozambique, sanctions or no sanctions?" one African asked.

TWO PROPOSITIONS

One answer, which was almost out of the realm of the possible for the UN, would be to launch a military enforcement action.

Another equally tenuous proposition would be to force Britain to use its navy to blockade South African ports. Britain is on the record as unwilling to do anything like that because it would set back its economy tremendously.

Yet, many observers here agreed that officially Britain had justification in being jubilant to a degree over the council vote. They said it was a sea of approval for the British request for selective sanctions as well as proof that Britain cannot, at the moment, be pushed.

REAL DILEMMA

The Labor government can point to a record of initiating measures which will certainly prevent serious critics from charging that it has done nothing.

The real dilemma Prime Minister Wilson's government will face will be when the time comes to show what these measures have done at considerable cost to the British economy.

"In the end Wilson will not be able to escape answering a very pointed question," one diplomat said. "The question will be: Why, after all this sacrifice by the British taxpayer, haven't we been able to bring down the Rhodesian rebel regime?"

RESUME DIALOGUE?

Another aspect of the problem is that many diplomats here expect Britain to resume, sooner or later, some dialogue with Salisbury on what one of them termed a "settlement out of court."

The British got a green light on such a course when the council Friday night rejected an African demand for a categorical assurance by Britain that it would not settle for anything less than majority rule in the colony.

Wake Stop Was a Gas

Bob Hope Travels Between Bookends

Hope arrived just 15 minutes after evangelist Billy Graham had departed for Tokyo. The clergyman also is visiting troops in Vietnam over the holidays.

Hope told an audience of 1,500 in the airport waiting room that he understood Francis Cardinal Spellman was one day behind him.

"With Billy Graham just ahead of me and Cardinal Spellman just behind me, that's the kind of bookends I like on a trip like this," he said.

Hope introduced Gen. Emmett (Rosie) O'Donnell, president of the USO, who is traveling with the troupe, to the mixed audience of civilians and servicemen on what he termed "his favorite sandspit."

O'Donnell told the crowd he was glad to return to Wake since he was the first pilot to land there Sept. 5, 1941.

Hope then introduced the remainder of his cast, including Vic Damone, Phyllis Diller, Joey Heatherton, Anita Bryant, Miss World Reita Farns, Diane Shelton, The Korean Kittens and Les Brown and his orchestra.

The Hope troupe's itinerary will include Thailand, Guam, The Philippines and Vietnam.

There's No Fuel Like Old Fuel

Manitoba

There'll be a hot time in Bowsman New Year's Eve. A spanking new water and sewage system was completed last week and the townspeople plan a monumental bonfire fuelled by more than 50 outhouses that have outlived their usefulness.

About 100 homes have been hooked up to the new system in this farming and lumbering town about 120 miles northwest of Dauphin.

Jack Ruby

Healing And Resting

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — Jack Ruby, suffering from widespread cancer, is healing well from a limited exploratory incision performed after he went from his jail cell to a hospital Dec. 9.

A hospital bulletin said Saturday that Ruby, who killed Lee Harvey Oswald, was resting comfortably.

LYMPH SYSTEM

Surgeons first found cancer by discovering a tumor in Ruby's neck in a nodule in his lymph system.

Other tests indicated that the malignancy was widespread, with one lung a major point of suspicion as the centre of the disease. The pancreas is another point of suspicion, but doctors said it would be useless to pinpoint the source of the cancer at this time.

Doctors reported Ruby resting comfortably at Parkland Hospital, where he was guarded constantly by a deputy sheriff in his room and another outside the door.

WICHITA FALLS

Ruby was sentenced to death in 1964 for the murder, but an appeals court Oct. 5 ordered a new trial because of inadmissible evidence and ordered the trial held outside Dallas. Wichital Falls had been selected for the second hearing.

Ruby, 55, is being treated with a chemical. Doctors said the cancer was so widespread they could not resort to surgery and that the particular type of cancer cell in Ruby did not respond to radiation therapy.

Dishwasher-Husband Can Get Separation

MILAN (Reuters) — Making a husband wash the dishes and do other housework constituted a "grave insult" and can be a legal ground for separation, a Milan court ruled Saturday.

The court granted a 45-year-old man's request for separation from his wife, finding her the guilty party. He said she made him do the chores because chores "did not become her status as a college graduate."

There is no divorce in Italy. The couple's names were not disclosed.

Kidnap Case

Mother Arrested Detectives, Too

UNION CITY, Calif. (UPI) — A statuesque mother of four is facing charges that she supplied about two dozen youngsters with sex, liquor and glue-sniffing.

"I've done shameful things with children, but I like to have kids around," she was quoted as saying. "I get a thrill out of them."

Police detective Charles Foster said the house had been placed under surveillance two months ago after reports were made of wild parties there.

Since summer vacation, Foster said, Mrs. Mack had been supplying liquor, glue for sniffing, and pep pills for the youngsters. She also was charged with "sexual misconduct."

He said the activities took place largely on weekends when her husband, Lester, 43, took their children to visit relatives in the Sacramento area. They also occurred sometimes during the day when her husband was at work.

Foster said Mrs. Mack had sexual relations with several teen-age boys. He said there were also reports of sex between the teen-agers.

She was charged with two felony counts of contributing to the delinquency of minors.

U.S. Smasher May Tell

Are Quarks There?

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new atom smasher proposed by the U.S. government may hold the key to whether science can ultimatley hope to tap a hypothetical source of energy vastly more powerful than that loosed by hydrogen bombs.

Such a titanic force could come from still-undiscovered — but theorized-sub-nuclear particles called "quarks."

Some physicists believe such particles exist within the nuclei of atoms and constitute the long-sought basic building stones of all matter in the universe.

Indeed, these physicists say, the hypothetical quarks may even be the keystones to the basic forces of nature, such as gravity.

They long have said the possible existence of this particle is a prime reason why the U.S. should build its proposed $375,000,000 atom smasher. Weston, Ill., was selected Friday as site of the device.

The Atomic Energy Commission has neither confirmed nor denied its huge machine might settle once and for all whether quarks exist. But its scientists have indicated repeatedly a machine of such energy would for an indefinie time offer science its most powerful tool for tapping the secrets of matter.

Yesterday's Pioneers Are Today's Fliers

By VIVIENNE CHADWICK

Except when some of its members play their part in dramatic and often dangerous rescue work, one doesn't hear a great deal about the Victoria Flying Club.

Today, however, this is a flourishing organization, run by a very efficient manager and his staff of instructors, plus an engineer. The membership has recently passed the 300 mark, and the club has half a dozen planes of its own.

Every once in a while, moreover, these fliers quietly make a contribution to society of a wholly charitable nature . . . the children from Sevenoaks Centre are given an afternoon of free rides—plus refreshments—or a group of Air Force veterans are guests on an outing to the Boeing plant in Seattle.

Some time ago the organization took over the old TCA Patricia Bay hangar and remodelled it. The area previously used as a bus terminal now houses the club's planes, and those privately owned, while the former ticket offices and waiting rooms are comfortable clubrooms.

Much of this new growth and generally improved status has come about within the last 12 months or so, and for this considerable credit must go to Mrs. Claude Butler, of 5050 Lochside Drive, who, says the local chartered accountant who audits the club's books, has a gift for reorganization and a very special ability for maintaining harmony in any group with which she works. Because her husband was a member, a former president of the Flying Club, and on the board of directors, Jean Butler gave her services for many months, and much of the smoothness with which the office machinery now functions is due to her efforts.

The Butlers themselves, a very large family indeed by now, are among the best known of the Island's pioneers. Over the years they have been teachers, loggers, singers, soldiers, fliers and many other things. The first of their line to reach these shores was Capt. George Stephen Butler, a veteran of the Crimean War, who came round the Horn, crossed the Isthmus of Panama on foot, and made his way north to arrive here in 1862.

He went on to the goldfields, slaved there for six years, and then sent home to the Old Country for the young woman to whom he was engaged.

In years to come, Fanny Butler, musician, was to become particularly well-known for her little piano, without which no pioneer party was a success, and which was accordingly transported here and there, wherever there was a beanfeast, by horse and wagon.

Exactly 100 years after the captain's arrival, 175 of his descendants gathered to celebrate their family centennial, and because their forbear had been the first secretary of the newly formed Saanich Agricultural Society, the party was held in the Saanichton Agricultural Hall. There was a tremendous cake, decorated with more than 100 centennial dollars, and after this had been cut by the two oldest ladies present, Aunt Gladys and Aunt May, daughters of Capt. George and Fanny, the coins were stamped with the initial B, and divided among the family as souvenirs.

Of the four brothers, Claude, Eric, Tom and Wally, who comprise the well-known local firm, Claude is perhaps the most interested in flying as a hobby. He developed this, says his wife, about 20 years ago, and because at that time the cost of flying lessons was something of a financial strain, he met expenses by organizing a small band to play at dances, with himself as pianist. Another Butler, cousin Vincent, was also a member of this group.

CLAUDE BUTLER
. . . helped Victoria Flying Club grow.

Several of the local licensed pilots have contributed a good deal toward the progress of aviation here by establishing airstrips on the Island which of course can be used as emergency landing fields. Frank and Norman Copley built the one at Carey and Wilkinson Roads in 1952, which Claude Butler opened officially by landing his Cessna there as its first visitor. A few years later he and Joe Howroyd, another well-known local flier, set up a second strip in Central Saanich, near Keating Cross Road. Last year, learning that the Jaycees of Duncan were having difficulty in carrying out plans for their own field, Claude stepped in and donated the necessary land, some two miles from the up-Island town.

It is in connection with emergency rescue work, however, that the public, the Air-Sea Rescue officials, and certainly the victims of any current disaster, most appreciate the services of the local pilots. There have been many instances in which these men have literally saved the day. Just this last February, it will be remembered, a young boatman, off to explore Little D'Arcy Island, near Sidney, was caught in a sudden high wind, dashed onto the rocks, and his boat battered to pieces before his eyes. He was marooned. When he was reported missing, Butler and Howroyd both took off from their Keating strip to make a search.

Said Claude to his wife, "I'll be back for lunch."

"You take something with you," she replied. "I don't like you going off with no food."

So she made him a package of cheese sandwiches. Claude spotted the stranded mariner on his little spray-soaked island — and dropped him the sandwiches! It was the first food the boy had had for nearly three days.

Butler is one of those with a sixth sense when it comes to hunting for people in trouble. He it was who, with his observer, Lorne Merrett, spotted the wrecked truck in which local meat dealer Frank McGrath and his friend Derrick Belcher had crashed to the bottom of the Fraser River canyon. This search had been complicated by the fact that a road bulldozer had been along after the accident and had smoothed out all traces of the fatal skid.

Once, on a search, Jean Butler went along as observer for her husband. This was the occasion on which a plane with four young men aboard ran into dense fog at the coast, crashed near Banfield, and burst into flame. Luckily, all four survived, but that disaster had in the air practically every available aircraft in the vicinity, of which eight were from the Flying Club. Pilots Mike Sealey and Ken Barlow were up in their private planes, with their observers, local helicopter man Bob Taylor was on the job as well, plus a second helicopter from Vancouver, and a couple of RCAF Albatrosses. It was one of the latter which eventually spotted a single crash victim who, barefooted, had hiked out from the demolished plane to fetch help for his injured companions.

Today Jean Butler flies with Claude in his Cessna purely for pleasure. On their holidays they cruise on short hops among the Gulf Islands, landing wherever there is a strip. A friend owns Hudson's

Possibly some of my kind readers will feel the characters have a sort of Horatio Alger tinge about them. The fact that the times permitted a fairly wide development of business to those who had the intestinal fortitude to take a chance may be prominent in the gentlemen we have discussed.

Certainly it is true of the next visit we make for here is a truly adventurous man, one who took his chances, succeeded and then settled to the development of what has been proven to be a very long-established business.

MAIN STREET VICTORIA 1908

AINSLIE J. HELMCKEN

IT ALL GOES UP IN SMOKE

The name E. A. Morris is practically a household word in Victoria. I'm sure there are some of you who will still remember this gentleman.

Before establishing the tobacco business he had already had an exciting career. First he prospected throughout the province and this experience demonstrated to him the opportunity to manufacture and sell explosives to the miners. He set up a factory for the manufacture of blasting powder right in the heart of the Fraser River mining excitement and later started another plant at Cadboro Bay near Victoria. The latter could possibly be the forerunner of the Giant Powder plant at Ten Mile Point.

In 1892 he opened the tobacco business here but when the Klondike rush started he transferred his wholesale business to Vancouver. Thereafter he divided his time between the two businesses.

One remembers the excitement in Victoria when the results of sweepstakes were posted in Morris' shop. Oh yes! The law then considered the people to be sufficiently adult to be allowed to purchase sweepstakes tickets. And nearly everyone did too! And I do mean everyone.

Through the kindness of Walter Hitchcox, manager of the local Morris' store and a Morris employee for 50 years, I was given access to some of the old records of the firm. The first was an account book of 1896 to 1899 and the entries read like a Who's Who in Victoria with some who were a little bit more Who than others. As his business had only been established in 1892 he must have given excellent service and handled the finest lines to have attracted such custom. He dealt in both wholesale and retail accounts.

The names show that people from all over the province ordered from Morris. Such names as George Cunningham, Skeena River; T. R. Young, Alexis Creek; Vernon E. R. Ardagh, Skeena River; Walter Langley, Ashcroft; Mrs. R. Borland, 150 Mile House; Russel & Thurman Nelson; Capt. Edward Barkley, Westholme (after whose family Barkley Sound was named); J. E. V. Carpenter, Edmonton, Alta.

As a supplier to the Royal Navy ships at Esquimalt his goods must have been of superior quality. Some of the ships named in the books, HMS Pheasant, Capt. F. A. Garfortte; HMS Impereuse, Capt. D. A. Stainforth; The Gun Room Mess of HMS Comus, just to name a few. The Hudson's Bay Co., Turner Beeton Co., David Spencer were among some of the many wholesale accounts.

Local accounts have many historical names which will appear in this narrative from time to time. Some other historical names not likely to be found in the social register such as Miss Jenny Morris (no relation to our subject) and Miss Fay Watson, and if you gentlemen readers recall these then you are older than I thought; and if any of the lady readers recognize the names, tch, tch!

The son of the pioneer Helmcken family continues his stroll along Government Street in the year 1908

I was shown a most interesting invoice. How many customers of this day, 1966, have noticed the Mexican Onyx pedestal and electrolier sitting in the middle of the store? It has a pilot light always burning so you can light your cigar. This cost $394.75, and has been in service since before the turn of the century.

That Morris was a progressive businessman is borne out by the following extract dated May 19, 1900, from the archives of the B.C. Hydro. "E. A. Morris, the popular tobacconist, is determined to have his business premises rank second to none, and has just made several important improvements in the interior arrangements and the lighting of his well patronized store, the same now being lighted throughout by electricity (Note: replaced gas). The effect produced by the two magnificent Frink reflectors, backed by 14 smaller electric lights, almost leads one to believe that he has succeeded in turning night into day."

But Mr. Morris was sceptical of the new fad of electric lights and stored his enormous gas mantle fixture against the better day when it could be returned to use. He continued to stock the gas mantles for retail sale and the account book shows that many continued to use gas for illumination.

Before we move on from the Morris business there is one account which has a real historical significance. The Bennett Lake and Klondike Navigation Company purchased heavily from this firm during the Klondike Gold rush. Lake Bennett to the uninitiated is on the border of British Columbia and the Yukon.

Just one more note of real interest. Here is an old picture by Flemming Photographers of the Snugglers Campers at the Gorge in 1892 and here is Mr. Morris, heavily bearded, with his pals. They were all bachelors in those days. I see Mr. Dallain, the father of Mrs. T. A. Brown in the centre of the photo.

Although the name of the company is still used there are no longer any members of the Morris family actively interested in the business. Mrs. Morris and her two daughters own the premises in which the retail stores are operated but that is as far as the family connection goes.

Come to think of it my Uncle Harry Helmcken didn't smoke. Why did he have such a bill for cigars? Oh, of course he was a politician as well.

Island, off Chemainus, so they put down at a field there, and last January they went as far south as Palm Springs.

Jean has no desire to fly herself. "I just go for the fun of it," she says.

Also part of the family menage is Skye, a charming white part poodle, who made the headlines last February when, a very small puppy, he ornamented a civil defence exercise in which some 15 planes cruised the Island dropping food and medical supplies in a simulated earthquake disaster.

Skye himself had no comment to make, either on civil defence or on flying in general.

It has been remarked by some visitors travelling along British Columbia's rugged shore line: "It looks so gloomy!"

Certainly, the miles are lined with forests of evergreen hemlock, spruce, fir and cedar. They rise from rocks forever grey-brown and black. Dark skies frown down for weeks at a time upon a shore so terrifically jagged that, for every mile of coast, there is 10 miles of distance. Yet it is to be doubted if any other region offers more amusing stories of odd human behavior.

COAST TALES
By FRANCIS DICKIE

HUMAN COMEDY Along B.C. Shores

These stories, so close to the rock and forest, are only heard by a person voyaging slowly by gas-boat; by a person dawdling in long aimless conversations in logging camps, on the string-pieces of lonely wharves, or riding on fish-packers, halting at the floathouses of isolated hand-loggers at fish-collecting scows, or visiting missionary launches with thousand square miles of parishes.

In some such manner the writer has gathered during 25 years the things set down here: the human comedy upon the British Columbia coast.

The incidents to follow, by very reason of the region in which they took place, are fragmentary and varied, bits of rock and bush so to speak.

On a certain stump ranch on the Pacific coast at Quadra Island there was a logger's widow who got a meagre living off her few acres amid the rocks. Deer were plentiful in the wooded hills around her. And she had the .30-.30 rifle of her recently deceased husband, without the experience nor the inclination to hunt, yet at the same time longing for fresh meat and meat to can for winter. So she asked a neighboring young hand-logger, noted as a hunter, if he would shoot a deer for her. He said he would be happy to do so, and she handed him her husband's rifle and three cartridges, all that were left unused at the time of his death.

Late that same day the young hunter packed to her door not one deer, but two. After handing back the widow her rifle, the hunter remained standing awkwardly a moment expecting to hear some words of praise or thanks for his effort. Instead, the widow remained in the doorway with somewhat of an expectant waiting in her manner. Finally, the silence growing heavy, the hunter said: "Well, Mrs. I'll be getting along," and turned to depart.

"Just a minute," said the widow in tone faintly reproving; "You've forgotten to give me back the third cartridge."

One British Columbia coast missionary's parish is so large that his visits to each home are months apart. One family operating a one-donkey show was particularly difficult to reach.

In order to see them, the missionary had to leave his large motor vessel anchored some distance away, and go the rest of the journey through narrow, rock-studded channels for several miles in a small boat propelled by an outboard motor. On the missionary's recent regular visit the family of five gathered in the parlor as usual. But at once the head of the family explained: "Since you was here last, Reverend, we've become followers of Father Divine. Now when we want anything, all we have to do is say: "Thank yu Father, and we git it."

The missionary returned to his little boat feeling that, for the time being at least, he had lost this group from his flock; and their possible recovery required careful thought, rather than hasty action. The family accompanied him to the beach.

FATHER WILLIAM DUNCAN

A strong on-shore breeze had sprung up. Pushing off his little boat, the missionary briskly cranked the motor. The engine stalled. The wind drove the boat to shore. The missionary pushed off again, cranking vigorously, without any success in bringing the engine into action. Wind and little waves drove him ashore. Once more the missionary got the boat away from shore and began cranking. All this time the family in unison had kept chorusing: "Say 'thank yu, Father!' when you crank, an' the engine'll start."

In silence the missionary continued cranking the silent engine. Beginning his 20th futile attempt, with the family chorus dinning in his ears, the missionary finally cried in mocking exasperation: "Thank you, Father," and the motor leaped into purring perfect action. As the little boat went bounding away, the missionary accepted with finality he had lost these people forever from his fold.

LOGGER'S HOSPITALITY

There lived on lonely Reade Island two aging loggers, bachelors, who had small farms, commonly known as stump ranches. Their places were a half mile apart. Mr. A. had a small clearing of orchard and garden. He worked his holding by hand. Mr. B. did a little more extensive cultivation, aided by a bony, old white horse. Mr. B. was very careful of the yield from his sparse few acres. When the day's work was done, he turned the poor horse outside the fence to do the best it could on the open country. The forage was so meagre the horse was forced to range far.

For days its owner did not see it. In its desperate search for food the poor white horse several times broke into the fenced ground of Mr. A.

In silence for several years Mr. A. put up with these depredations. At times he even fed the bony animal. Then one day the horse disappeared.

Mr. B. searched the island in vain. During these hunts he found it very convenient on his homeward way to very often arrive about supper time at the house of Mr. A. On each of the many occasions following the loss of the horse, Mr. B. was received with the same unfailing bountiful hospitality. Mr. A. would descend to his basement and come up bearing glass jars of beautifully canned fruit and vegetables, and always a can of meat. In addition to giving Mr. B. a good meal, when Mr. B. departed he was always presented with a glass sealer filled with the home-canned meat, the goodness of which Mr. B. had continually commented upon.

However, when Mr. A. chanced once to return one of these many visits, the meal served him by Mr. B. was scanty, poor in quality. Mr. A. even felt the hospitality was grudgingly extended. A short time after Mr. A. had been received in such manner he related the incident to a friend visiting him from a neighboring island.

The friend cried indignantly: "Imagine that, after you serving him so many nice meals, and giving him so many cans of nice meat."

Mr. A. smiled tolerantly. "Oh, it's all right. You see, I felt I really owed Mr. B. that canned meat. Mr. B. thought it was deer; and he liked it very much. But it was his own white horse I gave him. I got tired of having it break into my garden. I got tired of feeding it myself. Finally I shot it. Mr. B. was so mean, he wouldn't feed it properly, and I really felt the animal would be better out of the way."

Symbolizing the British Columbia coast loggers' philosphy, and their ability to enjoy leisure seldom found today among people of great cities, nothing seems more apropos here than to quote a few lines from what I have named The Rubiayat of Tommy Corbett:

Ye, ho — the simple life at last."

By way of completing this philosophy these lines of mixed Chinook and English: "Oh, hi yu clams and mowitch, an' klootchmen by the way. And niki tiki moosum when the daylight fades away." This is not subject to translation, but will be appreciated by those who know Chinook.

During those grim days of 1932, when the depression was felt worst from long continuation, a group of loggers were gathered in the general store in a little coastal village. Here for months they had come to exchange laments, hear word of workless hours. Most of the time for several

On a certain afternoon in 1932 a dozen of these men idled in the store as usual. Suddenly the telephone bell at the back of the store tinkled. This telephone line, zig-zagged through miles of mountain and forest, connected up little communities scattered on islands and mainland.

The store proprietor, after listening to the message, returned to the front of the store and remarked: "Bill Smith just phoned me that the fellow running the lighthouse of Donely Point has committed suicide."

The long and heavy silence was finally broken by one young fellow in this long jobless group. In voice of almost awed unbelief he gasped: "Think of that — comittin' suicide!!! — him — with a good job, like that!!!

MAN WHO SLEPT ALL WINTER

William Duncan, later named "Father," out of respect, though not a priest, built the first sawmill on the north of British Columbia coast at New Metlakatla 100 years ago.

When an old Indian was told by a fellow tribesman that Father Duncan was going to cut up trees into boards by the power from moving water in the nearby river, the old man exclaimed "If I see that I will die!" He did see it made actual, yet continued to live for many years in a house made of lumber, very much more comfortable than his former home.

Duncan, in addition to his pioneering energy, technical ability, and powerful influence with the Indians in getting them to work in completing his first sawmill which few of them believed was possible, was one of British Columbia's most remarkable men. Layman missionary: after the sawmill, he built a town, acted as director of athletics in a gymnasium he designed, created a brass band conducted by himself, ran a store, started a soap factory, a shipping business with one ship, operated a bank for the Indians, was a magistrate, doctor who saved his converts from smallpox when 6,000 wild tribesmen died, and was preacher and spiritual adviser to 1,000 Indians he converted in the short span of 20 years from savagery to a thriving modern community.

In the year 1857, William Duncan pioneer missionary to the Tsimsyen Indians, arrived at Fort Simpson, on the British Columbia coast. The place was at the time a fortified post, with a Scot named Clark as manager. From this same Clark is supposed to have originated the famous Chinook word Klahowya. It seems the few Indians who were trusted to work within the fort heard manager Clark's few English companions say: "Clark, how are you?" They took it to be his name, but as they could not pronounce the English r, they changed it around to "Klahowya," their version of Clark, how are you. And so into the language was born a new word which is used to this day as a form of greeting along the Pacific coast between whites and Indians.

The manager was a kindly man. He very hospitably put at the disposal of Duncan, a horse, and helped him with suggestions as to dealing with the Indians, who were so fierce and war-like that only two at a time of tribe were allowed within the fort to trade; and the trading time was confined to four hours daily.

The new missionary after a couple of highly dangerous visits to the Indian encampment which surrounded the fort saw how useless was his mission until he learned the language.

Now, in the fort was a young Indian of the rank of chief, who had thrown in his lot with the whites. He had been engaged at the fort for some two years when the missionary arrived, and had a fair command of simple English. He offered to teach Duncan the difficult Indian language. It was a tremendous undertaking because of the utter variance of verbal and thought forms between Tsimsyen and English.

Ka became very fond of Duncan, and became his first convert. But though converted, Ka was fully familiar with the ways and thought processes of his people. He realized the missionary's only chance of success with the new religion was to impress upon the Indians that

BEFORE EXPO VISIT READ ABOUT QUEBEC

The eyes of the world will focus on Quebec next year when Expo 67 opens its gates on an island in the middle of the St. Lawrence River at Montreal.

As well as having all the excitement of a world exposition Expo 67 should go a long way towards alleviating Anglo Saxon — French problems in Canada. Through the millions of visitors expected to visit Quebec there should come a better understanding of the problems and a mutual respect of each other's traditions.

Many Canadians will be stepping on French Canada soil for the first time when they visit Expo 67.

The books Montreal — The Island City of the St. Lawrence and The Many Faces of Quebec have nothing to do with Expo 67, except for a fleeting mention in a chapter on Montreal in The Many Faces of Quebec, but for those planning a visit to Quebec they will be interesting books to read.

MONTREAL, by Kathleen Jenkins; Doubleday; 550 pages; $6.75.

Montreal is the second volume in Doubleday's The Romance of Canadian Cities series, and is a complete history of Canada's largest city, beginning with its founding in 1535 by Cartier and culminating with its modern role as Canada's commercial, financial and industrial centre.

There isn't one word about Expo 67, but if you want to know something about Montreal where the big exposition will be held, you will find the full story in this book.

The Many Faces of Quebec is a magnificent pictorial presentation of Quebec with pictures by free-lance cameraman Marcel Cognac and intimate and affectionate text by Jean-Charles Harvey who has known Quebec all his life and loved its people, its countryside and its cities.

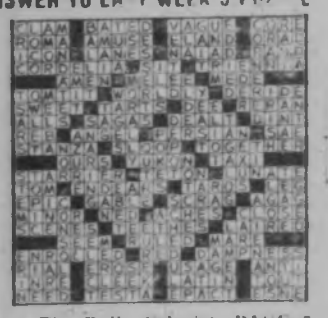
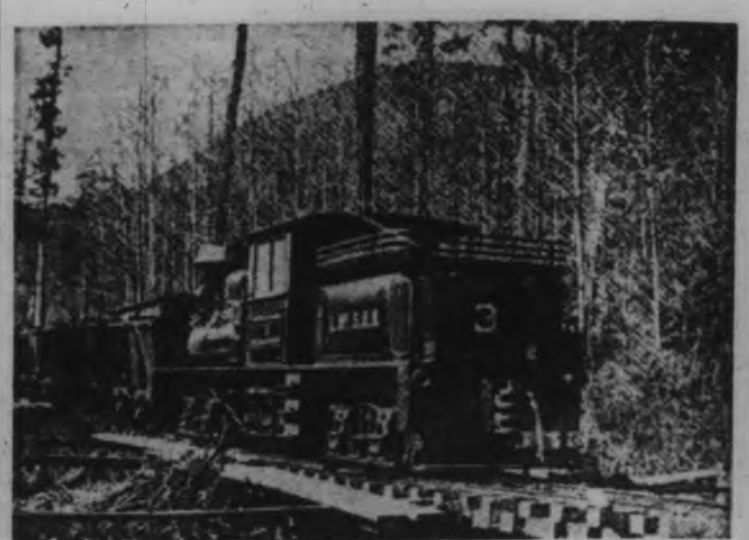
ANSWER TO LAST WEEK'S PUZZLE



LENORA ORE DUMP



BRINGING ORE FROM LENORA MINE

MT. SICKER MINES

FOREST FIRE DISCLOSED $6,000,000 ORE BONANZA

By HARRY GREGSON

Early in 1967 a group of Victoria businessmen will begin operations on Mt. Sicker, nine miles from Duncan, to recover what they believe are valuable copper concentrates left by former claim-owners.

Between staking of the first claim on Mt. Sicker in 1895 and the last activity in 1950 it is estimated that nearly $6,000,000 worth of copper, gold and silver were taken from the mountain.

A new bio-chemical extraction process pioneered in Canada by Professor C. Emery of UBC will be used on abandoned dumps and low grade ores beneath the ground.

It could be that a new chapter will be written in a history already rich in drama as it was in valuable minerals.

In the fall of 1895 three prospectors, F. L. Sullins, T. McKay and Henry Buzzard, located and staked the Alice, Leona, Belle and Gold Queen copper claims on Mt. Sicker. They sank a shaft 22 feet deep at the Leona, but as Christmas was near they left for their homes in Port Townsend.

In Port Townsend McKay fell ill and died. In the spring the two remaining partners, joined by Harry Smith, returned to Mt. Sicker.

F J. Smith, a relative of Harry Smith's, and a member of the firm of Smith and Watson in Glasgow, came out to see the claims and put up $500 for a half-interest in the Leona, Belle and Little Nugget claims. When this money had been spent on devolopment with negative results he became discouraged and returned to his home in Scotland.

It was not until the last day of April, 1897, a full year later that Harry Smith made his great discovery. After spending three weeks alone on the fire-blackened western slope of Mt. Sicker he came across a well-defined copper lead exposed by the fire at the 1,400-foot level and staked his fabulous claim naming it after his daughter, Lenora.

Several hundred feet higher on the mountain he also staked with Henry Buzzard the Tyee claim.

The news travelled fast and the western slope of the 2,300-foot mountain was soon blanketed with claims among them the Richard the Third, Key City, Dunsmuir, Westholme, XL, Queen Bee, Seattle and Copper Canyon.

Harry Smith organized the Lenora-Mt. Sicker Development Company and by the spring of 1898 rapid progress had been made with a 370-foot tunnel into the mountain. The major shareholders appeared to have some doubts as to the final outcome and decided to sell out to a group headed by Henry Croft, a brother-in-law of James Dunsmuir. The company was reorganized with Mr. Croft as manager and chief engineer.

A townsite was laid out northwest of the mine tunnel and by 1899 it contained a general store, small schoolhouse, livery stable and many homesites. A wagon road had been built from Westholme climbing to the rugged northwest flanks of the mountain up through Copper Canyon. Two teams owned by Hubert Kiest were constantly on the road with supplies, while H. Greaves operated a stage connecting with the E and N passenger trains at Westholme Station.

By January, 1900, Lenora was the fourth largest shipper of ore in B.C. It was claimed that no other mining venture in B.C. had developed so large a body of ore at so little cost.

To cope with the output Mr. Croft hired a contractor named Haggerty to build and operate a tramway from Mt. Sicker siding on the E and N. Railway to intersect the wagon road. The tramway went into operation in March, 1900, when there was a mounting pile of 600 tons of ore on the Lenora dump. Haggerty's tramway together with the wagon teams were soon hauling 200 tons a week to the E and N. siding for loading into standard gauge cars to Ladysmith and transhipment in Ss. Thistle to a small smelter on Texada Island.

But still the ore piles mounted up. The only solution was a railroad. The result was the construction of one of the most difficult and hazardous tracks in railroad history. It was six miles long and wound along ravine-scarred slopes with 50 degree curves culminating in an unbelievable 75 degree horseshoe curve on a trestle across Nugget Creek. At one point it dropped 700 feet in less than a mile.

The contractor was Mr. McLellan of Victoria.

A Colonist reporter described the trainride as "somewhat thrilling to those unaccustomed to such trips . . . sometimes the car was at such an angle that a chunk of ore would roll off while the tenderfoot passengers were compelled to sit on the side of this oscillating vehicle with their feet dangling over the precipice."

Most of the ore from the Lenora mine was now being shipped via the Ss. Oscar to a smelter at Tacoma where Mr. Croft had a contract to deliver 25,000 tons of ore. Up to March 23, 1901, the Lenora mine had shipped 11,867 tons to Tacoma and received $175,832 net for them.

Meanwhile Harry Smith, discoverer of the mine, diversified his interests by opening a general store at Duncan's Crossing and from its second floor he published a weekly newspaper, the Duncan Enterprise.

Work went ahead on other claims of which the Tyee attracted most interest. The Tyee Copper Company was formed in London, England, on April 4, 1900, with a capital of £120,000 sterling. Mr. Clermont Livingston, father of Air Marshal Sir Philip Livingston was named general manager.

By the fall of 1901 the Tyee townsite in addition to its post office also had a hotel. The Brenton, a school, a church and a general store. At the peak of mining operations there were about 1,700 people living on Mt. Sicker making it the largest population centre on the Island after Victoria, Nanaimo and Cumberland.

An improvement much welcomed by passengers was a passenger train consisting of two cars, and the Colonist at that time was urging people to visit Mt. Sicker, to enjoy the fresh mountain and the magnificent views and cuisine of John Credon's Mt. Sicker Hotel.

The next move in development was the construction of a smelter at Osborn Bay designed to handle 400 to 500 tons of ore per day. A fair sized village sprang up round the smelter which was named Crofton after Henry Croft, originator of the smelter. About 400 men were employed at the smelter, processing ores from the Lenora mine.

The Tyee Company built its own smelter at Ladysmith, where ore was roasted into a 50 per cent copper matte and forwarded to Tacoma for further refining.

The year 1903 saw the Tyee mine working at full capacity with two miles of underground workings. The sum of $562,890 was realized on 42,000 tons of ore shipped out, but the Lenora mine got into difficulties following a legal dispute and was forced into receivership. The Bank of Montreal took over its assets and appointed J. H. S. Matson as receiver. Houses on Mt. Sicker were for sale at $2 each and the Mt. Sicker Hotel itself could be had for a mere $8. The Crofton smelter was sold to the Britannia Mining and Smelting Company, who used it for smelting Britannia ores.

Tyee continued producing and in 1905 shipped 31,900 tons of ore to the smelter, recovering 2,688,945 pounds of copper, 87,028 ounces of silver and 5,003 ounces of gold for a total value of $525,000.

Atop Mt. Sicker there was little of the wild and woolly times common to many mining camps of that era. About the only violence was the shooting of Joe Bibeau, proprietor of the Hotel Brenton on the Tyee townsite. It all started when Fred Beech, a prospector newly rich from the sale of some claims, found his increasing ardor for a widow in the camp countered with increasing frigidity.

On a calm Sunday morning Fred decided to shoot up the widow. Hearing the shots, Joe Bibeau, a good friend of Fred's, rushed out to calm him but was killed instantly with two shots. The widow, Mrs. Campbell, was hustled to the Mt. Sicker Hotel in protective custody. Curiosity getting the upper hand she looked out of the window to see how the provincial police and trackers were getting on and had her hair literally parted by a well-aimed bullet. She promptly fainted and her ex-suitor, thinking his bullet had found its mark, turned the gun on himself.

The Lenora mine was reactivated under bond to the Vancouver Copper Company in 1907. Ed Stables, the manager, got out about 1,700 tons of ore. One of his ore trains was ambushed by local residents who were angry because railroad right of way monies over their claims had not been

The three largest mines were situated on rising ground, Lenora being the lowest, Tyee above and Richard the Third on top. The two upper mines found drainage a problem. It took 100 cords of wood every 24 hours to operate the pumps and electrical plant to drain the shafts of the two upper mines. If the Lenora tunnel had been extended to the Tyee property the upper levels could have been drained by gravity alone. But Tyee was not out to help its rivals.

A government inspector noted that if all three mines could have worked with one haulage system and one smelter they might have produced economically for years.

Large-scale operations appear to have closed down about 1907. Since then three separate attempts have been made in 1936, 1943 and 1950 to reactivate the mines, but none lasted more than a few months.

Even if only low-grade ores remain beneath the ground . . . and this is not definitely proven . . . advances in mining technology in recent years allow them, in the opinion of the Victoria group, to be processed profitably.

Those interested in the history of Vancouver Island would find the morning's drive to Mount Sicker rewarding. The old tunnels, buildings and rail tracks bear mute testimony to the years when fortunes were made in feverish haste.

Duncan had great powers of magic. In order to convince the Indians that Duncan possessed this power, Ka worked out a scheme of his own. He did not let the missionary know about this, feeling sure the earnest and serious young man would disapprove and forbid.

Ka began visiting the village occasionally. In an offhand manner during casual conversation he mentioned that the white man was a great medicine man of great power. He had gone to sleep for several months, during which time he was visiting in the Happy Hunting Ground where he had gone to learn the Tsimsyen language. When he had learned this from the spirits of dead chiefs he would wake from his sleep and address the people in their own tongue.

Until this time no white man in the region had ever mastered the Indian language sufficiently well to make an address in it. But so hard did Duncan work at learning, and so understanding a teacher was Ka, that with the coming of spring, Duncan was fairly proficient. In order to make good the story that the white man slept, Ka had to arrange it so the missionary never appeared outside his cabin during the few hours when Indians were allowed in to trade. So he always made these hours the time when he taught. In spite of this, he had great difficulty several times in keeping Duncan in, but, by various ruses succeeded, without exciting the young missionary's curiosity or suspicion.

Early in the spring Ka arranged for a great gathering of the people in the chief community house. These were enormous buildings of cedar columns covered with split cedar, and were also dug deep into the ground, so that the people slept on tiers around the single room which in some cases were 60 feet long.

Ka, to whom the missionary had read a great deal of the Bible in the past few months, helped Duncan prepare the first sermon, and managed to make Duncan say: "I have come from a far country," and allude to the passage about "in my father's house are many mansions" and a number of other illusions.

Not realizing what great people the Indians are for imagery, he had no idea that Ka had so skillfully worded the first address, that this imagery actually conveyed to the Indian listeners the story of his visit during the past winter to the world of the dead. The fact that this white man who had come to the land only a little while ago could tell these and other things in their own language paved the way to Duncan winning the entire people to Christianity.

MURIEL WILSON'S Thought for Food

CHRISTMAS HOSPITA

Excitement mounts . . . Everywhere, everywhere Christmas!

Department store Santas are up to their whiskers in children; people jostling each other in the scurry and hurry of last-minute shopping; homes festooned with twinkling lights and glittering Christmas trees in living room windows. Joy and gaiety abound.

With only days to go, housewives find themselves caught up in a pre-holiday frenzy. Of course holiday hustle and bustle are all part of the season's pattern and to be truthful . . . it wouldn't be half as much fun if we were completely organized. Each year we swear that, this year, we will have everything needful done well ahead, but of course, we never do.

Christmas is a season of festive food . . . I suppose we could say it's the "eatingest" time of the year . . . traditional family dinners on Christmas and New Year's; gala breakfasts or brunches after church; midnight suppers and entertaining that ranges from the big Open House or cocktail party with an elaborate buffet, to the morning Koffeeklatsch or fruitcake and eggnog hospitality offered to drop-in callers.

For the past few weeks our Thought For Food has been concerned with the sweet side of Christmas, today our hospitality suggestions will feature savories. It is a wise hostess who keeps her party reputation bright with a "hospitality shelf" well stocked with canned and packaged items ready to make up and serve on a moment's notice.

Cheese is an ideal item to have on hand . . . if you have a variety of cheese in the refrigerator you can make up an attractive cheese tray in minutes. Gouda with its colorful covering makes a fine splash of color. Process cheddar, cream and blue cheese are used for cheese balls. Dips and spreads are so easily put together and what would we do without cheese for those zingy little canapes everyone likes so well. Crackers for dips and spreading come in great and interesting variety . . . be sure and have an assortment on hand.

Packaged dip and spread mixes take the guess out of seasoning. Simply add the variety of your choice to soft cheese or sour cream and there you are. Here is an interesting and tasty spread. . . .

CHEESE AND ONION SPREAD . . . 4 eggs, 2 cups shredded sharp Canadian cheddar cheese, 1 cup mayonnaise, ½ package dehydrated onion soup mix, 1 tsp. dried parsley dehydrated onion soup mix, 1 tsp. dried parsley flakes or 2 tsps. fresh parsley chopped and 2 Tbsp. finely chopped pimiento. Hard cook, shell and mash eggs. Add and mix in cheese. Measure mayonnaise into a bowl, stir in onion soup mix, parsley and pimiento. Add to egg mixture. Combine thoroughly and chill deeply. Allow to come to room temperature before serving. Serve as a spread with crisp crackers or as a dip.

SAVORY PETITS FOURS . . . 8 ozs. soft cream cheese, 1 Tbsp. very finely chopped green onion tops, 1-3 cup crumbled blue cheese, few drops Tabasco, 1 tsp. mayonnaise and a dash of garlic powder (garlic optional) Blend all together well. Use enough mayonnaise so it can be handled. Form into small balls. Roll in paprika or finely crushed cornflakes or finely crushed walnuts or finely chopped fresh parsley. Do some of each. Chill until serving time. To pretty up the snack tray place the little petits four in tiny paper bon bon cups and arrange on tray.

TRI-CHEESE BALL . . . 4 ozs. process cheddar cheese, 4 ozs. cream cheese, 4 ozs. blue cheese, ¼ cup chopped peanuts or crushed potato chips. Let cheese stand at room temperature to soften. Make a ball of process cheese, flatten slightly at one end so it will stand firm on dish. Chill until firm. Beat cream cheese to spreading consistency and spread over ball of process cheese. Chill again and repeat with blue cheese. The blue cheese is a bit crumbly—to make spreadable, mix with little cream. Cover and chill until just before serving, then roll in chopped peanuts or crushed potato chips.

WALNUT HAM SPREAD . . . ⅓ cup mayonnaise, 1 Tbsp. chopped onion, 1 cup cooked, cubed ham, ¼ cup broken walnuts and a few extra walnuts for garnish. This recipe calls for the ingredients to be placed in a blender and buzzed until smooth. Not all of us have blenders but I have found that by chopping the ham, nuts and onion fine before mixing with the mayonnaise it makes a very satisfactory spread. Turn into a bowl and garnish with chopped nuts.

SAVORY SAUSAGE ROLLS . . . 1¾ cups sifted flour, ½ tsp. salt, 1 2-oz. package BAR-B-QUE chip Dip, 2-3 cup shortening and about 6 Tbsp. ice water. And 16 sausages. Mix flour, salt and dip in a bowl. Cut shortening in until it resembles corn meal. Sprinkle ice water, a tablespoon at a time, over the mixture. Toss lightly with a fork until particles cling together (dough should not be sticky). Now is the time to make a list of all the tag ends of things to be done. Cross off each item as it is completed.

HOLIDAY DESSERT . . . place a spoonful of hot mincemeat over each serving of vanilla ice cream. Place a fat red marachino cherry on top.

ONE FOR THE ROAD . . . serve hot spiced tomato juice in mugs. Seasonings . . . seasoned salt, grated onion or onion juice, sweet basil and Tabasco.

MAKE TWO KINDS of stuffing for the turkey . . . use one fore and one aft for variety.

Nothing makes festivities fizzle faster than running out of ice cubes before the party is over. Freeze extras beforehand and store in plastic bags in freezing compartment.

HAPPY ENTERTAINING.

DEAR FOLKS:

How fast time flies! Seems like only a few Sundays ago that we were expecting him. It's hard to believe another year has passed.

Now that Christmas is rolling around again, let's get prepared for it and fill our hearts full of love, tenderness and consideration. Let your living room get a little disordered with those glorious Christmas decorations. You just might find out that it is fun stepping over a few out-of-place things.

There's one sure thing about it: When your house is all in order again after the holidays, you can think back on all the fun you had this coming week.

So the pleasantest of holidays to you. And don't forget there is a new alphabet just published, and it goes A B C D E F G H I J K M N O P Q R S T U V W X Y Z. Know what's wrong with it?

It has NO "L". (Noel)

perature to soften. Make a ball of process cheese, flatten slightly at one end so it will stand firm on dish. Chill until firm. Beat cream cheese to spreading consistency and spread over ball of process cheese. Chill again and repeat with blue cheese. The blue cheese is a bit crumbly—to make spreadable, mix with little cream. Cover and chill until just before serving, then roll in chopped peanuts or crushed potato chips.

WALNUT HAM SPREAD . . . ½ cup mayonnaise, 1 Tbsp. chopped onion, 1 cup cooked, cubed ham, ¼ cup broken walnuts and a few extra walnuts for garnish. This recipe calls for the ingredients to be placed in a blender and buzzed until smooth. Not all of us have blenders but I have found that by chopping the ham, nuts and onion fine before mixing with the mayonnaise it makes a very satisfactory spread. Turn into a bowl and garnish with chopped nuts.

Hot snacks are always popular, most of these can be made ahead, frozen and then reheated before serving.

SAVORY SAUSAGE ROLLS . . . 1½ cups sifted flour, ½ tsp. salt, 1 2-oz. package BAR-B-QUE chip Dip, 2-3 cup shortening and about 6 Tbsp. ice water. And 16 sausages. Mix flour, salt and dip in a bowl. Cut shortening in until it resembles corn meal. Sprinkle ice water, a tablespoon at a time, over the mixture. Toss lightly with a fork until particles cling together (dough should not be sticky). Form dough into a ball and refrigerate until ready to use. Place sausages in cold, lightly greased skillet, cook over medium heat until nicely browned. Drain on absorbent paper and cool a bit. Cut each in half. Preheat oven to 425 deg. F. Roll dough to ⅛-inch thickness and cut into pieces just the size to enclose sausage halves. Shape dough around sausage pieces and pinch ends together to enclose completely. Arrange on ungreased baking sheet and bake for about 15 minutes or until pastry is nicely browned. These freeze well. Will reheat in 15 minutes in 350 deg. F. oven.

Savory BAR-B-QUE Bites can be made in a jiffy with BAR-B-QUE Chip Dip and packaged biscuit mix. Just stir the seasoned mix into the biscuit mix, then prepare the biscuits according to the directions on the biscuit mix package. Pat out on a floured surface and cut with tiny cutter. Bake on greased baking sheet and serve hot with butter and your favorite cheese.

Cheese Crisps are just dandy to serve with holiday beverages. They are crisp and flavorful. They can be made in a jiffy.

CHEESE CRISPS . . . 2 cups shredded cheese, 1 cup sifted all-pourpose flour, 4 Tbsp. butter or margarine and about 4 Tbsp. cold water. Have butter and cheese at room temperature. Blend butter, cheese and flour well, then drip in just enough water to hold together. Roll bits of dough into small balls and arrange on greased baking sheet. With a wet fork flatten as thin as possible. Sprinkle with chili powder and sesame seeds. Instead of sesame seeds I sometimes use slivered blanched almonds. Press nuts lightly into dough with the back of the fork so they will not fall off. Bake in a preheated 375 deg. F. oven for about 10 minutes. This is a sort of two-way recipe. . . . the dough can be used to enclose stuffed green olives. For these, press each olive into a small ball of the dough, pinching the dough up to completely enclose the olive. Bake same as above. I call these "Surprise." These freeze and reheat well.

CANDY'S CANE IDEA

DEAR HELOISE:

My mother is in a convalescent home, and has little space for decorations.

So I wrapped her cane with striped red and white ribbon, and at the beginning of the crook I placed a red and white rosette with a tiny holly corsage. A bit of tape here and there down the cane holds the ribbon in place. "Candy Cane"

SPECIAL XMAS CANDLE

DEAR HELOISE:

While we were overseas, we bought a beautiful, large Christmas candle (with the Nativity scene carved in it) and we lighted it for Christmas dinner only.

It is three years old now and would be more attractive if I could clean it.

Do you have a suggestion?

Connie Pearson

Dear Connie:

Dampen a clean, soft cloth with a little rubbing alcohol and gently rub the candle with it.

I like your idea of using the candle on that one special occasion. It will last for years and bring back so many happy memories, won't it? Heloise

STEADY CANDLES

DEAR HELOISE:

I hold the candle socket of my candelabra under hot running water until the metal gets warm before putting in the candles.

Then, as you press the candle in, it will melt slightly and fit the socket snug as a bug.

If you have a hint, problem or suggestion you'd like to share . . . write to Heloise in care of this newspaper. 12-18

NAIL POLISH SAFETY

DEAR HELOISE,

Cut a hole in the center of a sponge, and set your fingernail polish bottle in the hole. If a spill occurs, the sponge will soak it up. This also works for glue and small paint bottles.

Debbie

Debbie, you are a doll! Not only will the sponge soak up any drips of polish, but there is far less chance of knocking the bottle over when it is standing in the sponge. Heloise

HOMEMADE SOAP DISHES

DEAR HELOISE:

Plastic liquid detergent containers can be cut down with kitchen shears to make ideal soap dishes for the bathroom.

Also, by making the back higher than the front, you can tack them up under the kitchen sink to keep the pot scraper in.

NO SPOTS, NO LINT

DEAR HELOISE:

The nylon sock leaves no lint to be brushed from the cleaned garment, as when using a cloth. Helen E.

LADIES, BE SEATED!

DEAR HELOISE:

Know how hard it is to get all the air out of a plastic bag after an item has been placed inside?

I place the sweater or other garment in the bag, put it on a chair and sit on it. Makes it nice and flat, and it can be stored away neatly. A Reader

A TIP FOR THE TABLE

DEAR HELOISE:

If you own a swivel TV table or chair that is kept against the wall, remove the rubber tips from two door stops, and glue one to each corner at the top of the table or chair. This will prevent those little marks or gouges in the wall.

Mrs. R. Kutz

DEAR HELOISE:

Thin flat nail files were always getting lost in my dressing table drawer.

Now I tie a bright-colored ribbon on each, and they are easily found.

TOMMY HULL'S ADVENTURES

By ERIC SISMEY

Battle Lake Revisited (Islander, March 6, 1961) brought word from Victoria from my old side-kick, Charles Hinkins, of the 1912 Strathcona Park survey who went his own way after we walked out from Upper Campbell Lake at the start of the rainy season.

A Fish was Our Pilot (Islander, April 22, 1962) telling of the fish-like animal that escorted ships through French Pass, New Zealand, brought letters from both Nelson and Wellington, New Zealand, recalling days when they too had sailed through the Pass and had seen Pelorus Jack from the decks of Union steamers, Pateena or Penguin.

Fishing Family (Islander, November 11, 1962) brought tidings from George Rust of Swansea, Tasmania, where as little boys we had played on the beach together.

Proud Ships (Islander, December 9, 1962) covered a brief history, in peace and war, of the Isle of Man Steam Packet Company, somehow reached the General Manager's desk at Douglas, Isle of Man. He liked it; he sent me a thank you note.

The stories of William McNeill, Captain of the Sa. Beaver, first steamship on the Pacific, his association with the Matha Hill totem pole at Sayward and other adventures brought more than one letter from Mrs. William E. McNeill of Ingelwood, California, whose husband is the great-grandson of the worthy Hudson's Bay Company captain. Other stories have brought letters from Greenwood to Zeballos, Skidegate to Sullivan Bay and from Allison Harbor to San Francisco.

Recently a request came to me from Mrs. R. Brown of Duncan, B.C. which was forwarded through the Colonist office. She asked me to write to Thomas J. Hull of Blackpool, England, who, after reading my story of Captain Joe Weeks (Islander, January 6, 1963) would like news of the captain he served on the sternwheel steamer Aberdeen, on Okanagan Lake, more than half a century ago. In her letter it was necessary for Mrs. Brown to tell me something about herself. She lost her father in infancy and her mother, Mrs. Ada Calvert, was obliged to take lodgers into their home in Thornton, near Blackpool, England. One of the lodgers was Thomas J. Hull. Mrs. Brown thinks Mr. Hull came to live with them around 1932, he stayed until he married in 1941.

The Robert Browns lived in England until they sailed for western Canada to arrive in Duncan, B.C., with their five boys in May, 1954.

After arriving in British Columbia the Brown family had many adventures and in June, 1955, a year after their arrival in British Columbia Winifred Brown wrote this:

Oh! Why did I leave the country I love?
Oh! Did I roam far and wide?
What were my dreams?
And what did I hope

Winifred Brown, looking back over 30 years, remembers Mr. Hull as a quiet man, a dedicated gardener, an easy talker. She likens him to Oliver Wendall Holmes' Professor at the Breakfast Table. Tommy as she chooses to call him never talked until prompted. Then he would tell of the Roaring Forties when he was in the rigging fighting wet canvas off Cape Horn. Perhaps it was Cape Town and Table Bay, sometimes the Argentine. Another question would start him to describe harvest on the Canadian prairies, steamboating on Okanagan Lake or railway construction camps.

On winter evenings, in front of a cosy fire, wher the westerlies roared through St. George's Channel, over the Mersey and Blackpool Tommy Hull's adventures thrilled the other lodgers. Most of them, except for a turn in the trenches during the First World War, had never been far from Blackpool and perhaps the Isle of Man was the limit of their travels.

Thomas John Hull was born in London, almost in the shadow of Westminster Hall on Feb. 11, 1890, the day his father was buried. Tom was one of a family of four boys and two girls. His eldest brother, Fred, served in the Grenadier Guards, in the Sudan, under Lord Kitchener; Harry, in the Royal Navy, went ashore with 4.7 guns from the HMS Terrible in the Boer war; Albert joined the Lancers in 1914 and Tom during his three years in France with the Royal Field Artillery was banged about a bit, but more of this later.

After the usual English schooling of that day, 14-year-old Thomas Hull was apprenticed to the head gardener of a large Worcestershire estate, and while he found the work interesting, books of adventure stirred his imagination, aroused a desire to travel until, at 16, he was off to Canada where family friends farmed in Ontario. After trying for nursery work without result he worked on farms for the next two or three years for $100 a year plus room and the tummy satisfying board that only farm wives can provide.

After moving from the farm to London, Ontario, Tom Hull looked for nursery work again only to find his English recommendations were just so much paper. Then falling in with two companions, known only as Scotty and Red, the three set out for the harvest fields. This was the start of Tom Hull's adventures. Later at Winnipeg the three, Tom, Scotty and Red, found jobs with a CPR extra gang at Morley, Alberta, where the crew — 10 nationalities — was repairing track, juggling rails and ties from Morley through the gap to Canmore.

In the outfit cars, after work, Tom listened to many tall stories among them how to travel from place to place without paying the fare. An Australian claimed that this was his usual mode of seeing the country and the outcome was a challenge that he would reach Vancouver first and would meet them, Tom and Scotty, at 9 a.m. on a certain day in front of the downtown post office.

"Scottie and I," Tom recalls, "began our cross country journey on a locomotive tender where we worked our way passing coal as far as Lake Louise. From there, after bribery with a five dollar bill we rode the cars as far as Golden.

"At Golden we waited beside a water tank for a freight and spotting a car with an open door we clambered aboard only to find after the brakeman slammed the door that it was a refrigerator.

"Luckily the ice was nearly gone and luckily too the train had not gone very far before a hot box brought it to a stop and a brakeman hearing our banging and yelling opened the door to find a Scot and an Englishman nearly frozen stiff. We were lucky again for the train crew allowed us to thaw in the caboose, they gave us hot tea. Then we rode successively to Three Valleys, Sicamous and Kamloops.

"On our next freight which slowed down at Ashcroft we were spotted by the police, but we gave them the slip and threw our bedrolls on an Al. Barnes circus wagon which was unloading for a one-day stop. Pretty soon the foreman came along to ask who in hell we were. After an explanation he let us work for our board and after the big top was up I was told to take care of hoop-la stand. We stayed to take the tent down and to ride as far as Lytton, then it was the rods to Vancouver.

"Scotty and I arrived first, the Australian was 10 days late, the lost time had been spent in the Kamloops jail.

"That hobo journey was enough, more than enough for me, right then I decided that the pleasures of beating one's way were exaggerated and in the future if I did not have the money to ride the cars I would wait until I had.

"After a few days in Vancouver I went to Vernon then back to the Coast where I worked at various jobs in logging camps, bridge building and on the new electric railway to New Westminster, but not liking the rain at the coast, I went to the Fraser River canyon where I worked for a couple of weeks for the Canadian Northern Railway. Soon I was in Vernon again and down to Kelowna where I found a job as bull-cook in the trestle bridge camp over Canyon Creek high in the hills above the town. I never stopped wondering how that spidery pile of match sticks could support a train, but it did and one occassion I rode the cars over it," he recalls.

"The camp closed after the bridge was done. I went back to Vernon where I found a job with the White Valley Irrigation Company. At Vernon I became acquainted with the crew of the sternwheeler Aberdeen, that was in 1912 and before long I was hired as a deckhand. I enjoyed the work, in fact it was one of the best jobs I ever had. Sternwheel days were busy days, there was mountains of freight to move, express, mail and passengers to the booming lakeside towns right down to Penticton.

"In winter when the work slacked off a bit I was sometimes on the newer sternwheeler Okanagan, sometimes on the tug Castlegar.

"Late that year I was laid low with typhoid fever, after recovery I was back on the Aberdeen, it was there that I met Capt. J. B. Weeks. The captain was a grand man who knew his job thoroughly; he treated his crew well. I remember him particularly, he was kind enough to let me keep my little black dog Nigger on the ship."

A few days ago this writer asked Capt. Joe about this incident. He did not remember Tom Hull but he did remember the little black dog.

Mr. Hull also mentioned fishing, he wrote: "I remember going out one day from the landing (Okanagan) and in less then 20 minutes I had three beautiful trout, — two pounds, seven pounds and 11 pounds and what speckled beauties they were! I gave the largest to the Vernon hospital. "I wonder," he continued, "if there are still plenty of fish in the lake?" This is the sort of fishing one brags about now and his catch was more than he could have taken in a week in 1965.

Elsewhere in his letter I read: "I have several pictures of Okanagan beside me now but the place does not seem to have the same peace the tranquility of those long-ago days. It seems full of motels, hotels and all that sort of thing spread along the shores of the lake."

How right he is! The days he writes about were the palmy days of Okanagan. Orchards were being planted, the railway built and people were coming to take up land where fruit trees would grow. Those were the days of horse and buggy, of

During the early summer of 1914 when the red clouds of war appeared on the horizon Tom Hull tried to get into the service. Nobody seemed too concerned, the B.C. Horse at Vernon was taking no recruits and at Victoria the HMCS Rainbow had her full compliment. The only thing left, Tom Hull decided, was to get to England, a difficult thing without money for the fare.

While still at Victoria looking for transportation to the Old Country he met three men one day just paid off from a coastal schooner who were looking for another ship. Finding a boarding master they were sent to Esquimalt where they saw a full-rigged ship, the Imberhorn, out in the stream. Soon they were signed on, Hull as a ordinary seaman by Capt. Erickson, a Finn, who in later years became world famous as owner of the Grain Fleet of sailing ships between Australia and European ports. Several grain race voyages became the subject of books written by Capt. Alan Villiers among them Grain Race, Falmouth for Orders and By Way of Cape Horn. These books, fascinatingly interesting, may be found in any library.

"After we were aboard," Tom wrote, "we learned that the ship was bound for Cape Town with lumber. When I looked through the maze of cordage to the "trucks" I was really scared until one of the ABs told me that ordinary seamen were not required to work aloft. This I soon learned was as far from the truth as anyone could get. But, while in port bending sail I soon lost my fear of height and by the time the tug dropped our ship off Cape Flattery on Aug. 4, 1914, the day Britain declared war on Germany, I was enjoying the work aloft.

"Most of the crew were Finns, among the others was an Australian, a Russian, an ex-naval officer under a cloud, and a Hungarian and three Scots. I was the only Englishman, I was assigned to the port watch."

Tom wrote: "I loved being at the wheel even when it was so rough one had to be lashed to it. The wheel, as you know, is not quite the same as on steamships all tucked away under cover. It is right outside, on the poop deck, exposed to all the elements. But how easy she was to steer, how responsive, how gloriously beautiful it was to see your ship, every sail drawing, rising and falling with easy grace to the swell.

"Through the Trades I often climbed to the fore royal yard away from the tobacco-filled smoky fo'c's'le to where I could enjoy the quiet, where I could see white horses stretching to the horizon; where the only sound was the music of wind through the shrouds. Below me the sails all bellied tight and all around the sea, nothing but the sea, a sea bluer than the sky.

"Rounding the Horn was an experience miserably harsh at the time, but a treasured memory now. Our skipper kept well south to avoid the dangerous Diego Ramirez Islands which have been the cause of many a tall Cape Horner to go missing. For many days we ran before the wind in the low 50s with scant canvas. Even so, the watch was aloft much of the time. At the wheel the Graybeards chased us until I sometimes wondered when we would be pooped but good ship she was rose to every one. The f'c's'le was awash, our clothes never dry, there were no regular or proper meals, just scalding coffee sucked through sugar and hard tack. Then one day the sun came out and gentler westerlys carried us to Cape Town.

"Only after we sailed into Table Bay around Christmas time did we learn that we had sailed through a war zone where a German fleet ranging the South Pacific had defeated the British off Coronel on the coast of Chile on Nov. 1, 1914. Two British ships, HMS Good Hope and HMS Monmouth were sunk with all hands, two other ships escaped in the darkness. The German triumph did not last long for a month later, Dec. 4, 1914, the German fleet, four ships, was sent to the bottom at the Battle of the Falkland Islands.

"We were seven weeks unloading at Cape Town and since I was unable to join either British or South African services I determined to enjoy South Africa, which being south of the Line was at mid-summer. Cape Town cuddled between Table Mountain and Table Bay was strange and unbelievably beautiful. The clean white buildings and houses surrounded with exotic flowers and shrubs were entirely unfamiliar, they excited me. And the parks and public gardens were a never ending delight. Sometimes, at early morning Table Mountain was topped with a white mist which looked like a tablecloth but by mid morning the sun had burnt the cloud away. On Sundays, the Scots and I spent the whole day ashore, there were tram car rides and one we particularly enjoyed was to Camp's Bay.

Around us were other sailing ships filling the sky with a tangle of masts and spars. At the wharfs ships of the Union Castle trading from the Cape to the Old Country, Shaw-Saville to Australasia, British India ships to the east coast, French and German passenger ships and freighters from all the world kept coming and going to and from this cross roads of the world.

A CHURCH and a CABIN

Story and Pictures By BERT BINNY

Quite some years ago I read a short story by a certain Mr. Oliver Onions who enjoyed the reputation of then being "one of the most talented writers on uncanny themes . . ."

This particular tale set forth some remarkable happenings in an old, disused church or, if preferred, what remained of it, ". . . a wrecked and ivied hummock in the middle of a field," with broken buttresses, a ragged rent in the roof where once had been a belfry, a mountain ash in the chancel and butterflies playing in and out of the fissures in the walls: a church "not more than 15 strides long," filled with nettles, brambles, wild roses and "a greenish, semi-darkness."

The story had a certain fascination to it: the sort of thing that is never completely forgotten.

Nevertheless, I hardly expected that it would be brought back to my mind as forcibly or, indeed, after as lengthy an interval, as it was not so very long ago.

I came across a disused church which seemed to have much in common with that described by Mr. Onions. Better, perhaps, it could be regarded as a Canadian counterpart inasmuch as it was built of wood where Mr. Onion's English church was built of stone. The weeds and trees and bushes around it were different, too, but, in their essential loveliness, they were the same and this is what matters.

It had no tombstones, "lying and leaning at all angles," to certify that the derelict building, like Moses when he turned aside to see the burning bush, was standing on holy ground.

Mr. Onion's church was at a place, maybe quite fictitious called Old Harkness Bottom; depopulated, deserted and deteriorated. The other, however, is located in the midst of a prospering and growing community, Prospect Lake. It stands just off Meadowbrook Road in a small clearing.

I did not judge it to be very old like the Saxon and Norman sanctuaries dotted around the English countryside. But it had an air, if not of antiquity, at least of quiet dignity about it. If, at one time or any time, it had been, let us say, a revivalist centre and echoed to the sound of what musicologists are wont to term "shout songs," I felt that the sweet chariot would have swung as low here as any place. Its very solitude and the complete absence of a single letter to provide it with a name or a past accorded it greater charm and reverence.

Prospect Lake's abandoned church . . .

Perhaps this namelessness and attendant mystery — this exceptional opportunity for high flights of imagination quite unfettered by facts — was its largest attraction. It remains providentially dissociated with that layer of all ghosts, dispatcher of all myth and mystery and archemy of fancy, the guided tour.

It possessed considerably greater fascination than, for example, the Butter Church on Comiaken Hill, near Duncan, simply because the latter has a definite even if rather exceptional niche in local history.

I should, of course, have left it all at that, but I didn't. I started making enquiries which, when answered, would rob the little church of its individuality, classify it, denominate it and put it in competition with others.

But this, apparently was not to be. Of the two early recommended authorities, one drifted from matters ecclesiastical into the realm of local politics with especial reference to the condition of Prospect Lake water. The second emphasized that it was a long, long time since he sojourned by the lake; too long for him to retain any definite memories

Everybody knew of somebody else who had all the facts. The list of contacts lengthened like the evenings in summer.

True enough, random bits of information appeared, drifting like lazy clouds in an unmapped heaven. These were such as that the church was given to the Roman Catholic faith by a Mrs. Mulligan, now departed these last 16 years or so; that it was only used on two or three occasions; that it lacked light and water.

In truth it was as if there existed a conspiracy of silence. Physically the door of the little church is barred shut. Spiritually it would seem to be barred shut also in that fact may not enter nor may fancy flee. Any air of mystery that it might have had was intensified rather than cleared away.

However, one reliable authority did say that the church was abandoned about 15 years ago mainly because it was too small. It would accommodate only 15 to 20 of a congregation. Thus it would seem that the congregation grew out of the little church though, in the future, it may grow back into it again. In other words, it could increase to the point where enlarging the little church would become worthwhile and, indeed, necessary.

But, meanwhile, its very stature gives it a certain prominence. It ranks with such as the disused church at Upleatham in Yorkshire, the Old St. Andrew's, which accommodates 12, or the regularly used church at Culbone in Somerset which measures 35 feet by 12 feet.

Of course it is a cathedral compared with the Union Church at Wiscasset, Maine (7 feet by 4½ feet), or the Church of Les Vaubelets on Guernsey, Channel Island, which offers space for one priest and a congregation of two.

But, meanwhile, it is our own; part of our Western Canadian scene and a quaint, distinctive part at that.

Maybe, if it is altered or enlarged, the general loss will outweigh the specific gain? It does no harm sometimes to remember our smaller beginnings.

If I had a lonesome, little church in the wildwood suddenly to rouse the memory of a story, it would be an odd coincidence indeed that, within a very few days, I should run across another reminder: this time of a song.

Yet it happened.

Back in 1871 one of the most prolific and successful of North American songwriters produced no fewer than four smash hits. W. (for William) S. (for Shakespeare) Hays is credited copies and the composition of a dozen hits in half that number of years.

One of these — and one of the 1871 quartet — was The Little Old Cabin in the Lane. Perhaps the Little, Old Cabin hasn't survived as strongly as, for instance, Genevieve, We Parted by the Riverside or Susan Jane, but it was a smasheroo in its day.

It wasn't so very long ago when I came across the real thing: a little, old cabin in a lane.

Actually, this one is located at the junction of two logging roads, both of which leave Durrance Road in a southeasterly direction just south of the lake itself. Viewed from the exterior the cabin is quite romantic but a single glimpse of the interior, piled high with assorted rubbish including a double mattress, would stifle the most ardent muse and snuff out the most poetic inspiration.

Since Aug. 24, when I first encountered the log cabin, I have wondered about it and, as already noted, the church at Prospect Lake.

As regards the former, I have entertained idle thoughts about Abraham Lincoln, reputed to have been born in one such bucolic residence, and, maybe, Sam Foss. The log house is ideally situated for sitting at the side of the road and being a friend to man.

But I know nothing factual or irrefutable about it. Maybe Red Riding Hood's grandmother lived there or Hansel and Gretel or even the Seven Dwarfs.

I don't know and I'm not going to enquire either.

Reviewed by E. D. WARD-HARRIS

Harold Nicolson was in many ways unique. A man of many talents, he went in all directions at once, never concentrating his efforts, never finishing anything. His enquiring mind and restless energy were both his strength and his undoing.

The fact that he never attained the heights and will never be more than a footnote in history is of scant importance. As with Pepys and Evelyn, we are not concerned with the man himself but with what he saw, heard and recorded in his diary.

In the case of Pepys and Evelyn one gets the impression that they knew they were recording the scene for posterity, whereas Nicolson, with a marked sense of his own importance, was apt to confide to his diary his personal hopes and frustrations.

With an introspective person such as he was this can become very tiresome, but one's annoyance is tempered by the constant intrusion of people and events more interesting and more important than himself.

Nicolson — the Hon. Sir Harold Nicolson, KCVO, CMG — was the son of an ambassador and was himself a diplomat. He resigned from the diplomatic service at the end of 1929 to join the editorial staff of one of Lord Beaverbrook's papers.

From that moment, until Oct. 1964, he kept a daily diary. Extracts from this diary, plus extracts from letters to and from his wife (V. Sackville-West, the poet and novelist) are to be published in three volumes, of which the volume under review is the first.

This first volume covers the period 1930 to the outbreak of war in 1939. And here I must emphasize that this is not just another rehash of the events of those momentous days. It covers the same ground but is different because of the sort of person the diarist was.

Nicolson, who cut short a promising diplomatic career, also turned his back on journalism when the plums were within his grasp. He travelled, he wrote books and he reviewed books. And he ventured into politics.

The diary, and particularly the letters, reflect the inner turmoil of a vain, somewhat arrogant but brilliant man searching for a personal goal. This introspective period largely takes up the first 226 pages of the volume. It is interesting but if the book ended there it wouldn't be worth buying.

Fortunately, in November, 1935, Nicolson was elected to parliament and from that moment the great figures and momentous events of the day take charge and the book becomes gloriously alive.

It would be difficult to find anyone better equipped than Nicolson to act as a day-to-day guide to those troubled times. He knew everyone worth knowing in political, diplomatic, social and artistic circles and was indefatigable in maintaining his contacts. And he only dealt with people at the top.

HAROLD NICOLSON: Diaries and Letters, 1930-1939, edited by Nigel Nicolson; Collins; 448 pages; $5.50.

When he lunched his companions would be an editor and perhaps Anthony Eden and Aldous Huxley; when he dined it would be with Churchill or Beaverbrook or a duchess or the King and Queen. When he went to the theatre it was usually in the company of Noel Coward.

Not only did he go everywhere and know everybody, he also had the ability to extract the drama and comedy from any given situation and to record it succinctly and when the moment was hot. The perfect diarist, in fact.

The book is a veritable Who's Who. Apart from those already referred to above we meet in its pages T. S. Eliot, Gary Cooper, Oswald Moseley, James Joyce, Lloyd George, Leslie Howard, Bernard Shaw, H. G. Wells, Walter Lippmann, G. B. Stern, the Lindberghs, Neville Chamberlain, the Duke and Duchess of Windsor, Lady Astor, Charlie Chaplin, and hundreds of other household names.

Nicolson not only knew these people, he was on intimate terms with most of them. And he takes us with him when he meets them. These excursions are always interesting and often startling.

We dine with the Windsors at Somerset Maugham's Riviera villa and hear the Duke refer to his wife as Her Royal Highness; we visit the Russian embassy when Maisky, the Soviet ambassador talks so much he forgets to offer his guests any refreshments from the laden tables and they depart hungry and thirsty.

We share an hilarious lunch with King Carol of Romania and we get enjoyably involved with the backbiting between London's society hostesses. But these and a thousand other incidents are merely the icing on the cake. Politics, the years of appeasement and the drift to war form the really satisfying portions of the book.

Nicolson takes us to the House of Commons, in the Chamber itself, into the committee and smoking rooms. We listen in as the pathetic Ramsay MacDonald loses his mental powers, as Stanley Baldwin uses the drama of the abdication to culminate his career, and to old Lloyd George exerting his still magical powers of persuasion.

Nicolson then takes us to his clubs and to the homes of his friends where we listen as Churchill and his group (to which Nicolson belonged) plots the overthrow of Neville Chamberlain and the weak and wicked men who led Britain to the disgrace of Munich.

This is terrific stuff. We are swept along with events, conscious of tensions born of political infighting, angered by the waffling Eden, sympathetic to Churchill who was impatient to get to grips with his destiny.

This behind-the-scenes story may have been told in part before, but it has never been told so well, or so ably, or so dramatically.

The last half of the book is so enthralling that one can forgive the early material. It is to be hoped that Nicolson's son, Nigel, who is editing his father's diaries, will in future volumes concentrate on people and things of general importance and soft-pedal family matters.

Rain Forest in Danger

Private Industry May Get Go-Ahead to Develop 69,000 Acres of Olympic National Park

THE OLYMPIC RAIN FOREST, by Ruth Kirk, with photographs by Jolsel Namkung; University of Washington Press with co-operation of Olympic Natural History Association; 96 pages; $6.95.

Reviewed by ALEC MERRIMAN
Colonist Outdoors Editor

The Olympic Rain Forest* is truly a magnificent book and one that would make a perfect Christmas present.

Its setting is the Olympic National Park, reached from Port Angeles just across the water from Victoria, but its outstanding photographs could be duplicated on Vancouver Island, as close to Victoria as Goldstream.

The book makes the claim that the world's only coniferous rain forest is in Washington State, between the rugged Olympic Mountains and the Pacific Ocean.

Vancouver Islanders will dispute that point because we have rain forests here, although they may not be on such a grand scale, so easily accessible, or so highly developed as a tourist attraction.

But, that dispute only makes this book all the more interesting. This book features the same wonders of nature we see here, such as nurse logs, ferns, elk bands, mosses and lichens.

Read this book and it will make you want to visit the Olympic rain forest . . . and it will also help you appreciate our forests.

It contains maps, 102 photographs, 15 in color and enlightening descriptive writing by Ruth Kirk, wife of the Olympic National Park's chief naturalist, who hiked hundreds of miles of trails through the rain forest. It is a vivid word picture and expedition through one of the last unspoiled wonders of the United States.

In this forest an annual rainfall as high as 160 inches and year-round mild temperatures combine to produce lush green vegetation equal in density to that of the tropics, although the presence of Sitka spruce, western hemlock, Douglas fir, western red cedar, and red alder give it a strikingly different character.

For the traveller, The Olympic Rain Forest contains brief, up-to-date descriptions of roads, trails, camping facilities, and the plant and animal life abounding in the forest.

British Columbia is not the only place that has to fight to keep its wilderness areas free of encroachment.

There is the same problem in the Olympic National Park where the recent Overly report recommends opening up of some 69,000 acres of the park to private industry. Senate hearings will determine the forest's fate.

Whatever the outcome of these hearings, this book captures for all time the primitive grandeur of a unique virgin wilderness area. It has been welcomed by conservationists, naturalists and all those who share deep reverence for the rain forest's special splendor.

NEALE LIVED IN DREAM WORLD BUT NOBODY WORKED HARDER

This autobiography of a man who deliberately marooned himself on a tiny island in a small atoll in one of the most remote areas of the South Pacific is a fascinating—and incredible—adventure story.

AN ISLAND TO ONESELF, by Tom Neale; Collins; 225 pages; $6.

Many people, I suppose, dream of living alone on a desert island in a tropical paradise. But the years slip by, and, soon, it is too late even to dream any more.

For Tom Neale, too, the years slipped by, but with this remarkable man it was never too late. His opportunity came when he was 50 years of age — and he seized it avidly.

Packing everything he would need, he was dropped off on Anchorage Island in the Suvarov Atoll by an inter-island freighter.

For nearly two years trials and tribulations beset Neale at intervals, but in between it was pure paradise for this unusual man — a hermit in the truest sense of the word. And his accomplishments were incredible. Although living in his own dream world, probably no man in the world worked any harder than Neale did. Moving by hand topsoil to make a garden; killing the wild pigs that threatened this garden; building a boat; piling stone on stone to make a pier; and always fishing for food.

How he returned to his own island, stockpiled coconuts, and lay down in his bed to await death — or rescue — is a genuine saga in its own right.

But help did come and it was back to semi-civilization at Rarotonga for Tom Neale, until the doctor and time healed his back.

During convalescence, Neale could scarcely wait to return to his magic isle. But fate — and authority — ruled otherwise. The administrator of the islands, having seen his friend return from imminent danger once, did everything in his power to prevent Neale returning. And his authority was such that no boat would move the adventurer back.

For six years, Neale suffered away from his atoll, and it began to look as if he would never see his neat home again on Anchorage.

Despite the official ruling that he was not to return, Neale persisted, and finally made it in 1960.

This started another adventure that ended late in 1963, when, satisfied that he made his point that he could live on a desert island, the author again went back to Roro.

Two factors ended his idyll. He was getting old, past 60. And native pearl divers began to work the lagoon, and indicated they would continue to do so at intervals. Neale might have continued on for some years — his health was still excellent and his wiry physique unbelieveable in a man of his age — but his solitude was gone, and the future did not look bright without it.

Neale was born in New Zealand and joined the navy as a youth. After four years, he began years of wandering through the South Pacific Islands, making his living clearing brush, fishing and preparing copra. In 1943 he became a storekeeper in the Cook Islands, a job which became his springboard to Anchorage. — F.C.B.

Background Information for World Travellers

Reviews by
ROGER SPURLING

SOUTH PACIFIC A TO Z, by Robert S. Kane; Doubleday; 320 pages; $5.95.

AIR TRAVEL BARGAINS, by Jim Woodman; Sanson Book Co.; 160 pages; $2.25.

A good travel book should cover the rather broad areas lying between the National Geographic and syrupy brochures put out by the commercial interests in travel for somewhere between these divergent points of view lies the truth.

South Pacific A to Z bridges this gap rather successfully. It is one of a series of Robert Kane's A to Z books encompassing the vast area of the South Pacific.

Although Mr. Kane slants his book toward the American reader, going into detail on customs and currency regulations specifically for the United States tourist, his book contains much meat for the traveller of any nation.

He approaches his subject in a logical workmanlike manner, first introducing the reader to the general preparations and precautions to be considered in travelling this region, along with a lively commentary on local customs, currency and climate and the seasonal variations to be encountered.

He proceeds to enlarge upon his subject country by country, giving brief historical sketches in each instance and develops from the general to the particular in outlining different local trips available and the virtues and shortcomings of local hostelries, excursions and merchandise for sale.

South Pacific A to Z is a palatable serving of history, good travelling commonsense and up-to-date local information most acceptable and useful to the planned group traveller, the loner with a planned itinerary or the rugged individualist who likes to improvise as he goes along. When travelling a good dose of background information is always to be recommended.

Air Travel Bargains treats the great travel areas of the world — the Caribbean, Europe, South America, South Pacific — on an individual basis, showing rates on local and international flights and in each instance giving sources to write to for further information. We do indeed live in a shrinking world and the fantastic variety of airline schedules available offer unlimited horizons to the man with itchy feet. Human Values Ahead of Legal Terms
Louis Nizer's Courtroom Strategy

Reviewed by CECIL CLARK

In whatever arena he chooses we like to see a pro. in action; particularly one who is a champion. It is in the U.S. legal scene that Louis Nizer is a champion, where his singular pinch-hitting ability has made his name almost a household word.

THE JURY RETURNS, by Louis Nizer; Doubleday; 438 pages; $7.95.

Not only does Mr. Nizer shine as an advocate, but also as a writer; and the fact that what he has to say is always readable adds stature to this talent. With singular facility he spreads out the courtroom action in human values rather than legal terms.

Of course, being a lawyer he likes room to operate, to cite all the angles. For this reason, The Jury Returns deals only with four cases. But in each he brings to life in gripping style the intricate pattern of each legal battle.

His first story opens in a welter of gunfire and falling bodies that results in Negro Paul Crump being headed for the electric chair. Then, in a sociological study almost without parallel, Mr. Nizer shows how Crump in his death chamber pause, achieves a nobility of character that, among other things, brought Nizer to his aid. In curious fashion, the story rather reminded me of Arnold Zwig's 40-year-old classic The Case of Sgt. Grischa.

In Mr. Nizer's second story, Divorce, he uses a real life example to point up the inequalities in modern divorce procedure; all the more tangled in the U.S. where 50 states have as many and varying grounds, with the Mexican decree thrown in for added complication. As the problem is currently under survey in this country, what Mr. Nizer has to say is of timely interest.

Fruehauf, third in the package tells of the court battle that ensued when the head of the giant trailer corporation borrowed, perhaps unwisely, $200,000 from Dave Beck of the Teamster's Union and thus left himself open to prosecution under a provision of the Taft-Hartley Act.

Last, and perhaps the most interesting of the foursome, is the shocking story of what happened to John Henry Faulk. John, a Texan with triple degrees from his home state university (where he was ultimately on the faculty) had enough patriotic zeal to inveigle himself into the U.S. army at the age of 16. The fact that he was at the same time blind in one eye, made the challenge a little stiffer!

After the war he took up acting, and in the field of television was well on the way to making half a million a year when, without warning, came disaster. Suddenly innuendo and rumor made him a pariah, and he found the doors of every theatrical agency closed against him. Big advertising agencies turned thumbs down on him, and once-friendly executives of the Columbia Broadcasting System hastened to disown him.

All this stemmed from a process called the blacklist, a surreptitious form of anonymous denunciation borne of the American hysteria about communism which, in turn, can prove as evil as communism itself. A mania so evil and unjust that, as the record shows, more than one blacklisted performer committed suicide!

It was finally after six and a half years of theatrical unemployment, when Faulk was dead broke, that Nizer heard of his plight, took up his case and fought it to a successful conclusion through U.S. courts. The result was damages for Faulk that ran to something like $3,500,000.

Though Mr. Nizer with pardonable pride sums up with the thought that the American theory of democracy finally overcame the forces of evil, the alien reader is apt to conclude that only in America (or perhaps behind the Iron Curtain) could such a diabolical train of event ever get started. Which of course is merely by the way, and doesn't detract one's admiration for Mr. Nizer's style and performance, or the quality of his outlook.

He has talent too as a phrasemaker, this Mr. Nizer, as for instance, when he remarks: "A divorce is not the death of a marriage; it is a death certificate for a marriage already dead. The courts merely provide a decent burial."

Wise also is he in the suggestion: "Putting a witness on the stand is like launching a boat; one cannot be sure what future storms will take him off course."

As always of course with the U.S. legal scene the Canadian is occasionally puzzled with the slow motion procedure; something that must add billions to the national cost. You sense at times that judges, like One Eyed Riley have one eye on the ballot box and the other on the Appeal Court. There is an old newspaper axiom that nothing in the scope of human affairs (except perhaps a world war) is worth more than seven days on the front page; and in the same fashion I would suggest no U.S. litigation merits a witness being on the stand 11 days, nor should it take 11 weeks to pick a jury.

Road Building Social History Of Our Nation

Reviewed by E. D. WARD-HARRIS

In Europe and England the traditional way to construct a highway system was to let the Romans do it. First, Caesar's legions trampled the populace and sent the walking wounded to Rome as lion food. Then, with all opposition eaten and no one left to bully, garrison troops used up their energies building roads, walls, baths, a new race, and ill-will.

THE STORY OF CANADIAN ROADS, by Edwin C. Guillet; University of Toronto Press; 246 pages; $8.50.

The elaborate network of roads proved handy to the remaining natives and cost them nothing — except most of their relatives.

Incidentally, Mussolini followed the old Roman tradition in Libya, Tripolitania and Ethiopia: decimation of populations and instant roads.

Fortunately, Canada was never in a position to take advantage of this package deal. But it meant that if Canadians wanted to go someplace they had to make their own arrangements.

Samuel Champlain accepted the challenge in 1606 and cleared a woodland trail in Arcadia, and ever since Canadians have been at it in one fashion or another.

The building of roads and bridges across this vast country is part of the social history of our nation, for all progress depended on it, as indeed it still does.

Edwin C. Guillet has traced the story back to the beginning and this handsome, well illustrated book is the result. Inevitably, the text is a synopsis of Canadian history and as such gives the book a wider appeal than a specialized work would normally have.

Face Saving Formula for Tolerable Peace

TOWARD PEACE IN INDO-CHINA, By Lord Avon (Anthony Eden); Thomas Allen and Sons; 70 pages; $3.75 (paperback $2).

More and more responsible statesmen are now agreed that the reconvening of the Geneva Conference is the obvious starting point to find a lasting solution to the Viet Nam dilemma.

The Geneva Conference was convened in 1954 after eight years of war between Vietnamese Communists and France. One of its joint chairmen was Anthony Eden (the other was Russia's Molotov).

In this slim book — almost a pamphlet — Eden reviews the past, discusses the present and offers a face-saving formula for "a tolerable peace."

This elder statesman's reasoned and reasonable views deserve to be listened to with respect. — E.D.W.-H.

HUBERT BANCROFT'S HISTORY FACTORY

When the celebrated California historian Hubert Howe Bancroft came to Victoria in 1878 he took a suite of rooms in the Driard House, stocked it with liquor, and invited old-timers to visit him, which they did.

Bancroft was writing a history of the Pacific Northwest, and, to him, the stories of Victoria's oldtimers were most important, and so they were and are to us today.

By JAMES K. NESBITT

As they sat about, Bancroft plied them with liquor, so to speak, so that their tongues, should become loosened. Some, I gather from reading Bancroft's history, took more than others. In any event, he mentions liquor in connection with practically every visitor he had at the Driard.

He and his wife had a whirlwind visit of about a month. When not interviewing oldtimers at the Driard, dispensing his hospitality, he was being entertained by all the best people, observing an election, taking part in the Queen's birthday celebrations and generally having a fine time.

He arrived here in May of 1878 from San Francisco in the steamer City of Panama, Capt. William Seabury, after which he wrote "five days and nights of tempestuous buffeting, though without special discomfort — we found a good hotel, the Driard House, and a gentlemanly host, Louis Redon — the day was Sunday, and though old ocean yet billowed through our brain and lifted our feet at every step, or perhaps because we were thus dogged by Neptune even after treading land, we decided to attend church."

Dr. Walter Sage wrote of this historian: "Hubert Howe Bancroft (1832-1918) was a Californian of the Californians. In no other state of the union and probably in no other place in the world could a successful bookseller have become the proprietor, manager and inspiration of a 'history factory' which produced volumes on the history and anthropology of the Pacific slope.

"In the case of British Columbia, if Bancroft had not visited Victoria, obtained Sir James Douglas' private papers and the manuscript histories and narrative of A. C. Anderson, John Tod and many others, valuable material concerning not only the fur trade and the colonial period (1849-1871) but even the early days of our province would have been lost.

("One charge often leveled at Bancroft is that he purloined manuscripts, by borrowing them from their authors and refusing to return them. Bancroft's historical methods were, to say the least, unconventional and his works were by no means all his own compositions. He never claimed they were. His merchandising tactics were also open to criticism. He was, none the less, a great figure in the historiography of the Pacific slope and his reputation will, in all probability, increase rather than diminish.")

Dr. J. S. Helmcken, son-in-law of Sir James Douglas, who died two years previous to Bancroft's visit, must have been suspicious of Bancroft, for the latter wrote of the doctor: "Helmcken was a queer one: small in stature, but compactly built, with short black hair and beard, thickly sprinkled with gray, covering a round, hard head, with clear eyes of meaningless, measureless depth, nose rose-red, and the stump of a cigar always stuck between tobacco-stained teeth — this head and body placed on underpinning seemingly insecure, so as to give one the empression of a rolling, uncertain walk as well as manner, and, added to a most peculiar speech larded with wise saws and loud laughter, could be likened only to a philosopher attempting to ape the fool.

"One day he came rushing into our parlors at the hotel in a state of great excitement, so much so that he forgot to remove either his hat or cigar stub, giving Mrs. Bancroft the impression that he was decidedly drunk, and demanded to be shown the papers delivered to me by Lady Douglas.

"They had no business to let them out of their hands," he exclaimed. "Where are they?' I showed them to him, explained their value and application to history, and assured him they would be speedily copied and returned. Smiles then slowly wreathed the red face; the eyes danced, the hat came off, and loud laughter attended the little man's abrupt disappearance."

Lady Douglas, apparently, was most gracious to Bancroft, receiving him in her big house in James Bay, and he wrote of her: "—Though a half-breed, she was quite the lady. Her daughters were charming; it were next to impossible for the wife and daughters of Sir James to be other than ladies."

He followed with this comment: "Scarcely so much could truthfully be said of the sons of some other fur magnates, who, as a rule, were both idiotic and intemperate. Young Douglas, though kind and polite in the extreme, did not impress me as possessing extraordinary intelligence or energy. So in the family of Chief Factor John Work; the Indian wife, in body and mind, was strong and elastic as steel, and while the daughters were virtuous and amiable, the sons were less admirable."

Bancroft found some difficulty here in taking the time of prominent people because of an election. He wrote: "The province was in the agonies of a general election — unfortunately the old Hudson's Bay Company men were, many of them, politicians. Composed to a great extent of tough, shrewd Scotsmen, the fur company's ancient servants were now the wealthy aristocrats; and although they loved their country well and were glad to give me every item respecting their adventures, they loved office also, and would by no means neglect self-interest.

"A. C. Elliott was affable, but exceedingly occupied in the endeavor to rise again upon his political legs."

(As it turned out, Elliott was defeated, as noted in The Colonist: "Mr. Elliott, being loudly called for, was received with applause. He said that although he had been defeated he had not the least hard feeling against anyone of the electors who had voted against him.

("The crowd then left the police barracks, where the voting had taken place, and proceeded to Government Street, where a non-elector with a stentorian voice called for three groans for The Colonist, which were given with interest added.

("A large number of friends of the newly elected members organized a torchlight procession, headed by Professor Haynes' band, and Councillor Williams' four-horse bus. The procession started from Government Street, and proceeded to the residences of Messrs. Beaven, Drummond, Wilson and Williams, whom they serenaded."

Dr. W. F. Tolmie was defeated in that election, and The Colonist mourned: "The defeat — we regard as one of the most unfortunate incidents of the election. A large property holder, a pioneer of nearly half a century, an educated gentleman of liberal views, a practical farmer and an experienced legislator with an unblemished record shelved. And for whom? For what?"

If The Colonist was distressed, even more so, likely was historian Bancroft who wrote of Tolmie: " . . . of medium height, but so stoutly built as to seem short, and a large bald head, broad face and features, florid complexion, and small blue eyes which, through their corners and apparently without seeing anything, took in all the world. He had been well educated in Europe, was clever, cunning, and withal, exceedingly Scotch; Tolmie knew much and could tell it; indeed he did tell much, but only what he pleased. Nevertheless, I found him one of my most profitable teachers in the doings of the past."

Bancroft again mentioned Tolmie in the paragraph on his son-in-law, Roderick Finlayson, who was mayor of Victoria at the time, and whom Bancroft called "a magnificent specimen of the old-school" Scotch gentleman — upon a fine figure was well set a fine head, slightly bald, and grayish-white hair curled in tight, short ringlets round and behind a most pleasant, benignant face. His beard was short and thick, in color brown and gray, well mixed.

"He tasted temperately of the champagne I placed before him, while Tolmie, who was totally abstinent for example's sake in the presence of his boys, prescribed himself liberal doses of brandy. The Rev. Mr. Good, I think, enjoyed the brandy and cigars which were freely placed at his command fully as much as he did construing elegant sentences."

Bancroft amusingly describes an encounter between two stalwart old pioneers: "Archibald McKinley—a really brave and estimable character — while younger than John Tod, he was not possessed of so unclouded a memory, or so facile a tongue. The whisky he drank was stronger than Mr. Tod's gin. He knew enough, but could not tell it. 'If it's statisticals ye want I'll give 'em to ye,' he would bring out every few minutes, 'but I'll have nothing to do with personalities.'

"When I hinted to him that history was made by persons and not by statistics he retorted 'well, I'll write something for yet.' He had much to say of Peter Skene Ogden, whose half-breed daughter he had married. He brought his wife to see us, and seemed very proud of her.

"He was really anxious to communicate his experiences, coming day after day to do so, but failing from sheer lack of tongue. He once interrupted Mr. Tod, disputing some date, and that old gentleman never forgave him. Never after that, when McKinlay was in the room, would Mr. Tod open his mouth, except to admit the gin and soda."

Of his hectic days in Victoria Bancroft wrote: "After a gentlemen's dinner at Sir Matthew's (Begbie), several visits from and to Lady Douglas, Mrs. Harris, Dr. and Mrs. Ash, and many other charming calls and parties — leaving Mr. Long to finish copying the Douglas papers — after a voyage to New Westminster, and after lending our assistance in celebrating the Queen's birthday, on the last day of May we crossed to Port Angeles, having completed one of the hardest months of recreation I ever experienced."

The Queen's birthday affair attended by Bancroft was brilliant, as noted in The Colonist: "The city population was swelled by a large influx from neighboring districts and from across the line. Government Street presented a most lively appearance, what with the great number of hacks travelling to and fro, the fluttering of bunting — the city has seldom, if ever, presented a scene of such festivity.

"At the Gorge, a spot created by Nature for all that is lovely and seductive, the scene was delightful. On the rippling waters, hundreds of tiny crafts flitted hither and thither, the oars shivering the silvery spray — the ball was most successful, and our visitors realized more fully than ever that although they live under the Stars and Stripes, and Victorians claim the Union Jack as their protective flag, still English and Americans are but 'one people.'"

Bancroft's son Philip, recalled his father: "It must be admitted that he was never a tactful man, and he never went out of his way to avoid making enemies. He was always a fighter, not an appeaser, and this did not tend to decrease the number of his enemies — so far as I know he was never sued for libel on account of any of his writings.

"I do not mean to imply that my father was never at fault, or that he never made an error. He never pretended to be a saint, or to be infallible; but he did honestly try to write true and correct history as he saw it, and he was perfectly willing to let the chips fall where they might."
